I send a sketch of a device I use in planting trees on "North View farm." It may be useful to your readers. I invented it last fall and used it in setting out pear and plum trees:

TREE PLANTER.

A A are holes to stake planter down; B B, hinges; d, latch. Place C around stake and stake down at A A. Turn end (C) back over stakes (A A). Dig the hole, place the tree in hole, turn latch, as dotted line indicates; get tree straight and fill in dirt.—J. G. Congdon, in Ohio Farmer.

Trees for a Young Orchard.

The most important point to observe when setting out a young orchard is to secure strong and healthy trees. Many fruitgrowers import diseases on their farms at the time of purchasing their young fruit stock. Trees one year old will often thrive better than those that are older, and they are also more easily examined. Every tree should be carefully inspected from the tips to the roots and should be procured from nurserymen known to be reliable.

DANGEROUS BLUE HERON.

Hunters Have Been Hurt Trying to Capture a Wounded Bird.

"Some of these days," said the longshore hunter to a New York Sun man, "I expect to open my daily paper and see a headline something like this: 'Killed by a Blue Heron,' and I'll tell you why. The blue heron is a big, powerful bird, which has already disfigured the faces of several men. The men have wounded a bird, and then, thinking to capture it alive, they went up to it. Why, I'd as soon try to kiss a wounded grizzly. The birds grow as tall as six feet and have necks like a fish rod and just the kind of muscles to move it quickest with the most strength. They could drive their bill points through a quarter-inch panel.

"The hunter goes up to a bird and sees it lying there looking as innocent as a robin, with only a wing broken. 'What a fine pet it would make,' the fool hunter thinks. Then he picks the bird up and starts for home in a wagon or a boat, with the bird between his knees. The bird's neck is drawn back like a letter 'S.' All of a sudden the bill shoots up and gives the man a gash alongside the eye three inches long. That is what always has happened. The wounded bird has missed its aim, but some time, and you want to remember it, this feathered spearman will drive its bill into an enemy's eye, and, like a steel umbrella stick, the point of the bill will penetrate the man's brain. I guess the bird's aim has always been spoiled by the pain of its wounds, and so many a human life has been saved. I don't monkey with wounded bitterns, or cranes—well, scarcely."

INGENIOUS WOOD RATS.

Built a House of Railroad Spikes and Lined It with Rags.

The wood rat of the western slopes of the Cascade range is a curious creature that loves to steal so well that it is known to many as the camp robber. It carries off anything it can lay its lips to, and is besides a jolly, reckless fellow. It does things which rodents are not given to doing.

Forest and Stream tells of some of its favorite spoils. It will take knives, forks and tin plates, cartridges, cups and anything it can handle in the line of clothing, towels or gun rags, which make soft linings for its nest. It is related how a pair of these rats staked off a claim on top of a hunter's camp stove, and put up the most curious rat house anybody had ever heard of. About 200 yards away was a railroad shanty, where the section men kept their supplies, and among other things was a keg of railroad spikes, such as are used to fasten the rails to the ties. The rats took some spikes to their claim, built up an iron wall, and lined the interior with soft stuff. It is a curious fact that all the points of the spikes were directed outward, and they were laid with great regularity and firmness.

The habits of the rat are a study for a naturalist, and it makes things so interesting for the natives that they kill it on sight.

According to the St. Louis City directory, just issued, the population of that city is 611,268.

The Secrets of Pearline's Success? Just a few to show that its enormous growth was only natural. First: The article was precisely what its makers claimed it to be and no improvement has been found. Second: The public was told all about Pearline—so new and so different from old ideas, people had to be educated.

Third: Every woman who has used it tells how much it has done for her; that while the cost is nominal, she has found it the best, always the same, perfectly harmless; and that the saving by using cheaper imitations for a year wouldn't be enough to pay for one ruined garment.

Beware of imitations. 330 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

SINFUL HABITS IN YOUTH

LATER EXCESSES IN MANHOOD

MAKE NERVOUS, DISEASED MEN

THE RESULT of ignorance and folly in youth, overexertion of mind and body induced by lust and exposure are constantly wrecking the lives and future happiness of thousands of promising young men. Some fade and wither at an early age, at the blossom of manhood, while others are forced to drag out a weary, fruitless and melancholy existence. Others reach matrimony but find no solace or comfort there. The victims are found in all stations of life—The farm, the office, the workshop, the pulpit, the trades and the professions.

SYPHILIS EMISSIONS STRICTURE CURED

Wm. A. Walker of 16th Street says:—"I have suffered untold agonies for my "gay life." I was indiscreet when young and ignorant. As "One of the Boys" I contracted Syphilis and other Private diseases. I had ulcers in the mouth and throat, bone pains, hair loose, pimples on face, finger nails came off, emissions, became thin, nervous, despondent. Seven doctors treated me with Mercury, Pota-h, etc. They helped me but could not cure me. Finally a friend induced me to try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. Their New Method Treatment cured me in a few weeks. Their treatment is wonderful. You feel yourself gaining every day. I have never heard of their failing to cure in a single case."

IMPOTENCY VARICOCELE EMISSIONS CURED

Capt. Chas. Ferry says:—"I owe my life to Drs. K. & K. At 14 I learned a bad habit. At 21 I had all the symptoms of Seminal Weakness and Spermator hoea. Emissions were draining and weakening my vitality. I married at 24 under advice of my family doctor, but it was a sad experience. In eighteen months we were divorced. I then consulted Drs. K. & K., who restored me to manhood by their New Method Treatment. I felt a new life thrill through my nerves. We were united again and are happy. This was six years ago. Drs. K. & K. are scientific specialists and I heartily recommend them."

We treat and cure Varicocele, Emissions, Nervous Debility, Seminal Weakness, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis, Unnatural Discharges, Self Abuse, Kidney and Bladder Diseases.

'ROUND ABOUT US.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

Hasen S. Pingree will deliver an address to the graduating class at Morenci.

A postoffice has been established at Clark's Lake with Jay D. Reed postmaster.

The Washtenaw pioneer society will hold its annual meeting at Chelsea June 10.

The canker worm is doing much damage to apple orchards in the vicinity of Deerfield.

The Adrian commandery will hold a week's encampment at Devil's Lake this summer.

Gov. Rich has issued a proclamation restricting the shipment of Texas cattle into Michigan.

John S. Hollister got into fresh trouble at Muskegon, and gets 90 days for assault and battery.

There is some hope for Hudson. A mammoth temperance meeting was held in that city Sunday night.

James Schermerhorn, formerly of Hudson, has left the Detroit News to become an editorial writer on the Free Press.

An item in the Elgin (Ill.) Daily News states that Capt. E. P. Allen, of Ypsilanti, will deliver the oration on decoration day at that city.

In the suit of Mrs. Rachel Emery against the Lake Shore a verdict of $300 was found for plaintiff. The road will take the case to Supreme court.

Tecumseh has a Beers Post—and other beer posts.—Monroe Democrat. Beer tanks seem to be the characteristic possessions of Monroe citizens.

The Adrian College team defeated a like nine from Hillsdale Saturday, by a score of 6 to 4. Lowe, of Britton, did good catching and some hard hitting for Adrian.

The Hudson Gazette of last week contains a fine portrait of the late Lewis Fernsdorf and a fine tribute to the memory of one of Lenawee's most sterling citizens.

An Eastern Star lodge has been organized at Hudson with forty-six charter members who will speedily train a nanny goat and make other preparations for a prosperous organization.

John G. Mason, one of Adrian's most respected and public spirited citizens, died there Tuesday morning. Mr. Mason was an ex-sheriff of this county and a very active man in public affairs.

The twenty-fourth annual reunion of the Old Fourth Michigan Infantry will be held in Hudson on Friday, June 19. This is the original "Fighting Fourth" and their reunions are very much enjoyed.

The murderer, Holmes, graduated in the medical department of the University in 1884. His name at that time was Herman Webster Mudgett. He is the first graduate of the institution to be executed.

The graduating class of the West Side Hudson schools will enjoy the presence of Will Carleton for the coming exercises. The favorite Michigan poet received his early education in Hudson and will be a welcome guest.

Quite a lively strike is on among the tailors at Adrian. They want extra pay for putting two or three flask pockets in the trousers of Adrian citizens, etc. Their grievances as set forth seem to be just and well founded.

Thomas Wilkinson, of Adrian, probably has the longest beard of any person in the United States and perhaps in the world. He had it measured one day last week and it is solemnly asserted that it was eighteen feet long. He says that it has grown two feet in the last two years. One foot a year. If we knew just when he stopped shaving it would be an easy matter to tell his age.

This wisdom bearing find was discovered in a drift of Philander Perkins' well stocked mine of geological and political knowledge: A nugget of pure copper was discovered on the farm of Jacob Snyder, of Oxford, last week. It is thought to have been dropped there by the melting drift of the glacial epoch. A nugget of pure brass has been discovered in Detroit "drifting about and bearing the hieroglyphics "H. S. P."

A little pleasantry in which this paper indulged last week is interpreted (purposely?) by the Telegram to mean that The Observer had a "spite against Adrian." Why, my dear sir, we're proud of Adrian. We think that she is the handsomest county seat in all this grand broad land of ours; and when it comes to nice looking ladies, gallant gentlemen, shrewd politicians, able lawyers and physicians, sharp tradesmen, bright newspaper people and ministers (these go well together) she's not at the tail-end of the procession—she's not. There, now! "Spite at Adrian?" Nonsense, Mr. Telegram.—Morenci Observer.

Mr. H. L. Patch was in Wauseon, last Saturday and drove out to see how the Lima Northern was progressing. He found the track laid to within six miles of Wauseon, and that they were laying a mile every day. North of Wauseon there are four gangs of men grading. They have the bed nearly ready for several miles.—Adrian Times.

Addison Courier: Being desirous of taking a course in law, Prof. Mills has declined to accept the principalship of the public schools here for another year and will enter the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor next October for a three years' course of study. Unprecidented success has crowned the school work during the two years of his connection therewith, and all concerned join in wishing him success as a student and legal practitioner.

Monroe Democrat: Dr. Ryan, of Ypsilanti, was recently the recipient of a punch bowl from some anonymous "admirer." Not long ago he was presented with a pack of cards. It is a cheering outlook for the morals of a community, when sinners manifest their remorse by surrendering the instruments of their wickedness to the good man. If similar donations continue Rev. Ryan will soon be able to open a saloon, provided he can get the bondsmen.

The Monroe Democrat: Journalistic amenities have attained a high grade, north of us. The editor of the Pinckney Dispatch refers to the editor of the Observer as "the ass-tute editor, who contrived to condense more imbecility into a 14-line item than would suffice to equip a first class insane asylum." When the Fowlerville man read that he shut himself in his room with a dozen graphite lead pencils and a slang dictionary and has not come out yet, but smoke is filtering through the keyhole.

H. W. Stevens, of Tecumseh, W. C. Street, of this city, and A. H. Boies, of Hudson, constitute the soldiers' and sailor's relief commission for Lenawee county. They met today, Mr. Boies being unable to attend. The duty of this commission is to apportion the special fund, to the relief of the disabled soldiers, sailors and their widows and orphans. Heretofore this has been attended to by the township, but it is now a county matter, one-tenth of one mill of all the taxes collected being set aside for a fund for the relief of the veterans.—Telegram.

Adrian Times: A Grand Rapids special says while John Hollister, his latest wife, and his wife's father were in that city, Hollister was taken into the office of Capt. Johnson, where he made a complete confession of his wrong doings. He wept like a child during the narration, and said drink drove him to the bad. Dispatches from Muskegon also indicate that the authorities there are in a quandary what to do with Hollister. The statute covering the little boy's case was declared unconstitutional last December, and his alleged conduct with the little girl had not gone far enough to be called criminal assault.

A Lansing dispatch says: The fight over the family mileage book question which has been waged in the circuit court at Adrian between Henry C. Smith and the Lake Shore R'y company will be transferred to the supreme court, a writ of certiorari having been asked for by the company Monday. In the lower court Smith succeeded in procuring a mandamus to compel the railroad company to sell him a ticket good for himself and wife for a term of two years, in accordance with the law of 1894. The company claims that the law cannot apply to special chartered roads like its own.

Blissfield Advance: The Adrian Press takes exceptions to the importation from Syria, by the Blissfield state bank, of two Mahuds. How little our neighbor appreciates the enterprise of Blissfield institutions. It is safe to say no other banking institution in the country has imported Syrian Mahuds for the pleasure and edification of its customers. The throngs who have visited the bank every day to view the floral curiosities, and incidentally to transact a little business, testify the appreciation the public has for the efforts of its officers to please. The ability of the bank to lead the procession either with Mahuds or business is unquestioned, and it is rather unkind of Brother Stearns to inject politics into the question.

Divers will attempt to raise the copperladen steamer Pewabic, which was sunk thirty years ago in Thunder Bay, Lake Huron, in 180 feet of water.

TWO YOUNG TRAVELERS.

Boy and Girl Cross the Ocean Together on the Rhyaland.

Among the passengers on board the steamer Rhyaland recently were two little children, a boy and a girl, who were traveling alone to different points in Ohio, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. The boy was George Gough, nine years old, a bright, sturdy, little fellow, who, owing to the serious illness of his mother had been sent from Harrington, England, to be cared for by his "Uncle Jack" at Hammondville, Jefferson county, O., until the mother again leaves the hospital. The boy was well clothed and very sedate. He was the proud possessor of $2.50 pocket money and appeared to feel rich.

The girl, in marked contrast to the boy, was as wild as she is pretty, a curly, fair-haired eight-year-old, Mabel Blaney, of Walsell, England, who was going to join her mother at 272 West Sixth street, Cincinnati. Both children had become great friends while crossing and were familiar with almost all the passengers. The boy took his place by Chief Inspector Hughes' desk, and as the immigrants filed in front he would correctly give the name of almost every one. Each and everyone of the passengers had a kindly farewell for the little lad.

On the pier the children feasted on such delicacies as were to be purchased at the lunch counter and drank copious draughts of soda water with evident relish. They rushed hither and thither, the girl always in the lead, and varied their delight by occasional quarrels.

As soon as the majority of passengers had left the pier the two children were provided with railroad tickets, provisions for the journey, and, after being duly tagged with the full directions as to destination, they were turned over to the railroad company's representative, their friends being duly notified by telegraph of their coming.

THE INTERESTING BEETLE.

One Kind Carries a Cannon Loaded with a Fluid—The Dytiscus.

Of all the insects the beetles are the most interesting. There is one that carries a cannon, which a naval man would call a stern chaser, and is loaded with a fluid. When pursued the beetle fires it, and the other insect, usually a carniverous beetle, is blinded by the discharge of fine, acid spray. Hence its name of bombardier. The latest thing that has been learned about beetles is that Dytiscus marginalis cuts its way through the shells of snails and mollusks and eats the inhabitants.

W. B. Tegetmeier writes to the London Field and tells about the curiosity of naturalists at finding shells manifestly gnawed by some insect or other, and the final discovery of Dytiscus marginalis at work on the shell. Then he tells some things about the Dytiscus family. Says he:

"I know of no more interesting animal in an aquarium than a Dytiscus, who soon acquires the habit of following the fingers for food, and amuses himself at night, if the aquarium is open, by flying round and round the room, and occasionally misses the way, and being unable to return is found on the floor in the morning. There is one drawback to the habits of this creature. He is a bloodthirsty tyrant of the aquarium, requiring the whole place to himself, for if kept with tadpoles, frogs, fish, or any other animals he quickly destroys them, even if many score times his own size."

What hawks are to the other birds, cats are to other mammals, sharks are to other fish, the Dytiscus is to other insects.

BIRDS SHOW AFFECTION.

Largest and Strongest of the Flock Help the Little Ones.

Numerous incidents have been recited showing how the larger and stronger animals have assisted and protected smaller and weaker ones, says the New York World.

Among the birds, however, there is a practice which is just as interesting as any of the acts of consideration performed by animals. A striking instance of that is shown on the continent of Europe.

For smaller birds to attempt to fly across the broad Mediterranean would, because of the inadaptability of their wings and powers of endurance, be impossible. To reach a warmer climate through Asia Minor, Syria and Palestine would be quite as certain to result in their death.

Through the kindliness of the crane, however, the small birds are enabled to reach the warmer climate with little effort.

When the crane is about to migrate it flies in wide circles close to the ground, uttering a loud and peculiar cry, as of alarm, and can be heard at a great distance. The small birds recognize it as a call for them, and they immediately fly to the crane and take up a position on the crane's back. When he has all the passengers he can carry comfortably the crane starts on his long journey. Arrived in the warm south lands, the small birds fly from the back of their friend and are safe for the winter.

Where the Timber Goes.

One of perhaps many little considered ways in which the forests of the country are being eaten up is in supplying timber for railway timber work. There are 2,000 miles of trestle structure in the United States, according to an estimate by the Forestry Division. This trestle work has to be replaced entirely every nine years, on an average, and every year timber amounting to 260,000,000 feet, board measure, is used for this purpose. Nearly all the timber is cut from the largest and finest trees. The annual expenditure on this work is estimated at about $7,000,000.

Used to Be an Oath.

"By the holy poker" is a popular abbreviation of an oath common during the crusades. "By the holy sepulcher" was in the mouths of Englishmen during the two centuries that the crusades went on.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Pheobe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result every thing else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Baker & Hall's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

IN CONGRESS.

Summary of the Daily Proceedings at Washington.

Measures of Importance That Are Under Consideration in the Senate and the House—Bills and Resolutions Passed.

Washington, May 21. — The senate yesterday passed the fortifications appropriation bill and defeated a proposition by Senator Gorman for the issue of $100,000,000 of three per cent. treasury certificates to meet prospective deficiencies.

Washington, May 22.—After agreeing to several conference reports in the senate yesterday Senator Butler's bill prohibiting the issuing of government bonds without the consent of congress was brought up and caused a lively discussion, but no action was taken.

Washington, May 23.—The time in the senate yesterday was occupied in discussing Senator Butler's bill prohibiting the issue of United States bonds without the consent of congress.

Washington, May 25.—The time in the senate on Saturday was consumed by the "filled cheese" bill and the second installment of the speech of Senator Allen (pop., Neb.) on the Butler bill to prevent the issue of bonds without the authority of congress. On the ground that the filled cheese bill was a revenue measure, several amendments to raise the revenue were offered, but all failed. The calendar was cleared of all the private pension bills.

Washington, May 26.—The general deficiency appropriation bill, the last of the supply bills, was before the senate yesterday and passed just before adjournment.

Washington, May 27.—Tariff and finance each came in for a share of consideration in the senate yesterday. While discussing the filled cheese bill Senator Dubois (Idaho) offered an amendment adding 75 cents per barrel to the tax on beer, but the bill and pending beer amendment were displaced by the bond bill, which was considered.

Washington, May 27.—The bill for the repeal of section 61 of the present tariff law providing for a rebate on alcohol used in the arts or medicinal compounds was passed in the house yesterday by a vote of 165 to 69.

THE HOUSE.

Bills Introduced and Petitions and Resolutions Presented.

Washington, May 21.—In the house yesterday the immigration bill was passed. It adds to the classes of aliens excluded from admission to the United States all persons between the ages of 16 and 60 years of age, except parents of persons living in this country, who cannot both read and write English or some other language.

Washington, May 22.—By a vote of 196 to 47 the house yesterday passed over the president's veto the bill granting a pension of $50 a month to Francis E. Hoover.

Washington, May 23.—In the house yesterday the conference report on the river and harbor bill was agreed to and 15 pension bills were passed. A bill establishing a life-saving station at Charlevoix, Mich., was favorably reported.

Washington, May 25.—In the house on Saturday the conference reports on the river and harbor bill, and the executive, legislative and judicial bill were also adopted. Mr. Howard (pop., Ala.) failed in an attempt to secure consideration of a resolution to impeach President Cleveland on eight counts. The bill granting statehood to Oklahoma was favorably reported.

Washington, May 26.—The house spent the time yesterday in committee of the whole on the free alcohol repeal bill. There was general debate, but no action.

Lives Lost in a Collision.

Two Harbors, Minn., May 25.—George Weaver, engineer, and Wallace Moulton, foreman of a worktrain on the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, were instantly killed in a head-end collision with an extra ore train Saturday night. Brakeman McKenna were seriously injured, and a number of workmen employed on the road were badly shaken up. Both engines and 15 cars were demolished.

Consecrated Bishops

Cleveland, O., May 27.—Charles Cardwell McCabe, Earl Cranston and Joseph Crane Hartzell were consecrated as bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, at Central Armory Tuesday morning. There was an immense congregation present, nearly every seat in the big auditorium being filled. The consecration was most impressive.

Seventeen-Year Locusts.

Lincoln, Neb., May 27.—According to reports from Cass county, on the Missouri river, that the 17-year locust has made its appearance there. Farmers declare the pest to be present in almost countless numbers, but no damage to vegetation has thus far been done.

Humane Bequest of $100,000.

Philadelphia, May 25.—The will of Edward H. Kennedy was admitted to probate. He bequeathed his entire fortune of $100,000 in trust for the benefit of the woman's branch of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Philadelphia, May 25.—A rowboat containing six men capsized in the Delaware river Saturday evening and John Fox, John Goldman and Theodore Clinkett were drowned.

twoen Thomas and Dryden in Lapeer county, and the other following a southeasterly direction to North Oxford.

After leaving North Oxford, the path of the southeast cyclone is marked at intervals until Mount Clemens is reached, where great damage was done and many persons injured.

The next heard from this storm is near Walkerville, Ont., 20 miles due south of Mount Clemens. The cyclone evidently expended its force after striking Canada, as no other reports of damage have been received.

After passing Dryden and Whigville, in Lapeer county, the next heard from the other storm was in Sanilac county, 30 miles away, at the village of Amadore, which was nearly swept away. The funnel-shaped cloud struck a mile west of the village and in a path half a mile wide and 6½ miles long, to the shore of Lake Huron, every building was more or less damaged.

Tuscola was also visited by a windstorm of cyclonic violence. Nearly every building in the path of the storm, which started near Gilford and traveled directly east for six miles, was destroyed. Joseph Malburg was hit by a flying board and instantly killed.

FARMERS SUFFER.

Wheat Crop in Many Parts of the State a Total Loss.

Lansing, May 25.—The secretary of state has received from his regular crop correspondents nearly 400 special reports respecting damage to the wheat crop. These reports cover all parts of the lower peninsula. Nearly 300 are from the southern counties. It is evidently clear that in this section the crop is being very generally and seriously damaged. It is estimated the damage will now reach 20 per cent. The estimate for the central counties is six per cent. and for the northern counties three per cent. The damage, however, is not wholly chargeable to the Hessian fly. The wheat probably rusted, which explains the discoloration so generally reported. The heavy wind of Sunday, the 17th, broke the wheat down badly, but the insect cannot always be found in the break. In a number of counties some fields have been plowed up, and in others cut for fodder.

Owosso, May 24.—The reports from elsewhere in the state relating to the damage done wheat by the Hessian fly have caused the Shiawassee county farmers to investigate, and they find that all wheat throughout this county is seriously damaged by the insect. The crop never looked more promising at this time of year until a few days ago, and now wheat that gave promise of a 30 bushels to the acre yield will not produce one. The loss will be a heavy one to the farmers, since the acreage was never larger, and the slight advance in the price of wheat last month took all of last year's crop out of the county.

SHOWS A PROFIT.

State Gains $73,754 in Revenue from the Uniform Tax Law.

Lansing, May 23.—The operation of the uniform tax for liquor sellers passed by the legislature in 1895, has been satisfactory. As compared with the previous year, it shows a falling off in dealers in malt liquors of 1,404 and an increase in dealers in spirituous liquors of 917, and a net decrease in both of 487. The decrease in amount received for tax on malt liquors is $402,407, while the increase for tax upon spirituous liquors is $476,161, showing an increased revenue from the business of $73,754. The previous tax was $300 upon malt dealers and $500 upon spirituous dealers. It is now uniform.

Mines Start Up.

Negaunee, May 23.—The Prince of Wales mine, which has been idle since the panic of 1893, was first started up this week with a full force of miners, and will be regularly worked from now on.

Ishpeming, May 23.—The Foster mine will resume work in a short time with a full force. The Sawmill mine of the Cleveland Cliffs company, which has been idle two months because of flooding, has been pumped out and mining has been resumed.

L'Anse May Not Rebuild.

Marquette, May 24.—There is little probability that the village of L'Anse will recover from the effects of the fire which two weeks ago wiped out half the town. Many business men who sustained loss will not rebuild, but the most discouraging fact of all is the reported intention of J. B. Smith to remove to Detroit. Smith's large sawmill and general store were the main enterprise and dependence of the village, and the decision not to rebuild leaves little for the future of L'Anse.

Mint Crop Being Ruined.

Niles, May 25.—Owners of peppermint farms in southwestern Michigan are much alarmed over the ravages of cut worms and grasshoppers in the mint. The leaves are being eaten off, leaving the stem bare. Poison is being used to exterminate the pests, with no effect on the worms, and the grasshoppers are so thick that little progress can be made. Grave fears are felt that this new and thriving industry may be entirely ruined.

Free Silver Convention.

Lansing, May 23.—Many responses are being received to letters sent out last week relative to the advisability of holding a mass free silver convention here July 16. As a rule the responses favor the project. It is noticeable that the petitions for the convention are being signed by republicans much more freely than by democrats. The latter are inclined to wait until after the Chicago convention, as they hope that silver will win out at that gathering.

Fatal Accident in a Mine.

Bessemer, May 25.—Andrew Smith was killed by a fall of ground in the Palms mine here.

TOWNS TORN UP.

A Cyclone Practically Destroys Oakwood and Thomas.

It Kills a Great Many Persons—A List of Forty-One Deaths Published—The Loss of Property Is Enormous

Work of the Storm Near Ortonville.

The cyclone first struck earth six miles west of Ortonville, and passed half a mile north of that village. In these six miles of devastated country before Ortonville was reached, 15 persons were killed and about 20 injured; some fatally. The first house to feel the effects of the storm was that of Joshua Johnson. The storm had not obtained all of its fury and the building was only partially demolished. Mr. Johnson escaping injury and his wife and baby being only slightly injured.

A mile further east stood the home and barns of William Mitchell. Not a trace of them is left but the foundation walls. Mrs. Mitchell, her son Claude and baby, Jay Mitchell, nine months old, were instantly killed. The father was seriously bruised and internally injured and will probably die. A big sliver was driven into the center of his forehead. All of his stock was killed. Don, another son, is seriously hurt.

There is nothing but foundations to show where the home of Abram Quick, who lived across the way, stood. Six occupants of the house were killed and one was seriously injured. Prescott Wilkins, one of those killed in the Quick home had reached there on a visit but an hour before the cyclone tore its way through. The home of Henry Flamboy was next destroyed and himself, his wife and two children seriously injured. A mile east of Flamboy's the cyclone demolished the house of John Porritt. The death list in this home reaches four. The wind cloud passed on and next wrecked the home of Benjamin Westby. Mr. Westby, his wife and two children were buried in the ruins but all were gotten out with severe injuries. John Frost was the next victim of the storm. His house was completely wrecked and his wife seriously hurt. The home of John Milkie, on a line with Ortonville was unharmed, but his barns were wiped out. Mr. Milkie and his son John, aged 18, were in a barn when it was demolished. The son was instantly killed and the father is in a critical condition.

Storm Separates.

The three mile stretch from Oakwood to Thomas is a scene of heartrending desolation and wreckage. Everything in the path of the cyclone was leveled. In and around Thomas the death list is large and many are injured.

After completing its work of destruction at Thomas, the cyclone evidently separated, one section going northeast and doing an immense amount of damage be-

The Coming of Baby.

When a baby comes to the house real happiness comes. The care and anxiety count for nothing against the clinging touch of the little hands and the sound of the little voice. The highest function given to human beings is bringing healthy, happy children into the world. Over thirty years ago the needs of women appealed to Dr. Pierce, now chief consulting physician to the Invalid's Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. The result of his study improved by thirty years of practice is embodied in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It strengthens, purifies and makes healthy the organs distinctly feminine. It gives weak women the strength and health necessary for the production of healthy children and it makes the bearing of those children easy. It is sure to cure any weakness or derangement peculiar to women; stops pain, soothes inflammation, strengthens, purifies, invigorates. 1w

Are You One

Of those unhappy people who are suffering with weak nerves, starting at every slight sound, unable to endure any unusual disturbance, finding it impossible to sleep? Avoid opiate and nerve compounds. Feed the nerves upon blood made pure and nourishing by the great blood purifier and true nerve tonic, Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The South Dakota cyclone of Tuesday night devastated a tract one mile wide and injured fifteen persons.

If you eat what you like, and digest it, you will surely be strong and healthy. But if you don't digest it, you might almost as well not eat, for what good can your food do you if it doesn't nourish you? If you find that you can't digest it, there is a simple help for your stomach. It is Shaker Digestive Cordial, made by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon. It has never failed to cure the worst case of indigestion. Strength and health come from the food you eat, after it has been digested and has gone into your blood. The best tonic is digested food. The best aid to digestion Shaker Digestive Cordial. When you have acid eructations, nausea, headache wind, dizziness, offensive breath, or any other symptoms of dyspepsia, Shaker Digestive Cordial will cure you. At druggists. Trial bottle 10 cents. 1w

Have you earache, toothache, sore throat, pains or swellings of any sort? A few applications of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil will bring relief almost instantly. 1w

Spring moving is at its height in Chicago, Ill., and rents have decreased from 10 to 20 per cent.

Food when it sours on the stomach, becomes innutritive and unwholesome. It poisons the blood, and both mind and body suffer in consequence. What is needed to restore digestion is a dose or two of Ayer's Pills They never fail to relieve. 1w

If You Will Use a Little Reasoning and not be influenced by the claim that catarrh is a blood disease, you can easily prove that catarrh is climatic. Have you not the severest catarrhal attacks during the winter and spring, and have you but little evidence of catarrh during the summer? Yes. Well, this proves it is a climatic disorder, inflaming the membrane of the nasal passages. It is a waste of time and money to invest in blood remedies. The proper treatment is a local application, and the most prompt to cure is that popular remedy, Ely's Cream Balm. 5

An electric vulcanizer for the repairing of pneumatic tires is one of the latest inventions.

Search For Health.

By using Calumet Baking Powder you will accomplish this object. If you use the high priced powders you endanger the health of your family as more than 80 per cent of the quantity used remains in the food as Rochelle Salts. This drug in food is dangerous. 1w

Four carloads of Chinese laborers are on their way from the Pacific coast to be shipped to Havana under contracts.

It is a great mistake to suppose that a simple tonic gives strength; it only stimulates the stomach to renewed action. To impart real strength, the blood must be purified enriched, and can only be done by such a standard alterative as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. 1w

TAKE THE CROWN.

Emperor and Empress of Russia Formally Enthroned.

Amid Booming of Cannon and Pealing of Bells the Czar and His Consort Are Proclaimed Rulers—The Ceremony.

Moscow, May 27.—The great event, for which untold preparations had been made and an immense amount of money expended, is over. The supreme function was accomplished without a hitch. The weather was perfect and everything leads the people to look forward with hope to the reign of Czar Nicholas II. The proclamation issued by the czar on the occasion of his coronation prescribes various remissions, of which the following are the principal:

The Proclamation.

All arrears of taxes in European Russia and Poland are remitted and the land tax is reduced by half for ten years. The sentences of exiles in Siberia are materially reduced, political offenders receiving further remissions, with the restoration of their civil rights in certain cases. The exministers of the interior and justices are empowered to submit to the czar deserving cases of those punished after a regular trial. Those persons who shared in the Polish rebellion who are not guilty of murder, cruelty, arson or robbery are exempted from the police supervision decreed in 1883 and are granted full freedom of residence if they return to their own country and take the oath of allegiance.

Emperor and Empress Appear.

All Moscow had come to catch a glimpse of the emperor and empress and their brilliant suite as they descended the red staircase from the Kremlin palace and crossed the inclosure to the cathedral. Shout after shout rose upon the air, drums sounded, bells pealed and the bands grouped in the Great Square played the national anthem.

Ceremony in the Cathedral.

The aged metropolitan of Petersburg held up a prayer before the emperor, who read it deliberately and distinctly, standing with his hands hanging at his side. The priest of the Gospel followed the emperor with a prayer, and the empress and greater part of the assemblage crossed themselves meanwhile.

Then two grand dukes, his uncle Vladimir and young brother Alexander, took the collars of the different orders from the emperor's neck and lifted the ermine mantle to his shoulders. It was 15 feet in length, of gold cloth, covered with double eagles, embroidered with silk and precious stones, and with a cape of ermine. Over this was placed the diamond collar of St. Andrew.

Czar Is Crowned.

Then the czar received the crown from the metropolitan and placed it on his own head and took the globe and scepter in either hand. In the head of the scepter was the Orloff diamond, for which the Russian government paid the Orliff family $1,000,000 and ennobled them.

The empress knelt before the czar, and he lifted his crown and touched it for an instant to her head, replaced it, and put her smaller crown upon her head, holding it there while three of the oldest ladies of the court fastened it to her hair with long pins. Her robe, similar to his own, was put on her shoulders, and supported at each side, on account of its enormous weight, by Grand Dukes Sergius and Paul.

Then their majesties seated themselves upon the thrones. At that moment the bell of the tower of Ivan Veliky, which gives the time to all the other thousands of bells in Moscow, jarred the air with the great news which it was the first to tell, and from steeple to steeple, and belfry to belfry, all over the great city, the signal was tossed like thousands of echoes.

Imperial Couple Congratulated.

The members of the imperial family and the foreign princes now advanced and congratulated the imperial couple, while others in the church bowed thrice toward the throne, thus expressing their felicitations. Suddenly the cannon, bells and bands ceased, and a solemn silence ensued while the czar knelt and solemnly offered a fervent prayer.

When the czar rose from his knees the metropolitan of St. Petersburg began a prayer for the emperor, at which everyone in the cathedral knelt, with the exception of the emperor, who stood erect, wearing his crown.

The metropolitan then stepped forward to the foot of the dais and made a short address to the czar on the importance and duties of his office.

Receive the Communion.

Reading by priests followed for an hour, when the czar received the communion in the chapel behind the closed doors. The empress received it at the doors, but was not permitted to enter the sanctuary. For the first time during the long service both the czar and czarina wept as they returned from the communion table. The ceremony ended shortly after that, when their majesties visited two more churches within 50 yards of the cathedral, and then, mounting the famous red steirs of the palace, bowed to the thousands who had gathered outside, and who had been cheering unceasingly for an hour. The emperor and empress subsequently dined in state in the banqueting hall of the Granivitaya palace, wearing their imperial crowns and mantles.

The National bank of Jefferson, Tex., closed its doors.

WE WANT TO TELL YOU

Why Your Back Is Lame—Why It Aches and Pains, and How to Cure It.

Do you know what it is to have a back that is never free from aches and constant pain, a lame back, a sore back, an aching back, in fact, a back that makes your life a burden? What have you done for it? And does it still keep you from the happiness that perfect health brings to all? We know full well if such is your condition a cure for it will be a blessing you no doubt desire. Plasters won't do it, but may assist in bringing strength. Liniment won't do it; for, while it may give temporary relief, it does not reach the cause. The cause, there's the point; there's where to make the attack. Most backaches come from disordered kidneys, therefore you must correct their action if you would be cured. Read the following from D. D. Cook, whose address is No. 18 Michigan Street, Grand Rapids. He says:—

"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and wish to say it is a truly great medicine. Thirty years ago I had nervous prostration while in the army, where I served for over four years. I think it was during this service that the seeds were sown which have caused all my trouble. Severe bilious attacks bothered me, and at such times my kidneys were worse. It is almost impossible to describe the pain which so often lamed me. I have been so lame that to stand up after I had been sitting down required a great exertion. Walking was at times an impossibility, even at night I did not rest, being forced to get up during the night. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and wondered if they could make an almost lame man well. I got some, and soon after taking them began to feel their good effects. I used them for some time, my lameness all left me and I have not felt it since. Doan's Kidney Pills have done me an inestimable amount of good."

"Matron of a Benevolent Home and knowing the good Dr. Miles' Nervine has done me, my wish to help others, comes my dislike for the publicity, in a letter may give me. In Nov. and Dec. 1895 The inmates had the "La Grippe" and I was one of the first. Recovering too soon, with the care of 80 many, I did not regain my health, and in a few weeks I became so debilitated and nervous from sleeplessness and the drafts upon my vitality, that it was a question if I could go on. A dear friend advised me to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I took 2 bottles and am happy to say I am in bettter health than ever. I still use it occasionally use, as a nervine tonic, as my work is very trying. A letter addressed to Milwaukee, Wis., will reach me." June 6, 1894. MRS. LAURA C. PHOENIX.

DISEASED MEN CURED

THOUSANDS of young men, middle aged men and old men can look back to their boyhood days or early manhood with a sigh of regret. The ignorance of early youth, or later on a misspent life as "one of the boys" has sown the seeds for future suffering. SELF ABUSE is a terrible sin against nature and will bring a rich harvest. Blood and Private Diseases sap the very life and ruin the health of the victim. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT will positively cure all the following diseases:

VARICOCELE, EMISSIONS, NERVOUS DEBILITY, SYPHILIS, STRICTURE, GLEET, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, PIMPLES, LOST MANHOOD, UNNATURAL DISCHARGES, KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES

ARE YOU? NERVOUS and despondent; weak or debilitated; tired mornings; lack ambition—lifeless; memory poor; easily fatigued; excitable; nervous; sleepless; haggard looking; weak back, bone pains; hair loose; ulcers; sore throat; pimples on face; dreams and night losses; varicocele; deposit in urine and drains at stool; distrustful; want of confidence; lack energy and strength—WE CAN CURE YOU OR ASK NO PAY.

CURES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY—CONFIDENTIAL

SNATCHED FROM THE GRAVE. A Warning from the Living Dead. "At 15 I learned a bad habit. Tried doctors and nerve tonics by the score without benefit; emissions and drains. I became a nervous wreck. A friend who had been cured by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan of a similar disease, advised me to try them. I did so and in two months was entirely cured. This was eight years ago. I am now married and have two healthy children."—C. W. LEWIS, Saginaw.

VARICOCELE CURED. "Varicocele made life miserable. I was nervous, eyes sunken, bashful in society, had no ambition. The 'Golden Monitor' opened my eyes. The New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan cured me in a few weeks.—I. L. PETERSON, Iosco.

EMISSIONS CURED. J. P. EMERSON relates his experience. "I was born on a farm. At school I learned an early habit which weakened me physically, sexually and mentally. Family doctors said I was going into 'decline' (consumption.) Finally 'The Golden Monitor,' edited by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, fell into my hands. I learned the TRUTH and the CURE. Both had sapped my vitality, I took the New Method Treatment and was cured. My friends think I was cured of consumption. I have sent them many patients, all of whom were cured. Their New Method Treatment supplies vigor, vitality and manhood."

SYPHILIS CURED. "This terrible blood disease was in my system for years. Had taken mercury for two years, but the disease returned. Eyes red, pimples and blotches on the skin, ulcers in the mouth and throat, bone pains, falling out of hair, weakness, etc. My brother, who had been cured of Gleet and Stricture by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, recommended them. They cured me in a few weeks, and I thank God I consulted them. No return of disease in six years."—W. P. M., Jackson.

The Rebellion of 1895 and How it was Put Down.

(Copyrighted, 1896, by Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York.)

Central Union Church on this evening was filled with people. It is claimed that a part of their plan was to throw bombs into the church, when the congregation was assembled and thus scatter death and consternation through the town, and seize the government building before the people could recover from the panic. It was known that the heads of the government could thus be swept off at a single blow. The minister was in the midst of his sermon when a man entered and went up to Mr. Edwin Benner, whispered something in his ear, and went out again. Benner began at once to glide from pew to pew whispering a single word to a man here and there. Each one to whom he spoke arose and went out. They were members of the citizens' guard. The preacher went on tho' a flutter of excitement began to thrill the audience. So many went out that alarm began to spread. Judge Judd went to the vestibule and demanded of Benner what it all meant, and Benner explained that the Royalists had arisen to overthrow the Government. Just then a company of National Guards dashed along the street at a double quick, and the congregation rose and left; the preacher knowing it was useless to attempt to hold them longer, closed his sermon without ceremony.

During Sunday night Nowlein, with a large body of insurgents, started from the vicinity of Diamond Head to seize Punchbowl Hill, which is just at the back of Honolulu. Marshal Hitchcock, fearing some such a move, early on the morning of the 7th dispatched Captain Murray with thirty-five men to head it off.

The rebels were found concealed behind a stone wall and covered by a heavy underbrush of lantana. A heavy fire was opened on Murray, hand-grenades hurled at his men, and all forced back. Reinforcements were hurried to their aid, and for an hour the battle raged. A piece of artillery was brought up and opened with shot and shell until the mountains echoed with reverberations. The dense lantana concealed the combatants from each other.

At last the rebels were located in an extinct crater, and it took fifteen shells to dislodge them, but at last they were driven out and seven of their number surrendered. Then they began coming in with white flags until thirty-seven had surrendered. This fight is called the Battle of Moiliili, as it was fought on the Moiliili Road.

On Wednesday the insurgents were again overtaken at a place called Manoa. On Monday Diamond Head had been bombarded and the rebels driven out. At Manoa they made their last determined stand, Robert W. Wilcox commanding in person. Tuesday was spent in searching for the enemy and following up false rumors. It was an active, nervous day. Troops were hurried from Moiliili Road to the foothills and to Diamond Head; a few prisoners were taken and many guns were picked up, twenty rifles that had never been used being found in a little fort near Waialae.

At Manoa, Wilcox and Lot Lane had probably about seventy-five men located among the high peaks, where they hoped to hold out until they could make terms with the Government.

The forces of the Government were massed against them at this point, and the conflict raged for some time at long range but artillery and the long distance guns of the Government men drove them from their hiding place. Wilcox left ten men behind as a cover and went into Panoa valley. Two natives came in under the white flag. One had an ear cut with a bullet, and they led the way to where a third lay with a bullet in his brain. Wilcox and his forces then retreated into the mountains where they were reduced to the direst want, supplies being entirely cut off. They had no houses or tents, and were compelled to sleep on stones or in caves. On January 14 Nowlein, Greig, Widemann, and Marshall were captured. They were found in a thicket, and on being summoned to surrender came out, dirty and bedraggled, their clothes torn and their faces and hands scratched. Marshall, a mere boy, was the only one who seemed cheerful.

The war was now a man hunt. The rebellion was broken, and the only question was the capture of the fugitives. Robert Wilcox was taken and sent to prison, and then the hunt for Lot Lane began. He was regarded as the most desperate and dangerous of the rebels, but was easily captured. Lot Lane was said at that time to be one of the finest specimens of physical manhood on the islands. He was over six feet tall and well proportioned, possessing herculean strength. His father claimed to be a descendant of the kings of Ireland, and his mother had the blood of the Kamehamehas in her veins.

The Provisional Government decided to arrest the ex-Queen as the chief instigator in the conspiracy. Bombs and arms were found buried in her yard, and the confessions of those captured were sufficient to implicate her. Marshal Hitchcock and Adjutant-General Soper were sent for at 9:30 a. m., Wednesday, 16th, and a warrant put in their hands for the arrest of Mrs. Liliuokalani Dominus, the ex-Queen, and deliver her to Colonel Fisher, commanding the militia at the Executive Building. They left at once for Washington Place, the ex-Queen's residence, in two hacks. There were a number of native guards around the house, who did not even challenge the officers. The mistress of the house had no visitors inside. The ex-Queen was lying on a sofa in her bed-chamber, but arose at once and came into the reception hall to meet the officers. Mrs. Dominus has always been rated as a strong woman, and her captors half suspected that she would resist, but she coolly received the summons. Any other woman would have swooned or given away to tears or imprecations of rage; with a queenly dignity and the stoical indifference of a warrior, she answered: "All right. I will go." Going to her dressing room she attired herself in black, and seated by the side of Deputy Brown, with Captain Parker in front, was driven to the Executive Building.

With this rebellion ended the last hope of Monarchy in the islands. The Republic had proven to the world that it was able to put down any internal insurrection. Over two thousand men were constantly ready at the slightest notice to spring to arms to defend the liberal government. The ex-Queen was confined for a long time in the Executive Building in a large airy apartment in the second story. She was treated with kindness and her lady friends permitted to visit her. She addressed a letter to the President renouncing any claim on the throne of the Hawaiian people soon after her arrest and before her trial. After a few months she was released, and returned to her home at Washington Place, where she now lives, surrounded by splendor and elegance, but shutting herself up and refusing to communicate with any one save her most intimate friends. She says the Republic cannot be overthrown, and all she asks is to be permitted to live undisturbed as plain Mrs. Dominus.

certainties in treating disease is counter irritation—the effect, usually, of plasters. But JOHNSON'S Belladonna Plaster is more than a mere excitant of the skin; it relieves and cures also by the absorption of its medicinal properties. THE DOCTOR'S BILL

PARALYZING, but unnecessary. You don't have to run for a Doctor whenever you feel a little out of sorts. A few doses of Dr. F. FRENCH'S UNEQUALED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RHEUMATIC REMEDY, will make you feel all right and save you a lot of money. Some people have found this out, and this is what they say about it.

E. B. DOWNING, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Was troubled with Rheumatism—tried several remedies with no effect. Had several doctors who did me no good—half a bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequalled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy cured me."

J. FREE SMITH, Lansing, Mich.

"Doctors called it Bright's Disease in its early stage. One bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy removed all symptoms of the disease—have felt nothing of it since."

Mrs. DIANA RIGGS, Hillsdale, Mich.

"Was sick for four years with enlargement of the Liver and Spleen, and General Prostration of the Nervous System; was attended by two of the best Doctors in the town and used no end of Patent Medicines, all who saw me thought there was no relief except by death, which seemed sure. A friend recommended Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy; in less than a week after I commenced taking it I was better. Six bottles cured me. You are welcome to use my name and this statement, and also refer anyone to me either personally or by mail, and I will tell them much more than I can write."

We have many more letters to the same effect.

This preparation is in no way to be classed among the many worthless Patent Medicines of the day, being simply a Prescription used by Dr. F. French, of Hillsdale, for many years in his practice. It is offered to the public with the full assurance of its being the Best Medicine on Earth for the cure of Rheumatism in all its various forms. Affections of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, Scrofula-Eruptions, and Cutaneous Diseases, Female Weakness, and all complaints arising from an Impure Condition of the Blood.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 29, 1896.

It is now thought by the political management that Wm. McKinley will be nominated at the St. Louis convention by acclamation and Reed will be the nominee for vice president if he will accept.

Street Commissioner Hyde is doing great work with his horse-power hoe, and never did the thoroughfares of this village look better. The city council should go a little farther and order away the garbage in alleys and lots behind the stores, when there would not be a cleaner, neater village in the state than Tecumseh.

The laws of Michigan demand that the 30th of May in each year shall be kept as a legal holiday and that the banks and saloons shall remain closed. This, in honor af the custom of decorating the graves of the nation's dead heroes. Why should there not be a law against desecrating the day with base ball games and other amusements of this sort. So long as there are no such laws, the common decency of the citizens demand that such pastimes be indulged in on other days.

So far this week the record of deaths caused by the cyclone will number nearly fifteen hundred souls. Some counties in our own state have been visited. Iowa, Illinois and Dakota have also suffered; but most terrible of all was the calamity at St. Louis, Mo., on Wednesday night when perhaps 600 persons were instantly killed and millions in dollars of property destroyed. In times of war, a battle in which 1000 men are killed would excite the world. In a few days the world will have forgotten this work of the Almighty, and 'tis hard indeed for mortals to reason why innocent people should thus be destroyed.

Horace Boise, of Iowa, stands a good chance of being the nominee of the democrats at the Chicago convention. He is not a politician but has been repeatedly thrust into prominence by force of circumstances and the fact that under any and all circumstances he could trusted by his fellow men. He is a lawyer of much more than local prominence and a brother of the late John K. Boise, of Hudson, Michigan, who was known all over Lenawee as a man of sterling qualities. Should the democrats nominate a man of this stamp although he would no doubt be unsuccessful, the fortunes of the party might be retrieved so that four years hence something might be done.

Forty-six years ago today The Tecumseh Herald started its existence. What the old Herald has done for Tecumseh and what the people of Tecumseh have done for the old Herald any one who takes the paper well knows. For over 21 years the policy and business of the Herald were conducted by the late Scovel C. Stacy and by his death in December, 1895, the concern has suffered its most severe loss. It is the purpose of the present publishers to give the readers of the Herald during the 47th year the best local newspaper in Lenawee county. The first thoughts of the editors shall be to print true accounts of the happenings of Tecumseh and vicinity and to keep these accounts free from anything which would be in any way objectionable to any member of any family. The political policy of the Herald will be strictly independent and in village, township and county politics the editors will reserve the privilege to choose a ticket for themselves made up of the best material from all parties. The readers of the Herald may be assured that they may always know which candidate the paper favors, but the time for honest politics is at hand and this can only be accomplished by independence of thought and speech and the discarding of strict party lines. Tecumseh and Lenawee county have troubles of their own and it should be the province of a local newspaper to assist in the building up of its immediate community rather than endeavor to be a needle in the straw stack of national affairs. It is a pleasure to thank the patrons of the Herald for their 46 years of patronage and to promise simply this—an honest endeavor to at all times improve.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., May 23 '96.

The dissatisfaction of the chairman of some of the House committees with the methods which have been followed during this session is becoming more marked as the time for adjournment draws nearer. First Chairman Mahon, of the committee on War Claims, got in a blow at the unanimous consent legislation, which has knocked out the regular order so often of late, by giving this warning to the House: "Gentlemen get what you can the next fifteen days. Unanimous consent will not be given for any purpose at the next session." He was followed by Chairman Walker, of the committee on Banking and Currency, in an impassioned speech arraigning the three or four men who rule the House with a rod of iron. "If God spares my life," he exclaimed dramatically, "and I return to this House at the next session, this thing will end. I have served here for eight years and received no more consideration than a dog." In reply to a question Mr. Walker said: "In view of the approaching Presidential election, both sides of the House show a decided disinclination to consider bills from my committee." Notwithstanding the palpable truthfulness of that assertion, it was greeted with a shout of laughter as though it was something funny.

The best informed politicians of all parties now believe that President Cleveland is out for another nomination and that nothing will prevent his getting it but the capture of the Chicago convention by the silver democrats.

The American missionaries in Turkey are after Minister Terrell's official scalp, and they have, it is believed, a good show of getting it. They charge him with profanity, vulgarity, ungentlemanly habits of several kinds and general incompetency, and they are backed up by many influential personal friends of the President. Terrell is in Washington now trying to square himself.

It has just come to light that an attempt is to be made to consolidate the votes of the negro delegates to the St. Louis convention and to use them to dictate the nomination of some other man than McKinley. How dangerous this may be to the fortunes of McKinley is not yet apparent, but it is already alarming some of his supporters. Perry Carson, who is a negro delegate from the District of Columbia to the convention is credited at the head of this scheme. He claims to favor the nomination of Senator Allison, but is believed to be working in the interest of Speaker Reed. Mr. Manley, who is Mr. Reed's manager, is not in Washington, but his private secretary says of this scheme: "If the plan goes through, Speaker Reed will received the vote of every colored delegate at the St. Louis convention, at some stage of the proceedings, whether they are under instructions or not."

The most important political event of the week was Senator Quay's announcement that he intended to pay McKinley a visit. It isn't so strange that Mr. Quay should make this visit, but it is very strange, in view of his usual method of doing things, that he should announce it in advance. It has set everybody guessing, and that is probably what Mr. Quay desired and expected it to do. Nobody pretends to know just what the object of this visit is, but there is a rather general idea that it is largely in behalf of ex-Senator Platte, of New York. It has never been believed that Senator Quay was very strongly opposed to McKinley's nomination. In fact, he stated a year or more ago that he was either for McKinley or Reed. Since then he got the idea, which the McKinley tidal wave has brushed aside, that he might get the nomination himself, and while that idea was working full time he is believed to have made an alliance, offensive and defensive, with Mr. Platte, which may keep him in the field as a candidate, unless he can get certain promises from McKinley that will enable Mr. Platt to retain his hold on his party's machine by getting a liberal share of the Federal patronage in New York. According to the best information to be had, if he gets those promises Gov. Morton and himself will withdraw in McKinley's favor. It is believed in Washington that he will get them, too. McKinley can probably be nominated without Platt's help, but he cannot easily carry New York without it, and the loss of New York and the silver states, which are expected to bolt the St. Louis platform, would make his election very doubtful.

A Senator, who ought to know what he is talking about, said today: "McKinley expects to get 150 silver votes in the St. Louis convention. That's what is keeping him mum on finance. After he gets the nomination he'll come out flat-footed for a gold standard. Mark the prediction."

The Senate is slowly but surely disposing of the appropriation bills, but nothing has been done about adjournment yet.

Resolutions of Respect.

The Great Husbandman, in garnering in his sheaves, has summoned to an account of the faithfulness of their stewardship, Mrs. W. H. Osborne and Mrs. G. D. Perry, who for many years have been identified with the Ladies Aid society of the M. E. church. In their death the society has lost wise counselors and willing workers, and we mourn, but not as those without hope for we have bright evidence that when the call came they were ready to go. Having spent a long life in christian usefulness they rest from their labors. As a society we mingle our sorrow with the stricken families, who will miss them as no others can, with the church, which has lost two of its most efficient members, yet feeling that our loss is their eternal gain. May we all, like them, "set our house in order" that when the message for us is, "Thou shalt die and not live," also shall be ready. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do most sincerely tender to their families our united sympathy in this time of their sad bereavement, and pray that in the blessed hope of a heavenly reunion they may be reconciled to their great loss.

A change of time went into effect on the Lake Shore Sunday. The only change on the Jackson branch is in the afternoon train which goes south now at 3:08 instead of 3:11. Those going into Detroit will be glad to know that on account of a new fast train they can leave that city at 9:15 instead of 6:45 and reach Tecumseh on the noon train, thus having two and one half hours longer in the city.

A very serious runaway occurred in Brownville Wednesday forenoon about 9 o'clock. Clarence Gilmore, of Macon, was driving a horse and carriage into town. The horse, which was a large, spirited animal became frightened at the paper mill and dashed up the hill at the same time kicking spitefully. As there were two teams ahead Mr. Gilmore attempted to turn west. As the horse crossed the sidewalk, he stopped on three legs, the right hind leg being broken, probably from kicking. If this had not happened, it is doubtful if Mr. Gilmore would have escaped serious injury. Dr. Waldron examined the horse and it was decided to shoot the animal which was accordingly done. The same horse together with his mate ran away at Britton a few weeks since, doing damage which cost the owner considerable.

The cracker-jack ball game was played last Saturday between the high school nine of Clinton and the eighth grade boys, of Tecumseh. The score stood 11 to 10 in our favor. The game was close throughout, and a good one.

A mass meeting in the interest of the Armenians will be held in Sutton's opera house Sunday at 3 p. m. The pastors of the churches and prominent citizens will address the meeting, also Presiding Elder Davis, of Detroit.

The Tecumseh Chapter of the Eastern Star tested the hospitality of the organization at Manchester to its fullest capacity Wednesday evening. The officers also exemplified the work there. Fifty-four stars of the first magnitude completed the visiting constellation and all found hearty welcome in the Manchester firmament. For want of space we omit names.

The memorial services held in the Presbyterian church were largely attended. Beers Post, G. A. R., and W. R. C. and Co. C attended in a body and a large audience, who hold in sacred memory the associations which this service annually recalls, assembled. Rev. Varner offered prayer and Rev. B. S. Hudson gave a very strong and timely addresses taking as his text, "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

Mr. J. F. Hicks is improving the appearance of his house and buildings on Union street, eight in number, by a fresh coat of paint. This place with its location and about 10 acres of land makes one of the most desireable and attractive residences in our beautiful village. The painting is being done by M. L. Gillen, and Mr. Hicks says that if he finishes with the same skill that he has thus far employed, it will be the finest job of painting in the town.

At a special meeting of the executive committee of the Tecumseh Bicycle Association yesterday morning it was decided that the association's race meeting would be held on the 16th of July. This was deemed the best available date inasmuch as the meet would follow the big meet in Battle Creek and the National Circuit meet in Detroit. Late in the afternoon, however, a telegram was received from the L. A. W. racing board saying that we would not be permitted a sanction for that date as it had already been secured by the management of the state meet at Kalamazoo. This was especially exasperating as the News was filled with locals advertising Tecumseh's Bicycle Derby day for Thursday, July 16th. This was no fault of the News nor was it really any fault of the management of the races as it was necessary to place these locals prior to hearing definitely from the national authorities.

High School Happenings.

Final reviews are the order of the day.

Final examinations begin next Thursday.

The seniors begin rehearsals on Monday afternoon.

C. F. Field was a visitor in the B room Tuesday.

Mrs. S. B. Wood called on the A room Wednesday.

Lena VanValkenburg was a high school visitor last Thursday.

Mr. Keeler, the county commissioner, visited the high school Wednesday.

Julia Gilmore has been compelled to leave school temporarily on account of illness.

The attendance at the monthly examination is less this month than in any of the previous months of the year. The reviews have been a helping factor.

It has been an evident fact to those who have had the pleasure of sitting in the A room this year that some alternation should be made in the distribution of the popular pests throughout the room. Therefore, Miss Hartbeck, acting under the impression that "little people" should be seen and not heard, has placed Vern Smith on the front row. Those who have been accustomed to dodge balls of paper, books, base ball gloves, etc., will now look for them in another direction.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

A Salt Lake Minister Said to Have Murdered Two Young Girls.

Salt Lake City, May 25.—Foul play is suspected in the somewhat mysterious disappearance of Miss Henrietta Clausen, who has not been seen since September last. She was at that time taking care of the apartments of Rev. Francis Hermann, pastor of the First Scandinavian Methodist church in this city. A recent inspection of the grate of the furnace in the building reveals two razors and a butcher knife, garter and belt buckles and charred bones. The bones have been turned over to physicians and the police department is making a rigid investigation. Miss Samuelson, a friend of the pastor, also disappeared last January. The last heard of the pastor he was at Kansas City, on his way to Iowa. A warrant has been sworn out for the arrest of the preacher upon an information charging him with murder. The warrant is signed by D. H. Wenger, city magistrate, upon the complaint of John Hanson, who is the last man who saw Miss Clausen before her disappearance from the city.

Hermann is of Scandinavian descent, but was born in England. He is about 40 years of age, exceedingly well educated. He has been married three times, and it is said all his wives have died under suspicious circumstances. In his study were found a large collection of poisons and drugs of various kinds.

A FATAL PLUNGE.

Many Lives Lost by the Falling of a Bridge Span at Victoria.

Victoria, B. C., May 27.—A defective span in the Government street traffic bridge across Victoria Arm, gave way Tuesday afternoon, precipitating a loaded street car and several private carriages into the bay, 100 feet below. The number of victims cannot at this time be estimated. The bridge was crowded with vehicles containing pleasure-seekers bound for MacCauley's Point, where the queen's birthday celebration sports were in progress.

Up to 10:30 p. m. 62 bodies had been taken from the bay. Twenty persons known to have been on the bridge at the time of the accident are missing, and it is supposed that they have perished. The car register shows 90 fares, and it is probable that over 125 were on board.

The number of carriages lost and the foot passengers carried down in the wreck cannot be learned. It is claimed by many that fully 200 persons went down with the span, and that more than half of them perished. The accident occurred so quickly that nobody has a very clear recollection of what transpired.

Will Appeal to the New Czar.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 27.—At the closing session of the Baptist anniversary Tuesday a resolution was adopted providing that a petition to the czar of Russia, just crowned, be forwarded through the proper channels, asking the assertion of his kind offices in behalf of suffering Christians in Armenia.

A LITTLE HEATHEN.

BY MONTGOMERY M. FOLSOM.

Jack was a heathen. Oh, the little imp, how tough he was! I was a model boy. I was, for a fact, you may believe it or not; I used to hold down my head when grace was being said; I knew the Ten Commandments and the Lord's Prayer by heart, and I was a child of many virtues.

Jack was as mean as the old scratch. He would cut his eye around at me and try to make me laugh while the blessing was being asked; he would stick pins in the little boys as they knelt at prayers; he would rob birds' nests, and when remonstrated with would say:

"Why, my gracious, let the old fool bird go lay some more aiggs, she's got the whole summer and 'tain't much trouble to lay a few little old aiggs like them."

We used to read tales in our reading books about how bad boys came to bad ends, and Jack would laugh at them.

"Shucks!" he would say, "them old book men can't fool me. What makes gran'ma kill chickens on Sunday, if it's a sin to go in washin'? I notice one thing: ol' brother Kicklighter al'us eats mighty hearty, and if it was a sin to kill 'em it'd be a sin to eat 'em. They can't scare nobody."

Ah, the dear little old freckled face! Worlds would I give to have it come between me and the sun again ere I reach the vale of shadows.

He would whip the stuffing out of a boy for my sake. I remember once a fellow called me "wormy." We were coming home from Sunday-school, and I had resolved not to resent any insult—a very convenient way of resolving, by the way—and the big boy would have gone unpunished but for Jack.

What did he do? He lit onto that fellow, and he pelted him in the burr of the ear and got him down and such a thrashing that boy never toted before. That was Jack's style. No foolishness about him. He was of that particular type of ugliness that denotes cussedness and original sin.

I used to pray for Jack when the preacher would tell us to pray for all those whom we thought needed our prayers. Jack was cutting a jagged "J" on the back of the seat while I was praying for his conversion.

Ah, the days, the golden days, when the summers seemed so long. I wonder if the summers of paradise will not possess that same sweet, delicious lingering when the pathos and the passion of mortal life are past?

Sometimes I dream of Jack, now. The other night, I don't know what got into me, but I dreamed that we were rambling along the banks of one of those winding southern rivers, whose languid waters were murmuring, whispering, lisping among the reeds and rushes.

There was a flash of shining sand around the bend, and we came to a place where there was a thicket of cypress saplings. I saw one that would make the finest sort of a fishing pole, and Jack went to cut it for me. It grew right on the bank of a slough of black water, on whose sheeny bosom the tupelo gum berries were afloat.

I was timid—good boys are not always brave boys—and Jack went to cut the pole for me. I saw him open the little old rusty barlow knife, and he reached far over the treacherous bank.

He had cut it most in two, when there was a crash.

"Splash!"

The spray flew upward in a shower and blinded my eyes, and when I opened them—Jack was gone!

I was sitting up in bed gasping, struggling, choking, in my efforts to call help. Such dreams are our lives made up. Sometimes as I sit gazing up at the summer heavens I am startled by the illusion that I see that boy's face through a rift in the clouds.

Jack was a bad boy. Popper Joe used to shake his head and mutter:

'I tell you, dat boy's sho' ter come ter some bad end."

Then he would point to me and remark:

"But dar's a chile w'at'll be somebody. Dat's er good chile, de Lawd knows he is, an' folk'll make much er him w'en he gits ter be a growed up man."

I was so pitifully pious in those days. The fact is, I think I was not well. The chariot wheels of time rolled noiselessly on, and poor old blind Fate sat in the doorway of the future, with her palsied fingers untangling the skein of destiny, her withered lips all the while crooning those weird ditties whose echoes now and then thrill our souls with the warning of prophecy.

Jack was as tough as a lightwood knot, and nobody ever thought about him getting sick. He was too full of devilment to stay in bed, but they were very careful about me.

One winter we had an awful spell of weather and the stock suffered severely, for we had no shelter for them in the country in the days when I was a boy.

Jack had a favorite cow that had a little calf, and one cold drizzly afternoon the cow and calf failed to come home. Jack went in search of them, and it was late when he came back. He had brought the little calf in his arms a good portion of the way, and he drove the cow into the lot and gave her a big basket of shucks and nubbins, and put the little, weakly calf in a warm place.

It was dark when he came in, cold and tired, but he was as joyous and light-hearted as ever. He went over the rigmarole about—

"Amo daree my, romp stomp dominicker, shuck back, penniwinkle, instep nipcat, sing song kitty kin you kimee, O," and he cut a shuffle and turned a handspring as he came through the passage.

Before we went to bed we sat down before the fire and took the wet rags off his toes and tied them up with some dry ones, jokingly calling his big toe "big Ike," and the little toe "little Ike" as he fixed them.

During the night he woke me up telling me he was so hot and that he ached all over. I told him to go to sleep and not turn over and kick so much. Next morning he said he felt too bad to get up, and asked me to see about his cow and especially the calf.

I grumbled a good deal, and went and told grandma that Jack was too lazy to get up. She went to see about him and she said he had a fever. I went out and attended to the cow, expecting to find him up when I returned, but he was still tossing about in bed, and he began to talk foolish.

I scolded him about it and told grandma. She looked very grave when she went in and felt of his face, and she went and told one of the boys to go after the doctor.

Then I began to get uneasy. The place seemed so lonely and I never missed anyone so much in my life.

The cat dozed on the hearth in peace and the house was so quiet and still. The old doctor drove up to the gate in his sulky and took out his little leather saddle-bags and walked into the room where Jack was.

I watched him anxiously and when he took grandma aside and talked low to her I just caught the word "pneumonia." It was unfamiliar to me, and I felt a premonition of coming sorrow.

All day long I hung about the door, and late in the evening they told me that I would have to sleep in another room. I went in to see Jack, and he was tossing about, muttering something about his cow.

"I fed her, Jack, and I threw down some straw for her to sleep on," I said.

He looked at me, but he did not seem to understand. His eyes were so bright and his cheeks were so red that I didn't know what to make of it. That night I could not go to sleep and kept staring at the ceiling, thinking, thinking, thinking.

At last I got up softly and stole into his room. The candle was burning low and grandma and grandpa were sitting by the fire. Jack was lying still, with his eyes half open and he was breathing hard.

"Is he any better?" I asked, with a great lump in my throat.

"No, my son, he is mighty sick. Go back to bed now."

I went back to my room and I got down on my knees. I never will forget that night. I prayed: prayed as I never prayed before, as I have never prayed since. The words were broken with sobs.

Oh, the anguish of those dark hours! I would pray awhile and then I would stop and wonder if the good Lord heard me. Perhaps He was too busy at the time, and I would ask Him again in my childish simplicity, hoping that I might attract His attention.

A way long towards day I fell asleep and the sun was shining when I awoke, shining in the cloudless heavens, and the day was real mild.

I went into the room where the sick boy lay, and I saw that there was a change. His face was pale and his eyes sunken, and his breath came in gasps. I gulped down a sob as I looked at that shaggy head, and thought how often I had seen it bobbing about the house. Such a day as this we would be out about the lot and you could hear his whistle as merry as a mocking bird in May.

And now—

The candlestick with the half-burned candle, three medicine bottles on the mantel; the cup and the spoon and all the sad reminders of sickness and suffering. Aunt Ailsie walking softly about the room, keeping watch while the old folks got a little sleep.

"Is he any better?"

"No chile, he ain't no better, honey. De doctah say ef dey ain' some change po' little Jack won't be heah long."

I couldn't bear it. The good old mammy came and put her withered arms around me and kissed me and told me not to cry. I went out to the lot and Popper Joe was giving the cow some nubbins, and the calf was skipping clumsily around. The sight of them set me to crying again, and I turned away. Ah, the dismal day! Better the clouds and the dreary rain with Jack well, than floods of sunshine and he so sick. Late in the afternoon grandma called me.

"Come in here, son, Jack wants to see you."

I went into the room. The lingering rays of the wintry sun struggled in through the windows and fell on the snowy counterpane.

His face was ashen pale, and his eyes were no longer restless. He looked at me and a faint smile played about the pinched features. It was like the dying light of the wintry day.

He motioned me to come closer, and I found that his voice was so weak that he could but speak in whispers. The old doctor sat with his hand on the little wrist, and the family were gathered around the bed.

Then the fountains of my heart were broken up and I gave way to my grief.

"I want you to have all my things. Good-by," he whispered, and then they took me away.

As I lay sobbing and moaning in my room, I heard a cry from Aunt Ailsie:

"Oh, God bless my po' chile. Dey's one mo' angel done gone to glory!"

Now, I have told you the story. I cannot, even unto this day, dwell further on the sad theme. But it is a mystery to me why people should keep on harping about good boys and bad boys when I know just as well as I am sitting here that my boy comrade has gone to a better world than this!

And look at me. I was a model boy, and have lived to make more mistakes, suffer for more sins, and weep over more wrecked hopes than I can ever tell.

Dear old playmate, here is a tear to your memory, to the memory of a bad boy whose wantonness was mistaken for wickedness. Had you lived who knows but that your strength might have walled in my weakness, and kept these erring feet from straying.—Southern Farmer.

SPORT AT NILES.

Horse-Racing and a Baseball Tournament in June.

Niles, May 23.—The events at Gephart's driving park in this city during race week, from June 8 to 13, under the auspices of the Niles Jockey club, will constitute an era in the sporting history of southern Michigan. Here in Niles, where nothing like it has ever taken place, expectation is at its height. There will be horse racing every day at 2:30 p. m., with four races each day.

The Niles Derby will be run on Thursday, June 11. Several of the crack three-year-olds are entered in this event.

A tri-state baseball tournament, in which clubs from Michigan, Indiana and Illinois will participate, has been arranged and a game will be played every morning on June 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 at 10:45. The baseball events are under the direction of Tom Farley, of Chicago. Some of the contesting teams are undecided as to the day that will be most convenient for them to play, but the schedule and all details will be completed in a few days.

BOOTH'S CAPTOR DEAD.

Lieut. L. B. Baker, Who Caught the Assassin of Lincoln, Expires.

Lansing, May 25.—Lieut. Luther B. Baker, who, as an officer in the government detective service, had charge of the party which captured J. Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln, died here Saturday, aged 66 years. Lieut. Baker was the first to strike Booth's trail as he crossed the Rappahannock. He demanded the assassin's surrender at the barn and was the only person who conversed with Booth before the barn was fired. He was also the first person to reach Booth after Corbett shot him, and received his dying message to his mother. The horse Buckskin, which Baker rode on the occasion of Booth's capture, died here a few years ago, and his stuffed frame is in the museum at the Agricultural college. The story of the pursuit and capture was related by Lieut. Baker from the lecture platform many times during the last eight years.

WAR ON FORTUNE-TELLERS.

State Supreme Court Pursues Them Under an Old English Law.

Lansing, May 27.—According to an opinion of the supreme court handed down Tuesday, fortune-tellers will be likely to give Michigan a wide berth in the future. One Arthur Elmer, while pretending to foretell the future at Ionia, advised a woman to leave her husband for the reason that while in a trance he had seen him in the act of killing her. Elmer was arrested as a disorderly person and convicted. The supreme court affirms the judgment of the court below, and emphasizes the English statute which says that "every person pretending or professing to tell fortunes shall be deemed a rogue and a vagabond."

Agony

The wonderful cure related below is by no means unusual with Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has given health to suffering children, even when health seemed impossible. The secret of its success is that it purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood.

"I wish to tell of a wonderful cure effected by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Five years ago my little boy was suddenly seized with a severe lameness, apparently in his right knee, which some physicians said was rheumatism, while others said it was hip disease and that it was

Incurable

During the next winter and spring he became rapidly worse. We took Jimmie to a specialist, who said it was hip disease. At this time the affliction became so severe that we could not move him without causing screams of agony. He became reduced in weight to 30 pounds, and was but a shadow of his former self. We had about given up hope when we read of a cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla of a similar case. We resolved to try this medicine. Jimmie was decidedly improved after taking the first bottle. He was even after the second. We have since used over a dozen bottles of the medicine, and the change has exceeded our expectations. James is now able to walk without the aid of crutches and goes to school every day. He has been wonderfully cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla." J. O. RUNDELL, Oakley, Michigan.

Druggist C. C. Tubbs says he knows the Rundell boy has been wonderfully by Hood's Sarsaparilla and that Mr. Rundell is thoroughly reliable. He has a good sale of Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills, both of which are giving perfect satisfaction. He says Hood's Pills seem to be the coming family cathartic.

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy any other. Insist upon Hood's, because

NOT A SICK DAY For Over Thirty Years!

RESULT OF USING

AYER'S PILLS

"Ayer's Cathartic Pills for over thirty years have kept me in good health, never having had a sick day in all that time. Before I was twenty I suffered almost continually—as a result of constipation—from dyspepsia, headaches, neuralgia, or boils and other eruptive diseases. When I became convinced that nine-tenths of my troubles were caused by constipation, I began the use of Ayer's Pills, with the most satisfactory results, never having a single attack that did not readily yield to this remedy. My wife, who had been an invalid for years, also began to use Ayer's Pills, and her health was quickly restored. With my children I had noticed that nearly all their ailments were preceded by constipation, and I soon had the pleasure of knowing that with children as with parents, Ayer's Pills, if taken in season, avert all danger of sickness."—H. Cupid bow at it... a face full of p...ples and blotches. Hollow cheeks, sunken eyes, and a sallow complexion will defy his best intentions. Beauty is more than skin deep. The skin is merely the surface on which is written in plain characters the condition of the body. The skin is not a thing by itself, and skin diseases are frequently not skin diseases at all. All the lotions and bleaches and creams and powders in the world won't make a good complexion if the digestion is wrong. If the stomach is sour, and the liver torpid, and the bowels constipated, the skin will show it. No use trying to treat the skin for such a condition. The only way to relieve it is to cleanse the system and purify the blood. As long as the heart is pumping impurities to every part of the body, just so long these impurities will show through the skin.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is good for the complexion because it makes the whole body healthy—because it clears and purifies the blood, makes the digestion strong and clears out impurities of all kinds. By increasing the ability to assimilate nutritious food, and by the infusion of its own ingredients, it enriches the blood and so makes solid, healthy flesh. It fills out the hollows, rubs out wrinkles and substitutes for sallowness a rosy, healthy glow. There is no mystery about it. It isn't a miracle. It is merely the result of a combination of rational, natural common sense with expert medical knowledge. It cures diseases of the lungs, liver, stomach, bowels, skin and scalp, simply because all these diseases spring from the same cause—a disordered digestion and consequent impure blood. Don't let prejudice and scepticism cheat you out of your health. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will positively cure you, if suffering from diseases named above.

If you want to know hundreds of great medical truths, send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and we will send you FREE a copy of Dr. Pierce's 1008 page book, "Common Sense Medical Adviser." Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

FARM AND GARDEN.

PRETTY ROOF WINDOWS.

The Illustration Tells the Whole Story of Their Construction.

The chambers of many old-fashioned houses are dark and stuffy. They need light and air, which can be secured by letting windows into the roof. Double-roofed dormer windows are not particularly attractive, are quite expensive to build, and frequently leak. Besides they do not give the proper amount of room inside that is needed. A much better plan for roof windows is shown in the accompanying illustration, which tells its own story of construction. Here we have graceful lines and the maximum of room inside, the ceiling of the room finishing flush right out into the addition. In front of the window, if desired, can be constructed a window box for flowers, as shown. In this case a gutter must be placed above the window to catch the drip. The rafters for such a dormer window can be cut from seven-eighths-inch boards, these being perfectly strong to support the weight of the dormer roof, which is, of course, very light. Cut from boards it is very easy to get the curved roof. Such windows can be added to a roof very cheaply and will give the greatest satisfaction, as the writer knows by experience.—Orange Judd Farmer.

PROSPEROUS HOMES.

Found on Every Farm Where Improvement Is the Watchword.

From all sections of the country comes an earnest expression of a desire for improvement along all lines of effort. This desire is the logical result of the improved condition of the farmers produced by their wise action last year in making their supplies at home. The home is the starting point for advancement and progress. Make the home self-sustaining and its inmates comfortable and happy, and it is easier then to establish the community and country on a higher plane of prosperity. The essential thing is to get the home in a prosperous condition, and no home can be prosperous unless the owners live there—live in the true meaning of the word, and not simply exist there. The farm is the farmer's world and the home the heart and center of that world. In conducting the farm on sound business principles it is vitally important that provision must first be made for the sustenance of the family and live stock necessary to conduct operations on the farm. With this as a basis, decreasing expenditures, the money crop will be a surplus one, and the producer will be, to a certain extent, independent.

The expression of a general desire for improvement is an omen of better times. It is prophetic of still greater improvement of the condition of the farmer, of the soil he cultivates, in his system of cultivation, and in the handling of the products of the farm. Let improvement be the watchword.—Southern Cultivator.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Very few animals are as dainty or as choice in their food as sheep.

To plow manure deep is to lose a good part of the possible benefit.

The health of the animal affects the quality and quantity of the wool.

The first gait to teach the young colt is a good, strong smart walk.

Feed the lambs as soon as they are able to eat, and keep them growing.

Mixed husbandry in gardening and fruit growing is essential to success.

A little boiled linseed meal given in the milk will be found good for colts.

In selecting and breeding horses look for three things, size, action and sense.

Both the fertility and moisture needed by growing crops is taken up by the weeds.

It does not pay to keep all kinds of and all sizes of hogs in the same pen and on the same feed.

A careless hand will often cause more loss than he is worth. Pay a fair price and secure good help.

Under present conditions it does not pay to raise mongrel cattle, as they cost as much as good grades and sell for less.—Farmers' Review.

Devastation of Forests.

The devastation of forests still goes on in various parts of the country, which, unlike New York and a few of the eastern and middle states, do not appreciate the value of trees. Unfortunately, this appreciation, even in the east, has come too late. It is proudly announced in a western paper that a large syndicate has acquired possession of 40,000 acres of timber land in northern Idaho. It is estimated that this area will yield more than 400,000,000 feet of white and yellow pine, red and white fir, cedar and tamarack. The arid waste which it will also yield is not taken into consideration in this estimate. Americans have too long looked upon trees as in their way unless they could be used to build fires or for commercial purposes. This was true a few hundred years ago in Germany; but now a man who cuts down a tree must plant one to take its place, or suffer a penalty. Probably a like provision will be enacted here some time, but it should come before many more trees are felled.

RESTORING PASTURES.

Harrowing in Clover Seed Is Given as an Excellent Plan.

The maintenance of pasture lands has become one of the important problems in connection with farm management. Our system of close grazing, followed by periods of prolonged drought inevitably leads to weakened vitality of grass plants, resulting in deficient stand and reduced productiveness. One of the best plans of renovation, says the Massachusetts Plowman, is to harrow in some clover seed. From experiments at the Iowa station it appeared that clover seed disced into blue grass pasture at the rate of ten quarts per acre increased the yield 65 per cent., the equivalent of 1,500 pounds of cured hay per acre. Good, fine barnyard manure applied to blue grass pasture at the rate of 20 tons per acre increased the yield 74 per cent., equivalent to 1,700 pounds of cured hay per acre.

The addition of 30 pounds of grass seed per acre, together with the discing and harrowing, increased the yield of grass 32.6 per cent. or the equivalent of 800 pounds of hay per acre.

A top-dressing of liquid manure, 500 gallons to the acre, without grass or clover seed, increased the yield only 26.5 per cent.

The pasture used for the test was stated to be rather poor, shallow, gravelly soil; with a fairly good natural stand of grass.

The results show that clover seed gave twice as much increase as grass seed, and more than twice as much as that produced by liquid manure.

In the practice of treating pastures with clover seed and the disc, the work can be very much reduced by applying the seed early while the ground is soft in order that a part of it may be covered by the tramping of stock, and the discing and harrowing should also be done at a time when the surface will be most readily loosened. With many pastures the rocks prevent the use of the disc machine, and in such cases considerable can be accomplished with the old-style tooth-harrow. But a disk harrow should be used in the clear places.

REPAIRING FENCES.

Stout Galvanized Wire Is Far Better for Mending Than Nails.

Mending pasture fences is often a prominent element in the regular summer work of the farm. The boards used in pasture fencing are usually of a cheap quality, and either decay rapidly or warp and twist out of shape, either of which evils has a tendency to free the ends of the boards from the posts. To again nail these ends to the posts is but to temporize. They will soon be off again. A much better way to mend such breaks is by using the plan shown in the accompanying illustration. Stout galvanized wire is now exceedingly cheap. It is just the material to use in making repairs upon board fences. Secure the end of the wire to the top of the post so that it cannot slip down, and then bind it about the post and the ends of the boards in the manner shown, making it fast at the bottom. Such repairing is easy, and, best of all, it is effective and lasting. Such wire may also be used in binding pole fences to the stakes which support them.—N. Y. Tribune.

Receding Clover Meadows.

The Ohio Experiment station is now planning some experiments in attempting to get a stand of clover on fields sown last spring, but which failed to make a perfect stand, owing to the drought. The bare spots in these fields will first be gone over with a sharp spike harrow, or with a disk harrow; crimson clover and common clover will then be sown side by side, and lightly covered in with smoothing harrow. A light seeding of oats as a nurse crop may be added on part of the land, for comparison, but we expect the best results from seeding the clover alone. Last season's experience demonstrated that the nurse crop may prove a robber instead of a nurse, by taking all the water from the soil and leaving none for the clover.

Care of Grass Lands.

Almost anything spread thinly over grass lands will help them. Even material not very rich and which itself will not grow a good crop will make the grass grow better, because it acts as a mulch for the grass roots beneath. The washings of poor uplands will fertilize the richer soil of the valleys below. But except where top dressings can be thus done naturally by irrigation it will not pay to top dress with poor material. The labor will be too great, and it will trample and cut up the grass too much unless the fertilizing material is put on during the winter.

The Saving of Fertilizers.

Do not let an ounce of fertility on the farm go to waste. Utilize every thing that has in it any elements that will enrich the soil, and take such care of your manures that the best part of them is not lost before they reach your fields. Every farm should have a compost heap, where all sorts of refuse from the house, barn and yards can be thrown. A good many tons of the most valuable fertilizers can be saved in this manner, fertilizers that now go you know not where.—Farm News.

Rocked the Boat.

Oak Harbor, O., May 26.—Two men named Hugh Conroy and Steve Janssen, each aged about 25, and Mrs. Mary Janssen, the wife of the last named, were drowned in the lake near here by the upsetting of their boat. Conroy was responsible for the accident. He was partly intoxicated and persisted in rocking the boat.

Eleven Persons Drowned.

Cairo, Ill., May 27.—A terrific hurricane and cloudburst struck this city at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The extent of the destruction of property cannot yet be ascertained, but it is known at least a dozen lives were lost through the capsizing of the steam ferryboat Katherine.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

Deserontd, Ont., May 27.—Fire broke out yesterday in the tile dock of Rathburn & Co., and in a short time spread northward and eastward until it had swept away almost the entire eastern portion of the town. About 75 families are homeless. The loss will aggregate over $350,000.

Whole Family Murdered.

Ava, Mo., May 25.—The whole Sawyer family, consisting of father, mother and grown-up son, were discovered in their home one mile east of this place Saturday foully murdered. Edward Perry, the supposed murderer, was arrested. Robbery was the motive.

Family Quarrel Ends in Death.

Cleveland, O., May 26.—August Guenther, 45 years old, shot his wife, Minnie, Monday morning, at their home, 54 Hackman street, and then turned the weapon on himself. Both are dead. The tragedy was the result of a family quarrel.

Killed in a Mine.

Butte, Mont., May 27.—Peter Connelly and John Nolan were instantly killed and their bodies terribly mangled Tuesday by premature explosion of a blast in the J. I. C. mine.

Bitten by a Tarantula.

Kalamazoo, May 27.—Mrs. J. C. Crogin was bitten by a tarantula which came out of a bunch of bananas, and became a raving manic, but hopes of her recovery are entertained.

Dies from His Bath in Beer.

Houghton, May 24.—Anton Funke, who jumped into a large cooling vat full of beer at the Haas brewery on Monday, died Saturday morning from the effects of his bath.

A Fatal Fall.

Benton Harbor, May 22. — Duncan MacKellar, a contractor, fell 25 feet from a scaffold to a concrete pavement, receiving fatal injuries.

Poisoned Himself.

Coldwater, May 23.—Ambrose Bunnell, 66 years of age, rendered despondent by poor health, committed suicide by poison.

Died of Lockjaw.

Detroit, May 25.—Mrs. Albert Knox, of Ganges, stepped on a rusty nail and died of lockjaw.

According to the St. Louis City directory, just issued, the population of that city is 611,268.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.

The Damage Enormous—Only One Safe Way to Live.

A few weeks since a paragraph appeared calling attention to the immense amount of damage which had been done within the past two months by lightning. The loss of property in that time in this section of the state has been simply appalling and almost every day now has its thunder shower and adds to the list of casualties. We also spoke of the service done in this connection by our veteran lightning rod man, John F. Hicks. As nearly every exchange which comes to our table relates some fresh disaster and as the life and property of nearly every householder seems to be in jeopardy, it is but fair to suppose that our readers would be interested in an investigation into the merits of lightning rods as a protection, since they are the only means which science has yet offered as a safeguard against the omnipotent electric discharge. A little light also on the methods of hanling this useful commodity would no come amiss in this connection.

Apropos to this idea Mr. Hicks was consulted in regard not only to the practicability of and actual results obtained by the use of a lightning rod, but also to the methods employed in selling and putting them up. As Mr. Hicks has spent upwards of 40 years in the continued and successful prosecution of this business and as his work has found favor and praise during all this time among men of the highest reputation and safety, his experience would probably furnish as reliable data as could be procured on this subject.

The theory of lightning rod protection is founded upon one of the simplest and best known laws of physical science. Every school boy knows that electricity will find and follow the best conductor.

The practice part of this business is to always have the rods so adjusted as to make a perfect conductor, and then, and then only, do they afford a perfect protection.

Mr. Hicks not only erects his rods with the best workmanship on scientific principles, but guarantees to keep them in perfect repair and his guarantee is good. The two principal points in regard to rod's conductivity are the point or and the ground connections. In regard of points, Mr. Hicks showed a dozen or so which had been struck and considered useless and which had been replaced by him. These points had been taken from the Union school, Globe Mill, the buildings of Chauncey Coopand C. W. Greenleaf, of Cambridge, John Seeler, of Brooklyn, and others. One notable instance was the Germ church at Richville, Tuscola Co., thiate. Before rodding, the building was damaged by lightning over $1,000 dollars worth. The church was then roded and it has since sustained the heavy strokes without injury, as time melting the points and ornaments, which have been replaced free of charge.

In regard to the ground connections, Mr. Hick with the advice of such men as Prof. Kedzie, of the Agricultural College, has devised a battery test by which he can instantly make a perfect and satisfactory test of this most important condition of the rod.

Concerning the experience of Mr. Hicks in his business and his methods of doing it, his integrity and responsibility as the confidence placed in the protection of lightning rods as handled by him among most practical and successful business men, we append the following:

Adrian, Mich.
June 5nd 1890.

This is to certify that I have known Mr. John F. Hicks of Tecumseh, Mich., for the last 30 years, and that 18 years ago he erected upon my buildings his improved Lightning Conductors, agreeing at the time to keep them in good repair without cost to me, which he has done to my entire satisfaction, and this day has been at my place and tested the conductors with his electric battery, to see they were in prime order, and also to determine if the ground connections were still perfect. He has found them in perfect working order, and I am now more satisfied than ever that Lightning Rods are a protection to life and property when erected on buildings in a scientific manner and the ground connections made perfect. I have never known of any work Mr. Hicks has done which has not given good satisfaction. Nor have I ever known a building to be damaged by lightning which he has rodded. I am well pleased with the work Mr. Hicks has done for me and do not hesitate to recommend him to every one wishing lightning conductors placed on their buildings, as perfectly reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

Z. Cook,
Pres. and Treas. of the Farmer's Mutual Fire Ins. Co. Lenawee Co. Mich.

Mr. Hicks has similar statements from such well known business men and farmers as Lucius Lilley, C. A. Slayton, Webb Anderson, Robert Cairns, A. Richard and Nathan Spencer, of Raisin, E. Howell, of Macon, Wm. K. Childs, Secy. of the Washtenaw Insurance Co., and a host of others.

A certificate from the Tecumseh school board reads as follows:

Aug. 4th 1884.

The undersigned, members of the school board of the village of Tecumseh, certify to the permanency and durability of the rods placed upon our school building by Jno. F. Hicks. Said rods were erected 25 years ago, sometime since receiving a heavy stroke of electricity, melting the points but carrying the electricity to the ground without damage to the building or the inmates. Said points were replaced without cost to the district. We cheerfully recommend Jno. F. Hicks to parties wanting lightning rods.

Samuel Catlin
S. G. Stacy,
David McNair,
Lucius Lilley.

Beside his business relations in this section, Mr. Hicks is equally well and favorably known in this connection in Northern Michigan. For over twenty-five years he has done rodding in the Saginaw valley and adjacent country with the success which has always attended his work in this section as the following will show:

First National Bank,
East Saginaw, Mich.,
July 13, 1895.

This is to certify that twenty-five years since Mr. J. F. Hicks, of Tecumseh, Mich., rodded my residence and barn in East Saginaw, and agreed to keep it in good order free of expense to me, and that he has this day examined the buildings by testing the same with his battery in my presence and finds the rods and groundins so satisfactory that I have ordered my farm house and barns at Blacknar rodded, as I consider his system of rodding a full protection as against the effects of lightning. I have full confidence in his integrity and his system of rodding buildings, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of his services.

E. T. Judd, President.

Sept. 1st 1894.

This is to certify that I have been acquainted with Mr. J. F. Hicks, of Tecumseh, Mich., for the past 25 years, he having at that time placed on my residence in this city and on my farm buildings in South Saginaw, his improved Lightning Rods, agreeing at the time to keep the same in good repair, without cost to me, which has been done to my entire satisfaction. On looking the work over this 1st day of September he found that one of the points on the cupola of the 120 foot barn had been struck and melted, which he replaced without cost to me. I am satisfied that the little money which the farmer pays out for good lightning rods is money well spent. Mr. Hicks has just placed rods on my cluster of farm buildings in Gratiot and Saginaw Counties, there being 19 buildings that he rodded. The work requiring 2,808 feet of rod and 54 points, and I consider the money well spent, as I believe them a perfect protection from lightning, and the work has been done to my entire satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend Mr. Hicks to every one wishing lightning rods placed on their buildings, as perfectly reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

D. L. C. Eaton.

It is a quite prevalent idea and one perhaps substantiated by fact, that the lightning rod business has sometimes born the earmarks of "fake." This may even be true as practiced by some agents. Concerning their methods, we have nothing to say either for or against. In this connection we simply say that the work of Mr. Hicks as alluded to above, speaks for itself. A few of the points discovered are these: Rods properly put up are a safe protection. Properly taken care of they continue a safe protection. Mr. Hicks does both these things and his guarantee is as good as gold. Again, no business in Michigan is conducted on sounder business principles than the manner in which he does his work. He or his representative can always be found at 51 Union St., Tecumseh, Mich., to do new work or make good that which has already been done by him.

A Valuable Prescription.

Editor Morrison, of Worthington, Ind., Sun, writes: You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bitters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for constipation and sick headache, and as a general system tonic it has no equal. Mrs. Annie Stehle, 2625 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, was all run down, could not eat nor digest food, had a backache which never left her and felt tired and weary, but six bottles of Electric Bitters restored her health and renewed her strength. Prices 50c and $1. Get a bottle at Baker & Hall's drug store. 6

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an ideal panacea for coughs, colds and lung complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physician's prescriptions or other preparations.

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: I have been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church for 50 years or more, and have never found anything so beneficial, or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery. Try this ideal cough remedy now. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's drug store. 6

ROUND ABOUT US.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

Circuit Court adjourned last week until June 1st.

Ann Arbor's city fathers do not allow carts to be pushed on the sidewalks.

The Morenci Observer has a bran new dress, which becomes the sheet very much.

Crop reports show great devastation to the wheat crop from rust and the Hessian fly.

The Great Camp of the K. O. T. M. exemplified the new ritual at Ann Arbor Wednesday.

A village of eight acres has been laid out at Clark's Lake and the plat has been filed in the office of register of deeds.

The gold medal contest held in the Methodist church at Adrian last Friday evening was won by Miss Lida Pate, of Adrian. Eight contestants took part.

Two lads aged 11 each were drowned while bathing in an artificial pond just over the Ohio state line, Saturday. Their names were Harry Meguerer and Floyd Bell.

Rev. Whitney, of the Adrian Baptist church, preached his farewell sermon last Sunday. The pulpit will be supplied during the summer by Chicago theological students.

The new Lima Northern will run from the crossing point on the Wabash near Seneca to Jackson. It will probably enter Adrian on the Wabash and run into Detroit over that line.

Adrian and Hillsdale champions held a field day of sports at the latter place last Monday. A good day was had, but the Hillsdale boys won a majority of events on account of superior training.

Fire destroyed the old Gillis mill, a land mark of Morenci, at about 2 o'clock last Friday morning. Several contingent buildings were also consumed with little insurance. The direction of the wind saved the town.

Quite a disgraceful row occured recently at Ann Arbor over a freshman banquet. The University, as usual, claims it was caused by "town hoodlums" Town hoodlums are bad enough but not a circumstance to U. of M. ruffians of the same stamp.

It is said that only a dozen Adrian people are candidates for the county offices this fall. We move to make it unanimous and give the porcine Adrianites a life lease of all the county offices.—Blissfield Advance. Second the motion, Mr. President.

Herbert Benedict, of Jackson, champion 35 mile runner of Michigan, ran 10 miles at the fair ground, Thursday of last week, in one hour and 10 minutes.—Ann Arbor Argus. That is very good but simply nothing at all for Cowboy Smith who did 10 miles here on short laps in less than one hour.

The general store of W. S. Culver at Brooklyn was entered last Thursday night by parties prying up a window. As nothing is left in the safe, it was left unlocked and was not disturbed. A few pennies were taken from the cash register. The job was probably done by local talent.

The editor of Judge recently passed to the judgement side of the river, the editor of puck passed away last week and since the free silver knock out at the recent democratic state convention, Willard Stearns, of the Adrian Press, has not felt at all well. The present year has killed several humorists and sagged the constitutions of others.—Monroe Democrat.

The most terrific cyclone ever experienced in Michigan swept over Mt. Clemens and part of Oakland county last Monday evening. The loss of life has reached the number of 45 with as many more seriously injured. The destruction of property can hardly be estimated. Our state has always been considered especially fortunate in respect to cyclones of such fury and extent, but now has suffered alike with her western sisters. Relief is being sent to the sufferers.

The following facts go to prove that the high license law is the most practical way of dealing with the liquor question: In 1894 the total number of dealers in spirituous liquors in the state was 3, 011, and the tax paid $1,410,804.87. In 1895 the number of dealers was 3,928, an increase of 917, and the tax paid $1,886,966 27, and increase of $476,161 37 In 1894 however, the number of beer licenses taken out was 1,524, the amount of tax paid being $415,193 50 In 1895 the number of dealers showed a decrease of 1,404. and the amount of tax paid $12,786 28, a decrease of $402,407 22.

Mayor Pingree speaks at Morenci to the high school graduates June 2nd. The distinguished gentleman is given to learned, polished, scholarly productions couched in choice English, at times, and if he gets off an original speech instead of one that has been written for him by "Alec", he will make the grammars and the bibles in the school tumble out of their places. Hazen will incidentally grab for some of his gubernational boom as has not sunk from sight, and you can set down Seneca for a solid Pingree poultice at the next republican convention. —Adrian Press.

Two young Tecumsehites, recently wandering in the cemetery, were chased by a bogus ghost and fled, covered with "goose pimples." The "ghost" may yet meet the fate of the joker, who having wrapped himself in a sheet, laid him on a grave in the gloaming and uttered a sepulchral groan, as a man with a rope halter on his arm strode by from his pasture. The man with the halter stopped, gazed a moment at the "ghost," then sliding the halter into his hands, belabored the "spirit" unmercifully, shouting. Git into yer hole! What'r yer doin out in the dew at this time o'night"—Monroe Democrat.

Farmers' Social Club.

Tuesday afternoon the members of the Farmer's Social Club laid aside cares and responsibilities for a few hours and gathered at the home of Mr. John Fisher to enjoy with one another the pleasures of the May meeting. This is always a much anticipated meeting with the society, and this year, with Mr. Fisher as host and Miss Ellen as hostess, the enjoyment exceeded all expectation.

Mrs. Benedict, Mrs. Ora Gillespie, Ellen Fisher and Hazel Roberts provided the music for the afternoon.

A couple of recitations were rendered and an essay entitled, "Home Making," read by Mrs. Finch, plainly pictured the difference between house keeping and home making.

Mrs. Remington's original poem contained many beautiful thoughts and was one of the features of the afternoon.

Mr. Coddington related reminiscences of the rebellion in a true soldier's spirit, giving some of the trials and hardships encountered by the brave boys in blue, and closed his remarks with an amusing story.

Mr. Bowen read a brief but well worded paper on "Lessons of the Past Year in Farming," which was followed by a short discussion.

Supper was then announced, and on entering the dining room the sight that met the vision would have satisfied an epicure. The tables fairly bent beneath the weight of provisions, provided by the ladies and the quality of each article of food was par excellence. After lingering some time in social chat the company seperated, agreeing to meet in June at the lake for an all day picnic.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Special Session.

Council Room, May 6th, 1896.

Present entire council, excepting trustee Boyd.

Saloonist's bond of William J. Arnold, duly executed, in the penal sum of $3,500, with Henry Smith and Geo. Merritt as sureties, presented for approval. Moved that bond, with sureties named, be approved. Supported; carried.

Council then adjourned.

W. J. Ingersoll, Village Clerk.

Regular Session.

Council Room, May 18, 1896.

Present, entire council, excepting Trustee Lowry.

Minutes of last regular meeting and special meeting of May 6th, 1896, read and approved.

Chairman of street committee reported that the committee had examined the Union street bridge and that the same was found to be in a very bad condition; that piling is all gone at south end of bridge and that timber in same is in a rotten condition. That it is absolutely necessary that a new bridge be erected at once to replace old one. Accepted and ordered placed on file.

Moved that committee ascertain the probable cost of different kinds of bridge for place and that they report at next meeting. Supported; carried.

Street commissioner's report for period from May 4th until May 18th, 1896, presented, showing village team labor 10½ days. Hired team labor 9 days 6 hours, cost $24.00. Twelve days poll tax worked. Accepted and ordered placed on file.

The following bills were reported by the clerk and referred to the finance committee: Cement walks—E. G. Cook, $37.52; George Merritt, $11.55; George W. Knapp, $7.00. Labor—Dell Packard, $13.75; William Fielder, $24.00. C. F. Field, printing, $2.90. Committee reporting favorably on all of above bills, clerk was instructed to draw his orders on the treasurer for the said several sums.

Moved that the recommendation of the President that the ordinance relating to the village paying one-fourth of the cost of cement walks be repealed, be not considered and that recommendation be placed on the table. Supported; carried.

Ordinance committee was instructed to prepare and present at next meeting an ordinance relative to village police.

Council then adjourned.

W. J. Ingersoll, Village Clerk.

HELP IS NEEDED.

Cyclone Victims Suffering for the Necessaries of Life.

Oxford, May 30. — As time passes it becomes more and more apparent that all aid which can be given the cyclone sufferers by the generous people of this vicinity will not be nearly adequate to meet the demand when divided among the many sufferers. The people throughout the state must be appealed to. Could the people generally gaze upon the destruction of the devastated district no appeal in words would be necessary. Some systematic way of soliciting aid throughout the state will doubtless be devised. The people are not only suffering for the immediate necessities of life, but they must have places to shelter their families and their stock. Help must be furnished at once to clear away the debris scattered throughout fields and to rebuild fences sufficient to protect crops from the stock. Should the farmers attempt to do this themselves they will not be able to get their ground in shape for any crops whatever this season, and fall would find them with nothing whatever to sell or live upon during the winter.

Lansing, June 2.—This state will supply to the Michigan cyclone sufferers a sufficient number of tents for temporary shelter, until houses can be erected. Gov. Rich is receiving generous donations, and is having personal charge of the distributions.

FOUND IN CHICAGO.

Plunder Stolen from a Battle Creek Store Recovered—Thief Captured.

Battle Creek, May 28.—The young man who stole silks valued at $2,500 from the Leader dry goods store and then attempted to burn the store on the morning of April 28, has been located by Deputy Sheriff King. He gives his name as Péroy Bennett, is 18 years old and his parents live at Cleveland, O. Bennett left the city the following Saturday night after the robbery was committed with two packing boxes and a trunk containing the silks for Chicago. He was soon followed by King, who located where he had been stopping in the outskirts of that city, but had left for Springfield, Ill., where he did a job of the same kind, carrying out $40,000 worth of goods to the roof of the building. He was nabbed in the act by Springfield officers. The silks taken from here are in storage in Chicago.

MUST PAY $12,000.

Verdict Against Edgar Pells for Breach of Promise.

Petoskey, June 1. — A dispatch received from Medina, N. Y., states that a verdict has been rendered against Edgar Pells, of this city, for $12,000 for breach of promise. Mr. Pells spends several months every year in this city. He is proprietor of the little village of Pellston, 17 miles north of here, on the Grand Rapids & Indiana, and in the immediate vicinity of that village he owns about 20,000 acres of land. He came here in 1875, and invested largely in swamp and timber lands, and has since made a fortune in land speculation and lumbering estimated at $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. He is a smooth-faced, mild-mannered, jolly little man, about 40 years of age, and a prime favorite with the quiet bachelor set in which he moves.

Oldest Resident Dead.

Howell, May 28.—Livingston county lost its oldest resident Wednesday by the death of Henry Higgins Smith, who died at his home in this city aged 88 years. He was born in Utica, N. Y., December 8, 1807, and moved to Livingston county in 1835, taking up a claim and then returning to his eastern home. The next year he came back to Michigan and settled down where Howell now stands. He was a prominent figure in early days in this vicinity, and was known by all men as a man of unflinching integrity. He leaves a widow and two sons, and two sisters also survive him.

Murdered His Betrothed.

Chelsea, May 31. — Emma Morekel was shot and killed Saturday night by her fiance, Fred Hydloff, who was in a jealous rage because the young woman had been escorted home by another man. Hydloff then shot himself, and not succeeding in fatally wounding himself, he tried to batter his own brains out, but he was finally controlled and taken into custody.

Attempted Assassination.

Kalamazoo, May 31.—Twelve shots were fired at Thomas McHugh, president of the Molders' union, Saturday at midnight by unknown parties. The trouble arose, as alleged, over union and nonunion molders' differences. McHugh's escape and the names of his probable assailants are much discussed.

Fell Overboard.

Detroit, June 1. — Will H. Riedy, a well-known local amateur athlete, member of the Detroit Athletic club, and the Detroit Boat club, fell overboard from the yacht City of the Straits Sunday afternoon, and before assistance could reach him he sank and was drowned.

Too Much Rope-Jumping.

Grand Rapids, May 30.—As a result of excessive rope jumping Grace Parker, a 13-year-old girl, was seriously injured about a week ago and died Friday after undergoing a difficult operation at the U. B. A. hospital.

—The Brooklyn bridge is 278 feet above the river.

SHORT BITS OF NEWS.

Interesting Occurrences in Various Localities in Michigan.

The huckleberry crop in the upper peninsula has been damaged by frost.

Copper is said to have been found three miles from Petoskey, whether in paying quantities will be determined later.

William Wilbur, of Wilbur, aged 74 years, was found dead in an outhouse on his place. Heart disease was the cause.

Brig. Gen. Hawley intends to make rifle practice a prominent feature of the coming encampment of the state troops.

Burglars cleaned out Sensiba's jewelry store and the post office at Stephenson, taking $100 in stamps and six dollars in cash.

Grasshoppers in large numbers have made their appearance in the vicinity of North Adams and considerable anxiety is felt by farmers for their crops.

Many farmers in Van Buren county will plow up their wheat fields, and plant corn, the wheat having been ruined by hail, rust and the Hessian fly.

A special election will be held in Three Oaks, Berrien county, June 8, to vote on a proposition to bond the village for $10,650 to put in a system of waterworks.

Judge Allen C. Adsit, of the circuit court, while riding a bicycle in Grand Rapids, ran into a grocery wagon Tuesday night, was kicked by the horse and severely hurt.

Owen Roberts, of Port Huron, will begin suit against Eddy Bros., of Detroit, for $10,000 for personal injuries sustained two years ago by the bursting of a bottle of sulphuric acid shipped by the Detroit firm to the Sulphite Fiber company.

A STRANGE CASE.

Calhoun County Woman Said to Have Fasted for 100 Days.

La Porte, Ind., June 1. — Mrs. Henry Ingram, of Calhoun county, Mich., on Sunday entered upon the 100th day of her record-breaking fast. During this period she has not taken a morsel of food of any kind and does not appear to need anything to eat. Her health remains about the same, and her physicians are at a loss to account for her condition, nor are they able to break her fast, which promises only to end by death. The strange condition of Mrs. Ingram, as published in the newspapers, resulted in bringing together her two brothers-in-law, each of whom had mourned the other as dead. George Ingram, of Lyons, N. Y., found in Henry Ingram, of Detroit, Mich., his long-lost brother, and Sunday at the bedside of Mrs. Ingram they were reunited.

Carpenters Satisfied.

Detroit, May 30.—At a meeting of the striking carpenters Friday morning an agreement signed by President Helson for the Carpenter Contractors' association was submitted, and on the basis of the same the strike was declared off. The agreement states that the contractors will continue to pay the same rates, from 20 to 25 cents an hour for nine hours' work, and one-fourth more for overtime until January 1, 1897, after which date they will pay a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour for eight hours' work, and one-fourth overtime.

They Have the Vouchers.

Niles, June 3.—The shortage of 4,584 in the waterworks fund, which was discovered a week ago by an expert accountant while at work on the books and which created such a sensation in the city, was cleared up satisfactorily Monday night at the council meeting. The committee of the old council which had charge of the construction of the waterworks submitted a report showing that the money had been paid to the contractors. It also produced vouchers for the amount.

A "Scorcher" Killed.

Bay City, June 3.—Hiram Cone, the foreman in the assembly room of the National Bicycle works, while "scorching" down Madison street, ran directly in front of an electric car. He was going so fast that he could not stop in time to avoid a collision. His companion, John Large, who was also scorching, hit the car and was thrown off, receiving painful injuries. Cone's body was dragged under the wheels 50 feet and horribly mutilated. Cone leaves a family of three.

Found Dead in Her Bed.

Sturgis, May 28.—The wife of Supervisor William E. McKee, of Fawn River, residing 4½ miles southeast of Sturgis, was found dead in her bed Wednesday morning. She was a very estimable lady. Mr. McKee came to Sturgis early on business. He looked at his wife before leaving and thought her asleep. He learned of her death several hours later and is nearly prostrated from grief.

Suicide at Ionia.

Ionia, May 28.—H. J. Cable, keeper of a restaurant, corner of Depot and Front streets, committed suicide by taking strichnine Wednesday afternoon. He bought a dose of the poison at Van Allen's drug store at two o'clock, and when in front of the post office swallowed it. He was taken to his home and died within a half hour.

Killed at St. Louis.

Muskegon, May 29.—Among the victims of the St. Louis cyclone was J. Earle Keane, of this city, who was in the Vandalia frieight office as a clerk. He was to have been married next month to Miss Lottie Nichols, formerly of this city, but now of Chicago.

OUR LAWMAKERS.

What They Are Doing at the National Capital.

Measures of Importance That Are Under Consideration in the Senate and the House—Bills Passed and Others Considered.

Washington, May 28. — The senate yesterday defeated the proposition to increase the beer tax 75 cents a barrel by a vote of 34 to 27. The filled-cheese bill was further discussed, as was also the bond bill. A bill was favorably reported to increase pay of letter carriers throughout the United States.

Washington, May 29.—The bond bill was further discussed in the senate yesterday Senator Carter, of Montana, gave notice of an amendment to the filled-cheese bill, putting on a tax and establishing regulations against adulterated beer.

Washington, May 30.—In the senate yesterday the bill for the repeal of the free alcohol clause of the Wilson tariff act was passed, as was also the house bill concerning the distillation of brandy from fruits. Adjourned to Monday.

Washington, June 2.—The bill to prohibit the issuance of interest-bearing bonds without the consent of congress was further discussed in the senate yesterday, but no action was taken.

Washington, June 3.—The senate yesterday passed the bill to prohibit the issuance of interest-bearing bonds without the consent of congress by a vote of 32 to 25.

THE HOUSE.

Bills Introduced and Petitions and Resolutions Presented.

Washington, May 28. — The house spent almost the entire time yesterday discussing the senate amendment to the general deficiency bill appropriating large sums for various claims, and it was adopted finally.

Washington, May 29.—In the house yesterday a partial conference report on the Indian appropriation bill occasioned an animated controversy. A resolution adopted by the senate providing for the loan of tents by the war department and such other relief as the secretary may deem necessary to the sufferers by the St. Louis storm was concurred in.

Washington, May 30.—In the house yesterday no business was transacted. A message was received from the president vetoing the river and harbor bill. Adjourned to Monday.

Washington, June 2.—In the house yesterday the bill authorizing the appointment of a labor committee of 20 members to investigate the relations of labor and capital and to report to congress desirable legislation in relation thereto was passed.

Washington, June 3.—The river and harbor appropriation bill was passed over the president's veto yesterday by the unexpected heavy vote of 220 yeas to 60 nays. The republicans, with practical unanimity, and 39 democrats, with one populist, made up the affirmative vote, while the negative vote was about equally divided between the republicans and democrats, five populists voting with them.

STEVENSON-HARDIN NUPTIALS.

Brilliant Wedding at Washington of the Vice President's Daughter.

Washington, June 3.—The marriage of Miss Julia Stevenson, daughter of the vice president of the United States, to Rev. Martin D. Hardin, of Lexington, Ky., which took place Tuesday evening at the New York avenue Presbyterian church, the largest edifice of that denomination in the city, was a brilliant affair, attended by all the high officials, including President Cleveland and Mrs. Cleveland, and most of the diplomatic corps. The bridegroom is the son of Gen. P. Watt Hardin, the recent democratic candidate for governor of Kentucky. Miss Stevenson was attended by her sister, Miss Letitia Stevenson, as maid of honor, and four bridesmaids, Miss Letitia Scott, Miss Jane Hardin, Miss Julia Scott and Miss Julia Hardin.

Blaine's Body to Be Removed.

Augusta, Me., June 2.—The body of the late James G. Blaine will be taken from Oak Hill cemetery, Washington, and will be brought to this city. Mrs. Blaine has decided to have both the bodies of her husband and her son Walker buried here, and the removal will occur probably this month. Mrs. Blaine has purchased three acres on the front of Burnt Hill for the purpose.

Women's Peace League Delegates.

Washington, June 3.—The American branch of the Women's International Peace league has selected Mrs. Mary F. The readers of this paper will be pleased to know that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Nowadays when women are trying to do everything it is not strange that many things are over-done. It is not strange that there are all kinds of mental and physical disturbances. If the woman who is a doctor, or a lawyer, or a journalist, or in business would not try to be a society woman too it might be different; but the woman who knows when she has done a day's work has yet to be born. Usually a woman's way is to keep doing until she drops. Working in this way has manifold evils. The most common trouble resulting from over-exertion, either mentally or physically, is constipation of the bowels with all its attendant horrors.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most effectual remedy in the market. They work upon the system easily, naturally. There is no unpleasant nausea after taking them. No griping—no pain—no discomfort. They are composed of materials that go through the system gradually, collecting all impurities and, like the good little servants that they are, disposing of them effectually. 1w

"I have never had a day's sickness in my life," said a middle-aged man the other day.

"What a comfort it would be," sighs some poor invalid, "to be in his place for a year or two." Yet half of the invalids we see might be just as healthy as he, if they would only take proper care of themselves, eat proper food—and digest it.

It's so strange that such simple things are overlooked by those who want health.

Food makes health.

It makes strength—and strength wards off sickness. The man who had never been sick was strong because he always digested his food, and you could become the same by helping your stomach to work as well as his.

It will make you strong and healthy by making the food you eat make you fat.

LITERARY NOTES.

Track Athletics in Detail is the title of a book compiled by the editor of a department in Harper's Round Table, and published today by Harper & Bros.

The appearance of the Athens of today, sitting among the ruins of another age, is graphically portrayed by Bishop Doane in the opening paper of Harpers Magazine for June. The paper is illustrated from sketches, made on the ground, by Guy Rose.

An article on "Civilizing the American Indian," by Ruth Shaffner, attractively illustrated with pictures of the Indian School at Carlisle, Pa., and its students, in the June issue of The Chautauquan, will be interesting to those who champion the cause of the noble red man.

The complete novel in the June issue of Lippincott's is "From Clue to Climax," by Will H. Harben. It is a tale of murder and hypnotism, in which an extremely able detective and a physician of the new school join forces to clear the innocent and run the guilty to earth.

An article of great contemporary interest in Scribner's Magazine for June is Henry Norman's vivid picture of the present condition of affairs in the most crucial point in all European politics—the Balkan Peninsula, where a half-dozen little Principalities are the buffer between the great powers of Europe.

McClure's Magazine for June contains a little battle study by Stephen Crane that, in its way, is more dramatic and striking than even "The Red Badge of Courage," the novel by Mr. Crane which is now attracting so much attention both in America and England. It shows, unmistakably, the hand of genius.

Dr. Parkhurst's articles to young men in The Ladies' Home Journal have turned out to be, next to General Harrison's article, the most profitable venture which that magazine has ever undertaken. His coming papers will deal with a young man's social life; his business success; as a citizen; his religious life and his marriage.

The supplement to Harper's Weekly for June 6 will be largely devoted to "China Today," concluding the observations and studies of that country by the members of the World's Transportation Commission. The Great Wall, the Chinese Railway, and Russian Influence are among the interesting topics discussed and illustrated.

The Forum for June contains a dozen articles of more than usual interest and timeliness by as many distinguished writers. The leading article is contributed by Senator John H. Mitchell, of Oregon, who for many years has advocated the election of United States Senators by popular vote and who has lately introduced a bill in the Senate to that effect.

The June Arena opens its 16th volume, appearing in a new dress, and being printed by Skinner, Bartlett & Co. It is an unusually strong number, opening with a brilliant paper by Rev. Samuel Barrows, D. D., the distinguished editor of the "Christian Register," of Boston, on "The First Pagan Critic of Christian Faith and His Anticipation of Modern Thought."

The Outlook's seventh annual Recreation Number contains nearly a hundred pages and scores of illustrations. Nearly all of the special articles relate to outdoor life, sport, recreation, and vacation possibilities. Among the writers are Ian Maclaren, the Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke, the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Kirk Munroe, General A. W. Greely, Poultney Bigelow and many others.

The political situation in the United States on the eve of the Presidential nominating conventions is admirably covered by the June Review of Reviews in its departments of "The Progress of the World," "Current History in Caricature," and "Record of Current Events." Prospective convention-goers will be greatly interested in Dr. Shaw's sketch of "St. Louis: This Year's Convention City."

Everyone who will take the trouble to cut out this notice and forward it, with ten cents, to the address below, will receive a sample copy of Demorest's Magazine, containing a Pattern Order which entitles the holder to any pattern illustrated in any number of the Magazine published during the last twelve months, at the uniform price of four cents each. Table Talk, the little magazine which upholds woman's interests by being "up-to-date" in everything pertaining to the home, and especially everything having reference to the dining room and kitchen, again shows its progressiveness throughout the current issue. Housekeepers unacquainted with Table Talk should avail themselves of the publishers' offer to our readers of a sample copy free, to anyone sending their address to Table Talk Publishing Co, Philadelphia.

Alfred C. Fields, colored, was hanged in Chicago Ill., for the murder of Mrs. Ellen Randolph.

The following is from the Daily Record of April 28, 18—:

"A strange accident happened at Coffin Beach on Friday last. Clarence Baxton, a well-known New Yorker, went down on Thursday for a bit of snipe shooting, expecting to return that night. Prevented from doing so by the storm, he sought refuge in a fisherman's cabin on the beach where the life patrol left him at 10 o'clock in the evening, comfortably housed and provided with light and fuel. The tide rose to an extraordinary height during the night, so much so that the flood wave (as the last wave of the high tide is called) swept clear over the sand dunes that line the beach, overwhelmed the cabin and swept it out to sea carrying with it the unfortunate gentleman, whose body was cast up on the shore by the returning tide next morning. Not a vestige of the cabin remains save the figurehead of a ship, which formed part of the structure. It is curious to note that the succeeding ebb tide, which was an extremely low one, exposed upon the beach the hull of a large ship, supposed to be the remains of the clipper Bucephalus, which was wrecked on the sands some forty years ago. The deceased was the son of the late H. B. Exton, a prominent merchant of this city."—Vanity.

AN ACCIDENT.

Mr. Quintus Hummel, of 118 Michigan Ave., Detroit, tells a War Story of his own Experience, and the Result.

(From Detroit News.)

Our representative called at 118 Michigan Avenue, the residence of Mr. Quintus Hummel. Mr. Hummel is a veteran of the late war, and received, in the campaign, an injury which has given him much pain and suffering since. He belongs to a Michigan cavalry regiment and his horse becoming frightened one day reared up, throwing him backward. In falling he struck his spine on a sharp stone, inflicting a deep cut over five inches long. The injury affected the kidneys. About two years ago the left kidney started to bleed, and has been doing so ever since. Mr. Hummel, in a few pointed sentences, gave our representative the following account:

"The accident of my 'war days' left me in bad shape; pain in my back and spine rendered me almost useless, and I was compelled to give up work entirely. I could not turn over in bed without assistance. I have spent hundreds of dollars in various ways trying to find relief. Physicians have told me my spine was honeycombed for 13 inches. I had given up in despair, never hoping for relief, then a friend told me about Doan's Kidney Pills, and they have done me a world of good. The pains have disappeared from my back, and the bleeding of my kidney has almost entirely stopped. I know I can never be entirely cured, as I would have to be 'a new man,' but Doan's Kidney Pills have done more to make me feel like 'a new man' than all the other things I have tried during past years. I have not had any recurrence of the pain or bleeding since taking them."

Mrs. J. P. Bell, Cassopolis, Mich.

wife of the editor of The Graphic, the leading local paper of Miami county, writes: "I was troubled with heart disease for six years, severe palpitations, shortness of breath, together with such extreme nervousness, that, at times I would walk the floor nearly all night. I consulted the best medical talent. They said there was no help for me that I had organic disease of the heart, which there was no remedy. I had seen your advertisement in The Graphic a year ago, as a last resort, tried one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart which convinced me that there was merit in it. I took three bottles each of Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine. It completely cured me. I sleep well at night, my heart beats regularly. I have no more smothering spells. I want to say to all who are suffering as I was, there's relief untold for them if they only give your remedies just one trial."

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Earl Lenardson is a painter as well as carpenter and has made a new sign of attractive appearance.

Mrs. W. E. Allen left Tuesday for Toledo to make a visit among friends and relatives in that city.

Clarence Lowe has signed with the Ryan, Ohio, team and will play ball with the buckeyes this year.

The Waverly bicycle still leads. Jas. Haight and Co. have just sold four more. It's the best.

Mrs. Jno. Exelby returned Tuesday night from a week's visit at Detroit, accompanied by her little granddaughter.

Miss Helen Hardy, who has been attending school at Ypsilanti, accompanied the doctor as far as Hornellsville, N. Y., to visit her parents.

Jas. DuBois and wife left Tuesday for Smith's Falls, Ont., and Rochester, N. Y. Will Rinn will attend to his business during his absence.

Mary Bowerman and Samuel Kniffin were married at the home of the bride, near Blissfield, Wednesday. Both parties are well known in this section.

Jas. Haight & Co. have just received a fine line of screen doors, cheap.

H. W. Porter, of Weston, stopped off Wednesday, on his return from the Baptist convention at Tecumseh. Mr. Porter was looking after his hay interests here.

The preparations for Decoration day were sadly interfered with by the rain. The exercises were held in Exelby's hall and a committee decorated the graves at Ridgeway.

Chas. DuBois had the misfortune to run over his fine St. Bernard dog a few days since and broke the hind leg of the animal. We are glad to say, however, that he is recovering.

Mr. Hardy and wife left Monday for Peekskill, N. Y., where the doctor attends the Synod of the Reformed church of America, as a delegate. They will visit relatives in the state before their return.

The Ladies Glee Club quartet consisting of Mrs. Webb Underwood and Misses Gertrude Kniffin, Jennie Britton and Ella Exelby, rendered some very excellent music at Exelby's hall on Decoration day.

The new band instruments have arrived and the boys are well pleased with them. We will have music galore now on, and some to spare to our unfortunate neighbors, who are blessed with a band.

Rev. Rederus left last Wednesday for Apella, Iowa, with his family to spend a few week's visit with his people there. He then goes to Clyde, Ohio, to assume regular charge of the Reformed church at that place. He left a word at the end of this column.

Make your own ice cream. You can do it if you get a blizzard freezer of Jas. Haight & Co.

Next Sunday morning, June 7, Henry Stout Tent, K. O. T. M., and the hive of L. O. T. M., will attend the Christian church in a body. Rev. C. I. Deyo will preach from the subject: The Chastity of Christ as Exemplified in Fraternal Societies—Especially in the Order of the K. O. T. M." In the evening his subject will be: "Money the Potent Power of Civilization."

The Maus entertainment, which was held here under the auspices of the L. A. M. Saturday night, was an enjoyable surprise to most of those who were present. Everyone voted the trio to be the best in their line ever heard in Britton. On account of the weather the house was but partially filled, but they are ready to go again, and there is such prospect that the troupe will visit Britton again.

Binder twine, binder twine and binder twine at Jas. Haight & Co's.

The most rousing occasion of goodfellowship, which it has been the good fortune of Brittonites to enjoy, occurred last Monday evening, when the citizens assembled in the Christian church to bid Rev. Sipko Rederus a farewell banquet. Not that his departure was an occasion of rejoicing; far from it. But the people who had known the Elder for years wished to express their regard and respect for him and give him a rousing speed in no heartless fashion. The occasion consisted of a short program and lots of supper. Rev. C. I. Deyo made an address very appropriate to the occasion, which was responded to by Rev. Rederus in feeling words. Rev. Wright offered prayer and the rest of the program consisted of recitations, etc., which were much appreciated. The supper which followed was no small part of the festivities and was simply complete. The reception was simply the last expression of the people of Britton, as a whole, who have found Rev. Rederus a most honorable and agreeable citizen, neighbor and friend, ever mindful of others and constant and devoted to his christian work. The Herald joins in wishing the Elder every success in his new field.

A WORD BEFORE MY DEPARTURE.

Most heartily I thank the citizens of Britton for the tokens of their friendship and esteem for me and my family, so generously expressed in the paper with their signatures attached, presented to me in the course of last week. On my part you may be certain of the same feeling, and that it will remain my wish and prayer that the Lord may cause you to prosper in every good work.

THE DOCTOR'S BILL

PARALYZING, but unnecessary. You don't have to run for a Doctor whenever you feel a little out of sorts. A few doses of Dr. F. FRENCH'S UNEQUALED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RHEUMATIC REMEDY, will make you feel all right and save you a lot of money. Some people have found this out, and this is what they say about it.

E. B. DOWNING, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Was troubled with Rheumatism—tried several remedies with no effect. Had several doctors who did me no good—half a bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequalled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy cured me."

J. FREE SMITH, Lansing, Mich.

"Doctors called it Bright's Disease in its early stage. One bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy removed all symptoms of the disease—have felt nothing of it since."

Mrs. DIANA RIGGS, Hillsdale, Mich.

"Was sick for four years with enlargement of the Liver and Spleen, and General Prostration of the Nervous System; was attended by two of the best Doctors in the town and used no end of Patent Medicines, all who saw me thought there was no relief except by death, which seemed sure. A friend recommended Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy; in less than a week after I commenced taking it I was better. Six bottles cured me. You are welcome to use my name and this statement, and also refer anyone to me either personally or by mail, and I will tell them much more than I can write."

We have many more letters to the same effect.

This preparation is in no way to be classed among the many worthless Patent Medicines of the day, being simply a Prescription used by Dr. F. French, of Hillsdale, for many years in his practice. It is offered to the public with the full assurance of its being the Best Medicine on Earth for the cure of Rheumatism, in all its various forms. Affections of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, Scrofula-Eruptions, and Cutaneous Diseases, Female Weakness, and all complaints arising from an Impure Condition of the Blood.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 5, 1896.

Within the last few days the River and Harbor bill appropriating about seventy millions of dollars has been passed by Congress, vetoed by Grover Cleveland and passed again over his veto. This bill is simply an outrage on every taxpayer in the United States, and any man who voted for it knew he was doing wrong.

Last Monday the boats carried over the lake to Chicago from Michigan 17,800 cases of strawberries and the seasons delivery so far has reached 125,000. The fruit prospect over the entire state is the best ever known. Early peaches will be in market in three weeks and apples never looked as well, and although some complaint has been made about rust and weevil, really the only bad prospect about Michigan wheat is the price.

President Cleveland may at times be called dull, and is in fact a very stubborn man, but sometimes his phrases are wonderful and as a phrase maker he really leads all the presidents. For instance, in his message vetoing the River and Harbor bill the following is indeed quite "pat:" "Individual economy and careful expenditures are sterling virtues which lead to thrift and comfort," and also. "Economy and exaction of clear justification for the appropriation of public moneys by the people are not only virtues but solemn obligations."

At last Tecumseh has a police force. Last Monday evening the city fathers passed an ordinance which instructed the president of the board to appoint policemen and in less than two jerks two citizens of this village were transformed into policemen, all but the uniforms. L. L. Bates will "watch out" at night and Levi Thompson will, with the aid of the city team, patrol day times. It is supposed that this step of caution was made necessary by the passing of the ordinance some weeks since prohibiting the use of sidewalks for bicycle practice. Boys, now beware, or Levi will be upon you, Charles Bidwell, the great chief, will sit upon your case, and inside of 24 hours you will be within the "cooler" walls and a report of the arrest submitted to the village council.

The improvement in manufactured stone sidewalks and curbs on the south side of Chicago street, from Pearl street to Maiden Lane is fine, and makes this by far the nicest residence block in Tecumseh. The property owners are to be commended upon their desire to improve their property and the looks of the main street of our beautiful village, but under the present ordinance it is wrong for the village to pay any part of the cost of these improvements. If the council will pass an ordinance to pay a portion of all walks that are built in the village on the public streets all well and good, but under the present law, either plank or stone or concrete or any kind of walk can be laid to suit the property owner, but only will the village assist him if he chooses manufactured stone. If he be too poor to pay for three fourths the cost of manufactured stone then he must pay four fourths of the cost of planks, and also assist his more fortunate neighbor in the payment of the village's share of the stone walk. Already this season the village has paid out $139.33 to private parties for building stone walks, and every working man in Tecumseh, who owns his home must pay a portion of this tax. This is not right, either pay the same proportion to all or none. The Herald would sanction the plan of the village paying the entire cost of every walk built in the corporation and thus make the village more and more beautiful every year, but treat one class of people the same as another. Especially should care be taken as to expenditure when every factory in Tecumseh is running short time, and little prospect of anything better.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May, 29 '96.

For a time this week it looked as though the silver Senators would succeed in putting the silver Senate on record in favor of giving the Treasury $25,000,000 a year additional revenue, by putting an additional tax of 75 cents a barrell on beer, and if they had all been in their seats the end of the attempt might have been different. When Senator Dubois offered the beer tax amendment to the filled cheese bill Senator Sherman moved to lay it on the table, and the motion was defeated by a vote of 30 to 25. The expiration of the "morning hour" prevented Senator Dubois following up his advantage, and the next day the Senate voted down the amendment 34 to 27. There was some odd voting in this business. For instance Senator Hansbrough voted against tabling the amendment one day, and the next day voted against the amendment itself; Senator Vest stated after he had voted for the amendment that if it had passed he would have voted against the amended bill as a whole, and Senator Faulkner against tabling the amendment and then against the amendment. This indicates to a certainty that this session of Congress will not provide any additional revenue for the government.

The Senate will pass Mr. Butler's bill prohibiting the further issue of bonds without the consent of Congress, but it will not be allowed to come up in the House at this session. It is only because it is known that it has no show in the House that its opponents have not tried to talk it to death in the Senate.

There may be a very lively time in Congress when President Cleveland sends in the veto message he is now preparing on the River and Harbor bill, if it be the sort of document expected, and a fight may be started which may delay adjournment. According to the opinion of nearly all the prominent members of both branches of Congress, the river and Harbor bill will be passed over the veto.

Party lines were not drawn in the vote by which the House passed a bill repealing that clause of the present tariff law which provides for the admission free of duty of foreign alcohol which is to be used in the arts or manufactures. 104 republicans, 56 democrats and 5 populists voted for the repeal bill, and 60 republicans and 9 democrats against it. Owing to defects in the clause it had never been enforced and claims were simply being piled up against the Treasury for rebate of duty paid on alcohol. Secretary Carlisle asked for repeal and was endorsed by the House Ways and Means committee. Whether the bill will get through the Senate is yet a question, although it has been given a place on the program prepared by the steering committees.

The silver democrats are fully determined, they say, that they shall not be kept out of the control of the Chicago convention by any manipulation by the National committe of the contested delegations, and notice to that effect has been served upon chairman Harrity of that committee, who is now in Washington. Mr. Harrity denies that his committee has any intention of trying to use its authority in making up the temporary roll of the convention to keep silver democrats out of their seats, but silver men do not entirely accept his denial, and say that they are going to take steps which will stop any such scheme as that, even if every silver democrat has to stay out of the convention to do it. This question is arousing interest among the politicians of all parties, in Washington, and doubtless as much elsewhere. It is generally believed that the silver men will have a majority of that convention, but there is much doubt as to whether that majority will exercise its power by the adoption of an out and out free coinage platform, and more that a silver man will head the ticket nominated. A majority can make the platform, but unless the old rule is changed it will require two-thirds to nominate.

The decision of the Supreme Court, that the sugar bounty money which was held by Controller Bowler should be paid, would have been much more satisfactory if it had been settled for once and all the constitutionality of the sugar bounty. It merely decided that the money appropriated by Congress must be paid, which will put about $5,250,000 in circulation, and left the still more important question open to dispute. It seems however to have put an end to the absurd idea that a minor Treasury official has more authority than Congress and the President, and for that reason has been thankfully received by many who will not get any of the sugar bounty money.

A service pension bill giving every man who served 90 days $3 a month and one cent a month additional for each day served in excess of ninety, has been favorably reported to the House. It will not be acted upon at this session. It is estimated that it will cost between twenty-five and thirty millions a year to carry out this bill.

"LITTLE POPLAR'S" SKULL.

Gruesome Relic of Indian Warfare Now in the National Museum.

A ghastly relic of Indian warfare was recently sent to one of the professors at the national museum in Washington, says the New York World. It is the skull of "Little Poplar," the great fighter and warrior, at one time the sub-chief of the Cree nation. The Crees had their homes and lands in Canada, and when the Riel rebellion broke out some years ago "Little Poplar" took advantage of the opportunity it afforded to make war on his own account.

He attacked the white settlers, burned their homes, carried off their women and instituted a reign of terror in the region of his operations. Hundreds of persons became the victims of his bloodthirsty cruelty. He destroyed their herds, laid their homes in smoking ruins and put women and little children to the torture. There was, in fact, no form of devilry too horrible for this Indian to perpetrate.

When the Riel rebellion was crushed "Little Poplar" crossed to the American side. So great was the horror he had excited that a reward of $2,000 was offered for his apprehension, dead or alive. In 1886 he was murdered near Fort Assiniboine, Mont., and the half-breed who killed him received the reward. One of the soldiers of the fort watched for years the lonely grave in which "Little Poplar" had been buried, and at last, when he felt certain that all the flesh had been worn off the bones, he dug up the skull and kept it as a relic. It has just found a resting place on one of the shelves of the national museum.

MATRIMONIAL AGENCIES.

Some Advantageous Alliances Effected by Their Assistance in France.

A very profitable form of swindling is that of the matrimonial agencies which are now worked in France in a manner entirely unknown, says the London Spectator, to M. De Foy, who was the real originator of marriage by intermediary. There are, of course, offices where preliminary fees are asked and where wife seekers and ladies yearning for lords are quietly swindled after having been told to go to the opera, the salon or the fashionable church of Sainte-Clotilde. The strange part of the matrimonial agency scheme is that you never know, when in society whether some banker, priest or old lady of fierce virtue and mystical tendencies may not be a husband or wife broker. There are young ladies not too thin-skinned, head waiters in certain restaurants, livery stable keepers, cloistered nuns, notaries and lady doctors of the obstetric school. These are only a portion of the army of workers in the interests of Cupid. There are at present in Paris two wealthy American girls who have married titles, upon the wedding day of each of whom a very handsome commission was paid to one of these intermediaries, of course without the knowledge of the wife.

Mrs. J. D. Walker, of Brooklyn, was the guest of Tecumseh relatives the first of the week.

John A. Hoanes, state agent of the Mutual life of New York, was in Tecumseh part of this week.

Mrs. Seth Forsythe, of Chicago, is making a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Eckles.

Chas. E. Burns and wife attended the funeral of his father, Wm. Burns, of Tipton, who died Tuesday.

Mr. Alfred James and wife have moved from Mrs. E. B. Wood's house into rooms in the Patterson House.

Miss Mina Elliott, who has been trimming for Mrs. Mosher this spring, returned to her home in Vassar Thursday.

A quite clever trick performer solicited alms on the street corners last evening. He was clever enough to get the alms.

Rev. B. S. Hudson will deliver the bacculaureate sermon to the graduating class of '96 at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening.

Albert Aylesworth, who purchased the Will Osborn farm in Franklin, sent in a strawberry with a girth of 6 inches. Beat it if you can.

Mr. E. Russell and wife of Jackson, and Mrs. Bert Blood, of Toledo, were called here by the death of their sister Miss Florence Hyde.

Mrs. Addie Holmes, of Elgin, Ill., arrived Wednesday from Washington D. C. to spend a few weeks as the guest of Miss Harriet Whittier.

A change of time is annouced on the C. J. & M., for next Sunday. The principle change is in No 22 which goes at 8:42 instead of 10:20 as formerly.

Gen. James E. Pittman, of Detroit, was the guest of Lucius Lilley over Sunday. Mrs. L. P. Tribou returned with him for a week's visit in the city.

Next Sunday there will be a special service for the children in the Universalist church at 10:30. There will be no evening service as the pastor will preach at York at that time. Young People's meeting at 6:30 as usual.

Ralph Bidwell is the happy owner of the finest instrument ever brought to this or any other town. It is a mandolin made by J. W. Jenkin's Son's, Kansas City, and procured of J. A. Maus, their agent. The instrument is their best production retailing at $175.00.

Last Tuesday occurred the death of Ezra Day, at his home north of town. The cause of death was attributed to heart disease. Mr. Day was well known to our citizens as a man of the strongest moral convictions and as one possessing a deep and steadfast christian faith. Ezra Day was born Oct. 17, 1811, and died June 2, 1896, in his 85th year. He was born in Morris township, Washington Co., Pa. He moved to Richland Co., Ohio, at the age of 4 years and settled on a farm with his father, near Lexington, where he spent his boyhood days. At the age of 27 he joined the Presbyterian church at Pleasant Hill, Ohio. Mr. Day was thrice married. He married his first wife at Pleasant Hill and his second at Bridgewater, Mich. and his third he leaves as a widow to mourn his departure. He moved to Michigan in 1866, residing near Clinton and Tecumseh since that time.

The many friends and acquaintances of B. C. Knapp were much shocked to hear of his death which occurred Monday evening about 10 o'clock. Although Mr. Knapp had been ailing for some time he kept about till the very day of his death. For six weeks he had been unable to attend to his business on our streets. A post-mortem was held, revealing the fact that a malignant growth in the stomach was the cause of death. Bronson C. Knapp was born in Yates, Orleans Co., N. Y., May 4, 1830, and was brought to Michigan three years later by his fathe, who settled in Franklin. In 1854 he married Miss Rosetta M. Kimball and bought a farm near his father's in Franklin on which he lived till 1884, when he retired to Tecumseh, which has since been his home. Mr. Knapp was considered one of our soundest business men and his advice in this direction was often sought by friends. The funeral was held at his late residence on Pottawatamie street, at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rev. Varner, assisted by Rev. Brown, officiating.

This community was much pained to learn last Saturday that Florence Hyde was much worse and the prospect of her recovery was very small. During Sunday she grew rapidly worse and in the evening it was thought she was dying, but she rallied slightly and though entirely unconsious lingered till about six o'clock Monday evening, when death came to her relief. Florence Belle Hyde was born in Tecumseh April 29, 1880, and died June 1, 1896. She was a student in our High School and a faithful member of the Baptist Sunday school. By her correct conduct, happy disposition and winning ways she won and retained many friends. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hyde, have two other daughters, Mrs. E. E. Russell, of Jackson, and Mrs. A. A. Blood, of Toledo, so that Florence was all the child left in the home. The funeral occurred at her home yesterday afternoon at half past two. The High School was dismissed that her student friends might attend the last sad rites. Robed in white, surrounded by beautiful flowers she was borne to the grave, three of her own relatives, her Sunday school teacher and two young associates acting as pall bearers. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. B. S. Hudson.

The Bicycle Derby, Tecumseh, Thursday, July 23.

Dolly did.

Miss Lena Hardenburg left the first of the week for Hillsdale, where she will attend the commencement exercises of the college.

Frank Chilson has been home part of this week. The new boilers are in the Marquette but the work of making the connections takes considerable time.

Mobbs & Co. are handling the very best varieties and qualities of berries. Call before ordering your supply for canning and you may be able to save money.

Ed Holdway now rides a Ben Hur purchased of Satterthwaite Bros. and Arthur Gould, David Gregg and Frank French are happy since last week, with reliable wheels from the above firm.

Mayor H. S. Pingree, of this state, is advertised to speak at a horse race up the road tomorrow. Tecumseh also will indulge in a matinee and all the good horses hereabout will be in attendance. It is not yet certain whether Herr Most will address the grooms after the race or not.

Last Friday evening about 100 of the friends of Miss Anderson's pupils listened to a recital given at her house on Chicago street. The program was varied in style and instrumentality and not a number was devoid of interest and pleasure to all present. Such entertainment is of much pleasure and benefit to the pupils especially as Miss Anderson insists upon the pupils assuming much of the management of the affair.

Commencement Week.

June is again at hand and commencement week, which carries with it some of the most important events of all the year in the social and educational life of Tecumseh. The commencement exercises will occur at Sutton's opera house, Thursday evening, June 11. The class this year, which will make its bow to the public and to a new life among us, consists of three boys and ten girls who make in all the very lucky number of thirteen young aspirants for literary honors. The members and officers of the class are as follows: Frank Keeney, pres; Julia Gilmore, vice pres.; Christine Wilson, sec.; Lavern Smith, treas.; Chas. Hurry, Mertie Macham, Bessie Spayde, Nellie Lowden, Kittie Bowers, Adah Erskine, Minnie Russel, Mabel Smith and Eloise Waring.

The program which will be carried out we give below:

The Alumni exercises will be held at the Lilley House parlors Friday evening. A banquet will be served and the flood gates of fraternal good-fellowship will be raised until the flow of soul amounts to a literary flood. The program has not been arranged.

Baptist Association.

The Fifty Seventh Annual Meeting of the Lenawee Co. Baptist Association was held in the Baptist church of Tecumseh, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 2 and 3, 1896, Rev. J. McLean, of Morenci, presiding.

The association met at 10 a. m. Tuesday with a good attendance. Ample provision was made, under the charge of a committee of ladies from the Baptist church, for dinner and supper in church parlors on both days.

Miss Chilson presided at the organ, and Mrs. Winchip and J. H. Cole led the song service.

We have neither time nor space to particularize and when all was so admirably done it would seem almost invidious to do so.

The exercises of the Juniors of the Tecumseh Baptist Union led by Miss Fisher, on Tuesday, was a happy thought and well carried out.

There were several addresses by the visiting clergyman, and the closing address by Rev. C. E. Conley was one long to be remembered. After a closing prayer by A. P. Coddington, the association adjourned to meet in the second Baptist church of Rome, on the last Wednesday of May, 1897.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to sincerely thank our friends, who so willingly assisted with kind attention and sympathy during our recent great bereavement.

ALBERT HYDE AND FAMILY.

FATE OF TWO SNAKES.

Were at the Bottom of a Mine When Notice to Quit Was Served.

A Forest and Stream correspondent tells a South African story. Two snakes were at the bottom of a 60-foot mine shaft. The snakes were each about ten feet long, and of one of the most poisonous species, known as mambas. Now, miners and ten-foot mambas do not agree very well, and this is especially true when both are at the bottom of a mining shaft. The miners whose claim had been jumped sent a message down to the snakes with orders to come up. The message was a bottle of dynamite with a lighted fuse attached. The snakes obeyed the summons at once. They came up the perpendicular shaft with such speed that they shot up 30 feet above the opening of the shaft. When they came down they were somewhat mixed. The two tails had in some way got tangled into a square knot, such as sailors tie. The snakes wanted to go in opposite directions, but the efforts were in vain, and they fell to and stung one another to death.

Acting Was Too Real.

During some private theatricals at the Saxon court recently, Crown Princess Frederick took the part of a maid servant. The extreme realistic way in which she portrayed a vulgar young woman moistening and polishing a leather shoe brought her a reproof from the king himself, who said: "We are among ourselves, it is true; but even then a royal princess ought not to play so exactly the manners of a maid."

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

In pencil across the margin of the clipping was scrawled in Calamity Dick's cramped script: "And 30 of 'em wimin, and Lalor says the captain died a cussin' the owner as the seas swept them pore folks offen the deck into the surf."

Baxton stared at the paper before him. My God! he had heard of the Bucephalus before.

True, he was not born until years after this terrible event, yet the memory of it had poisoned all of his mother's remaining days. "Baxter, the Bucephalus Murderer," he had heard somebody say in his father's lifetime, but until to-night he never knew the meaning of the words. And here, on the very scene of the horror, the son of its author was domiciled under the cabin walls of that long-lost ship. Yonder its figurehead mocked him with staring eyes!

"The hull is breaking up!" It is no longer the fisherman's house, but the cabin of a sinking ship. See how the timbers strain and wrench as the keel pounds on the remorseless sand; hear how the waves thunder on the deck above, as though to crush the trembling fabric; listen to the creaking of the overstrained timbers! The water is slowly rising yonder, where the cabin floor is lowest. Who are these that crowd down the companionway—women scantily clad—terror in their eyes, their hands bleeding, their naked feet raw from contact with the cruel ropes? One is an aged gentlewoman who leans feebly on the shoulders of a young man—her gray hair streams over her brow, her dim eyes look with a mother's tender love on her son's resolute young face. All these poor creatures are chilled with exposure, weak with suffering. Two of the women lead, another carries a child. "Better to drown here," says one, bitterly, "than to freeze to death on deck." (Baxton does not hear these words, but he sees the lips move and knows what they are saying.) Then the little group huddles close together in the gloom, the mothers gather their children to their breasts, and one, an ancient gentlewoman, prays silently, as she looks hands with the stripling. "I pray Thee, O Father, if it be Thy will, take me and spare him." • • • Now the pale lips of the woman are still, her head sinks on her breast and the son rises with a terrible cry—(Baxton cannot hear that cry, but he sees the man's awful eyes and knows what he says). "My mother is dead!" Then the waves pound harder on the deck, the timbers shrink and creak and groan, the fabric lifts and falls with dull, terrible thuds—it is high tide—the ship is breaking up. Although it is day, the cabin grows darker and darker. The water rises higher. Baxton must save himself. He staggers across the heaving floor where mother and son lie dead in each other's arms, reaches the companionway, gains the deck—and then, before him, over the shattered bulwarks, to which clings half a hundred miserable, drowning creatures, looms a great towering wall of green water. Lashed to the mizzen shrouds, the captain, trumpet in hand, sees not the coming avalanche—his glance rests only on the face that is emerging from the companionway—Baxton's face. Casting off the rope that holds him to this place of safety, with livid stare and blazing eye, he points straight at Baxton.

"See, see," he cries, "the murderer Baxton! Curses on you—curses on you—curses!" In a second it was over. The monstrous hill of water, the double wave that marks the flood-tide, strikes the shattered ship a full, fair blow, mounts as high as the yardarm, clear over the decks, shatters the weakened hull to fragments and bears down mast and bowsprit in one common ruin, amid an awful grinding and crushing and a splintering of timbers. Then rises a great shriek that pierces to heaven over the tumult of the sea (Baxton cannot hear that shriek, but he feels it), followed by the boiling seethe of waters—and the wave passes on, leaving naught to tell the fate of the Bucephalus save a few scattered spars, a few battered corpses (ghastly playthings of the tide) and—that is all.

BIG JOB ON HAND.

The Sergeant-at-Arms of the Republican Convention Begins His Work.

St. Louis, June 3.—Sergeant at Arms T. E. Byrnes, of the republican national convention, arrived here from Minneapolis Tuesday evening. He will remain here till the close of the convention. His first act was to formally open the headquarters of the national committee at the Southern hotel. The first duty, and one of the most trying ones, that Mr. Byrnes will perform will be the appointment of subordinates. These consist of 500 assistant sergeants at arms, 300 doorkeepers, 400 ushers, 200 messengers and 100 pages. The national committee meets here June 10, to ratify Mr. Byrnes' selections. With the committee will come 2,000 friends of the different candidates and representatives of the various state and territorial delegations. There are on file 3,500 applications for appointment by Mr. Byrnes. The 5,000 badges for delegates, alternates, employes of the convention, members of the national committee and distinguished persons especially invited are now in the hands of Mr. Byrnes.

TWENTY-FIVE DROWNED.

Cloudburst Turns Creeks in Seneca, Mo., Into Raging Waters.

Seneca, Mo., June 1.—A cloudburst broke over the city at four o'clock Saturday morning, and in ten minutes the water in Lost creek, which traverses the town, had risen to a depth of eight to ten feet and a breadth of over half a mile, sweeping through the city like a mill race, carrying away every structure in its path. Not a house in the district south of the creek is left intact on its foundations. Twenty-five persons were drowned in the rushing waters in this city and vicinity. Eight bodies have been recovered. Among the buildings destroyed here were two churches, the office of the Seneca Despatch, Wier's livery stable and a score of dwellings. The water flooded the principal stores on Cherokee avenue, running over the counters of McGannon's emporium. The property loss in this city alone will reach $100,000.

TREASURY FIGURES.

Official Statement Showing Receipts and Expenditures for Eleven Months.

Washington, June 2.—The official treasury statement shows: Receipts for May, $24,643,717; expenditures for May, $28,426,592; deficit for May, $3,782,875.

Receipts for 11 months, $299,804,806; expenditures for 11 months, $326,786,680; deficit for 11 months, $26,981,874. As compared with May, 1895, the receipts were $600,000 less than May, and as compared with the 11 months of 1895, the receipts were $12,000,000 more. The expenditures for May, 1896, are slightly less than for May, 1895, and for the 11 months they are more than $2,000,000 greater than for the corresponding period of 1895. The interest charge per annum is now $35,000,000, as against $21,000,000 this time last year.

Washington, June 2.—The debt statement issued Monday afternoon shows a net increase in the public debt, less cash in the treasury, during May of $5,188,730.04. The interest bearing debt increased $3,176,450; the non-interest bearing debt decreased $855,170; and cash in the treasury decreased $2,897,450.04. The balances of the different classes of debt at the close of business May 30 were: Interest bearing debt, $845,488,590; debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $1,645,970.26; debt bearing no interest, $373,535,050.64; total, $1,220,669,610.90.

Population of Springfield, Ill.

Springfield, Ill., June 2.—The school census just completed gives Springfield a population within the limits of 30,742 As the residence district extends over a mile in each direction from the municipal limits the total population, according to close estimates founded on the vote, is about 41,000.

Ended in Murder.

Lebanon, Ind., June 2.—Thomas Allen, a wealthy stock dealer, and Wallace Riley, a prominent citizen, engaged in a duel in front of the post office yesterday, and Riley was instantly killed. The runaway marriage of Allen's son and Riley's daughter was the cause.

Liabilities of $100,000.

Memphis, Tenn., June 3.—The School-Field-Hanauer Crockery company, one of the oldest wholesale firms in the city, assigned Tuesday. The liabilities will reach $100,000; assets nominally $100,000.

Ohio Socialists.

Massillon, O., June 3.—The socialists in convention here nominated a state ticket headed by Daniel Wallace, of Hollister, for secretary of state.

STREWN WITH FLOWERS.

Graves of Dead Heroes in Michigan Cemeteries Are Decorated.

Menominee, May 31.—A Memorial day was celebrated in this city by the dedication of the soldiers' monument, the only one in the upper peninsula. The services were under the direction of Lyon post, G. A. R. Many representatives were present. The parade was the largest ever witnessed here.

Kalamazoo, May 31.—Memorial day was quietly observed. Rain drove the people into the Grand opera house for the exercises for Bronson park, and Rev. W. A. Waterman, of Chicago, gave his oration Sunday in the park. He spoke briefly Saturday; all others. The speakers decried Memorial day sports.

In an address here Sunday afternoon Rev. Mr. Waterman took occasion to refer to the recent attack made by President Eliot, of Harvard, on the G. A. R., and scored the noted educator in bitter language. Dr. Waterman declared that Eliot's attack was unworthy of a patriotic citizen, and would even call for condemnation from ex-confederates themselves. He insisted that the man who thus wantonly attacked the bravery of the members of the G. A. R. was unworthy to be a citizen of the country which they fought so gallantly to perpetuate. Dr. Waterman's denunciation met with great applause.

Niles, May 31.—Memorial day was appropriately observed here by Frank Graves post, Grand Army of Republic. Rev. R. H. F. Gardiner delivered the address. In the afternoon the exercises were interfered with by rain.

Decatur, May 31.—Memorial day was more generally observed throughout southwestern Michigan than ever before, the exercises for the most part consisting of parades of civic societies, with addresses by local speakers.

Constantine, May 31. — A horse belonging to Simon Bronson ran away during decoration ceremonies. Bronson was badly injured internally and his skull was fractured. His recovery is doubtful.

Benton Harbor, May 31.—Memorial day was observed here by a procession made up of George H. Thomas post, G. A. R., Modern Woodmen, firemen and school children.

Coldwater, May 31.—Judge Gaple delivered an eloquent and patriotic address at Oak Grove cemetery on Memorial day.

GIANT BISONS IN MICHIGAN.

One of the Magnificent Specimens Taken to Adrian Dies from Injuries.

Adrian, June 1.—Two four-year-old bull bisons, consigned to the Page Fence company, arrived here Saturday night from Fort Wayne. They were bred on the preserves of Mr. Bass and are wild specimens. Mr. Clement and 12 assistants were three days trying to cage them. Twice Nero, a magnificent fellow weighing 2,000 pounds, jumped a six-foot fence, and on a third attempt failed to clear it and hung suspended by his hind quarters, in which position he was secured after a hard fight. He died at noon Sunday at Page park. It is supposed death resulted from internal injuries. Prof. Stephens, of the University of Kansas, who is in the city negotiating for Prof. Kost's collection of mastodons, made a liberal offer for the body to add to the university collection, but President Page decided to have the animal preserved and properly mounted for the purpose of presenting it to the museum of Adrian college.

Ravages of the Hessian Fly.

Coldwater, June 1.—The Hessian fly and rust have ruined the wheat crop in this vicinity. Last month the prospect for more than an average yield was flattering, but now there will not be half an average crop. Some farmers are plowing up their wheat fields, while others are hoping for some favorable change in the weather that may possibly benefit them. This deplorable condition appears to be general throughout southern Michigan and northern Indiana, and wheat growers are despondent.

Death of Capt. Blodgett.

Detroit, June 1.—Capt. C. C. Blodgett, for 40 years connected with the lake marine as sailor and owner, died here Sunday from a cold contracted at Cleveland two weeks ago. He was at one time connected in business with Capt. Ward. He was born at Conneaut, O., 68 years ago. Several years ago he sold his vessel property and devoted himself to the care of his large improved property interests in this city.

Three of One Family Killed.

Almont, May 30.—Mrs. James Smiley died Tuesday evening at Whigsville from the effects of injuries received in the recent cyclone at that place. This makes three deaths in one family—father, mother and son. The triple funeral was held Thursday.

Big Wool Clip.

Dowagiac, May 31. — Fifteen thousand pounds of wool was drawn into this city by four-horse teams the other day, being the clip of Lyle Bros., near Decatur, and claimed to be the largest single clip grown in southwestern Michigan this season.

Baptists Adjourn.

Cassopolis, May 29.—The Baptist conference closed Thursday night with addresses by Prof. Gaylord Slocum, president of Kalamazoo college, and Rev. George K. McDonald, of Kalamazoo.

Blown Down.

Bay City, June 1.—During a recent storm the city electric light tower on Center avenue, 220 feet high, the highest in the United States, was blown down and wrecked.

Discovered a Shortage.

Flint, May 29.—The expert accountants who were employed by the city council to examine the city books for two years past, reported a shortage of $4,585 in the waterworks contract.

DOMESTIC.

Four men were killed and seven others seriously injured at McKay's lumber camp near Seney, Mich., by the running away of a steam log machine.

Three employes of the Consumers' Gas company at Wilkesbarre, Pa., George Maxwell, the foreman, and Samuel Maxwell and George Zerbee, were suffocated by gas.

The convention of delegates to arrange for a Chicago-Southern States exposition in Chicago next fall began in that city.

While temporarily insane Mrs. Ethel Kelso, wife of George Radford Kelso, business manager of a printing establishment in New York, killed her two children—Ethel, aged four, and George, aged two—and then attempted suicide.

It was reported that 13 fishermen lost their lives while out in the lake at Buffalo, N. Y., during a storm.

John Thompson, aged 87 years, for over 50 years publisher of various weekly papers in different parts of Indiana, committed suicide by hanging himself at Fowler.

Mrs. Letitia Green Stevenson, wife of the vice president, was chosen president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution at the annual meeting in Washington.

A fire in the Leader newspaper building at Cleveland, O., threatened the entire plant, but was finally extinguished, with a loss of $10,000.

The holding of the southern states exposition in Chicago next fall was practically assured.

The monitor Monadnock was formally placed in commission at Mare Island navy yard in San Francisco. The construction of the Monadnock commenced 21 years ago.

Itching

If there is one thing more than another which gratifies us, it is the great volume of hearty thanks which come from grateful parents for the cures Hood's Sarsaparilla has effected upon their children. The agony of despair turns to unspeakable joy as mothers and fathers see dreadful sores and eruptions gradually yield to the potent purifying power of this great medicine, and bright boys and girls given perfect health. Read this:

"When my baby was four weeks old, scrofulous eczema broke out on his body. He became literally covered with

Sores

When six months old the breaking out healed on his body, but his head, face and arms were a terrible sight. I passed many sleepless nights holding his little hands to keep him from scratching his face. I cannot tell what he suffered with the sores. One doctor attended him a year without avail. No one thought he would ever get well. He was almost a year old when I commenced to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. He soon grew so much better that

I was able to rest at night. Gradually the sores on his head and arms healed, the burning and itching ceased, and he slept better. In 2 months he looked like another child, gained strength, was cured. I recommend all persons afflicted with eczema or any skin disease to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I feel assured that it will do wonders for others. I cannot praise it too highly for what it has done for my

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Two years ago, I had the grippe, and it left me with a cough which gave me no rest night or day. My family physician prescribed for me, changing the medicine as often as he found the things I had taken were not helping me, but, in spite of his attendance, I got no better. Finally, my husband,—reading one day of a gentleman who had had the grippe and was cured by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,—procured, for me, a bottle of this medicine, and before I had taken half of it, I was cured. ABOUT COLD STORAGE.

Why Every Farm Should Have a Small Plant of Its Own.

The cold storage business is taking on immense proportions. Its development in the principal cities of the country has been nothing less than phenomenal of late years. And now cold storage warehouses are being erected at country shipping points. In some cases they are put up by the farmers themselves, who organize cooperative stock companies and conduct the business on the same general principle that is applied so successfully in cooperative creameries. Most of these cold storage plants in both city and country use chemical refrigeration or other artificial means of creating and maintaining a low temperature. We understand that recent progress in this line makes it possible to build and equip a cold storage plant at comparatively reasonable cost. Of course, where the ice crop is assured, no expensive refrigerating machinery is required, and in such localities cold storage can be provided in connection with a neighborhood icehouse. The fact that cold storage is coming into such extensive use in the cities is the best possible evidence that it generally pays to thus hold perishable products until they can be marketed to the best advantage. Now, if this is such a good thing for marketmen, cold storage can be equally useful to farmers, especially as they can utilize its advantages by the cooperative method. Almost any farmer can have a fruit retarding house built on a side hill, which does not require ice, and a small cold storage room should be a feature of every farm or home icehouse.—Orange Judd Farmer.

FIGHTING CHINCH BUGS.

Barrier and Trap Method Assures Most Satisfactory Results.

The Oklahoma experiment station says that it is practicable to keep chinch bugs out of corn fields, and in many cases out of the oat fields, even when they have appeared in great numbers in the wheat fields. As a help to this, this station has advised the separation of the corn fields from the small grain fields as far as possible, and to have alfalfa between where this was practicable. The chinch bug does not feed on alfalfa nor any of the clovers. It does feed on grasses, wild or cultivated, although it prefers wheat, and especially barley and the millets. It has been advised to sow millet alongside or around the wheat field so as to attract the bugs to a narrow area, thus helping to more easily destroy them.

The method of saving the corn crop, which is strongly advised, is called the "barrier and trap" method. It consists in forming a barrier over which the bugs cannot pass and then trapping them in holes as they collect at this barrier. This method requires work and attention but it has proved so remarkably successful in many cases that it is strongly recommended. One reason for discontinuing the distribution of diseased bugs is that it has been found that such distribution tends to cause reliance on the possible spread of the disease and unwillingness to make the effort necessary to protect other crops.

AN EXCELLENT IDEA.

Support for Sweet Peas Which Produces Excellent Results.

A bed of sweet peas about a tree trunk can be trained satisfactorily in the manner suggested in the accompanying illustration. A stout bit of cord is tied about the trunk some three feet from the ground, and from equal spaces about it strings are carried out and down to the ground, where they are secured by pegs driven into the ground, these pegs forming a perfect circle about the tree. When the plants have secured a hold upon the strings and have come to blossoming, the effect will be very pleasing and attractive.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Water Cress for Profit.

Water cresses can be made to pay if any vegetable can. If you have the right facilities, i. e., a piece of ground that can be covered from one to six inches deep, with cool, gently-flowing water, you will have no difficulty in producing large amounts of this popular green stuff. The most work connected with it, indeed, is to cut and tie it in bunches. A springy meadow with a clay subsoil is a good location for a crop. To start a bed, all that is required is to stick some slips or cuttings into the mud or sand that is kept lightly covered with water, or to sow some seed into the moist soil on the edges of running streams. The plant is so easily grown that it is a wonder it is not found more frequently on farmer's premises. It is worthy of more attention. In some cases, a piece of ground that has some slope, might be terraced and arranged for growing water cresses in beds one above another, the water flowing from one to the other.—Practical Farmer.

Preparation of Spraying Mixtures.

Too much care cannot be taken in preparing any mixture to be used on trees and fruits. If not properly prepared, injury may follow. Bordeaux mixture, if properly prepared, will not injure the apple; but if there is not a sufficient amount of lime, injury may follow, causing the surface of the apple to be russeted and rough. Also damage to foliage may result. Other fruits are susceptible to injury from the mixture, if carelessly prepared. This mixture is one of the most effective fungicides in use.

GRAFTING GRAPE VINES.

The Proper Time and the Correct Way of Performing the Operation.

As nearly everyone who has had the grape fever, and went into numerous varieties, is most likely to have some that he wishes to change, this is the time to change them by grafting instead of digging such out as are not desirable.

Sometimes wild vines are where they might be left stand, and be changed into good varieties. This I advocated years ago, but would not advise it now except where young canes can be laid in the ground six inches deep for a few feet, then graft the end. There are various modes of grafting the grape, but the most simple, and as successful as any, is the common cleft graft. There are two periods to do this work in, one before the sap is in flow, and the other when the strong flow is on. The latter will be when the vines have made shoots a foot long. In this case, however, the grafts must be kept in a cool place or they will be too far advanced when the time comes.

Clear away the ground around the vine to be grafted six inches deep, saw off the vine with a sharp, fine-toothed saw, and smooth the stump with a sharp knife. If the stem is straight grained use a strong, thin-bladed knife and split the stump one and a half or two inches; have a wedge-pointed spike and drive it in the middle so as to hold the split apart wide enough to insert the grafts. The grafts should be the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil, although smaller wood sometimes answers as well; cut two grafts of the eyes if ordinary wood, and if short jointed take three eyes to a graft. Cut the graft one-half inch below the lower bud and one-half inch above the upper one.

Cut a wedge from the lower eye down to a nice edge with the side next the eye a little the thickest. This is so that it will be pressed tightest where the saps meet, as it is a little difficult to run the line of the sap exact (and this must be looked to). It is well to have the graft lean a little out at the top, in which case the line will be crossed and the connection sure; insert the grafts, two in a stock, that is an inch in diameter, if less one graft will do. Press down to the eye, then pull out your wedge and the grafts will be held firm enough without tying. But if small vines it is best to tie them. If the stump is twisted and crooked, so that it cannot be split straight, use the saw and saw out a wedged piece so that the grafts will fit tight and tie well; fill in the earth now and press firmly around the grafts (but be careful not to move them), up to the top bud, and cover over this a little grass or sand dust if you have it. This is to prevent the sun from drying out the bud before there is a connection between the graft and stock. When growing time comes, the suckers that may come from the old stock must be carefully removed, or they will rob the graft. When the graft begins to grow they must have stakes to tie to. I have often had grafts to grow ten to twenty feet the first season and bear a big crop the next.—Colman's Rural World.

SPOTTED COWBANE.

Short Description of One of Our Most Deadly Plants.

Every year cases of the poisoning of children from eating "wild parsnips" are chronicled by the papers. As many people are ignorant of the harmful nature of the plant, it may be well to describe it. Spotted cowbane (Cicuta maculata) is a member of the parsley family. It is a weed of the damp meadow and brookside. It is a perennial, with a purple stem, white flowers, slender habit and a pungent, aromatic odor. The stems spring from thick, fleshy, underground roots which are usually three or five in number, though single specimens are also found.

The roots of spotted cowbane will affect man, cattle and horses, and for this reason they should be grubbed out from the farm as soon as recognized. The symptoms of poisoning by cowbane are: Pain in the bowels, vomiting, followed by violent convulsions, dilation of the pupils, frothing at the mouth, and death. Cowbane is generally mistaken for wild parsnips, but the two are really quite different, though belonging to the same family. The genuine wild parsnip is a biennial, of a tall, stout habit, with deeply grooved stem, and bears large clusters of yellow flowers. It is also of an acrid, poisonous nature, which is not entirely destroyed by cooking. Like the cowbane, it should be dug out wherever found.—N. Y. World.

Tobacco as an Insecticide.

"For some years I have been using and recommending tobacco dust as an all round insect destroyer," says Joseph Meehan, in the Practical Farmer. "I have used it in the greenhouse for lice (aphis), in the open ground for the cucumber beetle, plant lice and for worms of all kinds, and sometimes in the henhouse for lice, etc. It is surely one of the swiftest of all insecticides we can apply. I have usually applied it with the bare hand, scattering it rather freely over bushes and plants and around cucumber, melon and squash vines, even an inch deep on the ground."

Troubled With Catarrh.

"I have been troubled with catarrh for 18 years and for the last two years I have had a cough. I have taken two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and two boxes of Hood's Pills and these medicines have benefited me more than any other I have ever taken. I recommend this medicine for catarrh or nervousness." Mrs. Wm. Rutledge, Frederic, Mich.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

Ypsilanti has a flourishing camera club.

Blissfield will have a macadamized street. Good thing too—in such soil as that.

Adrian has a phenomenal trick bicycle rider in the person of Lee Kennedy, a 4-year-old.

The laying of the corner stone of the new masonic hall at Palmyra has been adjourned till next Tuesday.

Blissfield will have an old fashioned 4th celebration. The principal attraction will be the oration by Grant Fellows, of Hudson.

Adrian has prospects of securing a bicycle manufactory. Mr. Baker formerly with the Yost people, of Toledo, is the moving spirit.

The commencement exercises of the Hudson East Side High school took place last week Thursday evening. Four young ladies received diplomas.

The motor line between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, will be changed to an electric line, and that line and the Ann Arbor street railway will be run as one line.

The Hudson people are congratulating themselves over the prospects that the Lima Northern may run from Seneca to Hudson and thence over the Mackinaw to Jackson.

The Saline school board have decided to build a 300 barrel cistern in the school yard. It has probably been found necessary to furnish the pupils with soft water for bathing purposes.

Thos. J. Hiller, an attorney of Hudson, is on trial in the Circuit Court on charge of embezzlement while administrator of the estate of John Phillips. Judge Erastus Peck, of Jackson, is hearing the case.

The latest information given by the Morenci Observer concerning the Lima Northern is the fact that that road is quite certain to go somewhere after reaching Seneca on the Wabash. It may stop at Seneca.

T. J. Hiller, the Hudson attorney, was convicted of embezzlement in the circuit court Tuesday. The jury was out but a few minutes. He will probably give bonds tomorrow and appeal the case to supreme court.

The Abbott voting machine, which has been on exhibition for some time in a practical voting contest in New York, comes out ahead of its competitors. The machine gives fullest satisfaction and is likely to be adopted in the city of Brooklyn.

Ann Arbor and the University are rejoicing over the success of the 1896 May Festival. Well they may, for this most successful performance ranks Ann Arbor as among the great musical centers of this country and Professor Stanley as one of her leading composers and directors.

The new hall of the Oriental Order of Zouaves is in readiness for occupancy and is being fitted up with oriental splendor. The first initiation of candidates under the new ritual will take place Monday night. Hudson cantonment is the second of the kind in the United States.—Hudson Gazette.

Ypsilanti is going to have an opera house, sure. There is no mistake or doubt about it this time, for at a meeting of the stockholders, last Tuesday night, it was decided to go ahead with the building in the Beal block, the opera house to be finished by October, at a cost not exceeding $13,000. Work will probably be commenced at once.—Ypsilantian.

A man is going through the country working a new swindle. He calls at the residences and shows four photographs, which he says are his mother, father, wife and girl baby. All were burned to death by a gasoline explosion and he was also badly burned, and is here now under the treatment of a local physician. He sells court plaster to help him along, his physician giving him 100 packages as a present. He makes big hauls, almost everybody giving him the price of the plaster without taking it.

Gala days in Hudson this year will be as scarce as hair on a turnip. Along with the sad, sad fact that we will have no circuses, no ball games and no band tournament, comes the deplorable intelligence that Hudson will not celebrate the glorious "four times." A few citizens started out to arouse patriotism and secure a celebration, but met with so little encouragement of the right kind ($$) that they abandoned the idea. The occasional small boy and his bunch of fire-crackers is all that will be seen or heard on the streets of Hudson, July 4th this year.

Mayor Pingree, of Detroit—or rather of all over Michigan, was in the city Friday, and stayed over night. He and Uncle Charley Redfield "jostled" each other merrily for some time, but Ping. wouldn't say whether he would accept a nomination on the democratic ticket, in case he was not nominated by the republicans. Ping., however, shows that he has no use for a democrat or his principles. He says he is an out and out protectionist, and nothing democratic about him except a desire to skin McMillan, but if democrats want to vote for him, he can't help it. He visited Clayton and went down to Palmyra and made a speech. He is keeping republican managers busy, these days.—Adrian Press.

Moved that the following ordinance be passed and adopted:

AN ORDINANCE FOR THE ORGANIZATION AND MAINTENANCE OF A POLICE FORCE.

SEC. 1. The common council of the village of Tecumseh ordain: That a police force is hereby organized and established in the village of Tecumseh. Said police force shall consist of the village marshal, who shall be chief of police, who shall have command thereof, subordinate to the president and council, and such number of policemen as the council shall, by resolution, provide for from time to time, provided, that this provision shall in no wise abridge the right of the president or council to appoint special policemen as provided for in Sec. 4 of this ordinance.

SEC. 2. All policemen shall be appointed by the president by and with the consent of the council, on the second Monday of April of each year, and shall serve for the term of one year therefrom, or until removed or his successor shall be appointed and duly qualify. All policemen shall take and subscribe the constitutional oath of office before entering upon the duties thereof. Policemen shall receive such compensation for their services as the council shall fix by resolution.

SEC. 3. The president may suspend any member of the police force for neglect of duty or whenever he shall deem such suspension necessary for the public good; but no policeman shall be permanently removed except by the council when they shall believe that there is reasonable cause therefor.

SEC. 4. The president or council shall have authority to, and it shall be their duty, in case of emergency, or whenever the public good so requires, to appoint such number of special policemen as shall be deemed necessary. All special policemen shall, before entering upon their duties, take and subscribe the constitutional oath of office.

SEC. 5. It shall be the duty of the police to enforce the by-laws and ordinances of the village and the laws of the state and to make complaints for all violations thereof; and as peace officers they shall possess the same powers as constables.

SEC. 6. Whenever any person shall be arrested by any policeman he shall be immediately, or as soon thereafter as possible, taken before some justice of the peace of the township of Tecumseh, to be dealt with in accordance with the by-laws and ordinances of said village or the laws of the state.

SEC. 7. The marshal shall keep a correct record of all arrests and the cause therefor, wherein he shall enter, within twenty-four hours after such arrest, the name and age of the person arrested, nationality, and the cause thereof, and if discharged without being taken before the court, the reason therefor.

SEC. 8. The marshal, as chief of police, shall make and deliver to the council, at their first regular meeting of each month, a written report, which shall be on oath, of his doings during the past month. Said report shall show the number and names of all persons arrested by the police and the cause therefor, also the names of all persons discharged from arrest during the month, also the number of persons remaining in confinement for breaches of any ordinance of the village, the amount of all fines collected and the names of persons from whom collected and the cause therefor, and such other matters as he shall deem necessary.

SEC. 9. All moneys collected or received by the marshal shall be immediately paid into the village treasury and the receipt of the treasurer therefor shall be filed with the village clerk.

SEC. 10. This ordinance shall take immediate effect.

ALFRED JAMES, President.

W. J. INGERSOLL, clerk.

Passed June 1st, 1896.

Supported. Trustee Boyd, yea; Heesen, yea; Lowry, yea; Hall, yea; Wright, yea. Yeas, five; nays, none.

Ordinance declared passed and adopted.

Resolved: That the president appoint two policemen. Resolution supported. Carried.

Thereupon the president named as policemen Lucius L. Bates and Levi B. Thompson.

Moved that appointments of Lucius L. Bates and Levi B. Thompson, as policemen be confirmed. Supported. Carried.

Council then adjourned.

W. J. INGERSOLL,
Village Clerk.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1 per bottle at Baker & Hall's drug store. 1

It Rained.

Decoration day broke bright and cheerful and the careful preparations, which had been arranged were perfected in the morning in full anticipation that everything would be carried out as planned. Although clouds began to gather early in the forenoon, the work went on despite the fact that it rains "so easy" this year. The soldiers' monument on the square was most handsomely decorated, the floral car was arranged in showy and patriotic covering and an abundance of wreaths and floral offerings were arranged at the armory, by the W. R. C., for decorating the graves of departed veterans and members of Co. C. Beside this work, the citizens, who do not forget their dead, had remembered the resting place of their loved ones by becoming floral tokens which not only spoke of their regard but also of their loyalty to that day on which even the most careless feel a thrill of devotion for those who died for us.

Just as the Tipton band and Co. C marched to the four corners to escort the G. A. R. to the square, it began to rain and it didn't do much else during the entire afternoon. The only available place to which the meeting could be adjourned was the armory, and certainly it would have furnished ample room for the crowd, had arrangements been made to anticipate the weather and furnish chairs. As it was the speaker was obliged to talk to an audience part of which was constantly moving about and talking. American independence is occasionally carried to a point of extreme boorishness, and this certainly was an occasion. It seems a great pity that the missionaries in Japan would not come home and impart to their American brothers some of the salutatory lessons in public decency and the rights of others, which they have learned of the lowly Jap.

However, despite the jostle and the noise, the program was carried out as well as possible under the circumstances. The address of the day was forcibly and eloquently delivered, against odds which would have made such effort impossible to the ordinary speaker. Hon. Albert Deyo in the first place is a ready and forcible speaker. In the next place, he is an enthusiastic member of the G. A. R. and most thoroughly imbued with that true spirit of patriotism which consecrates this day to the purpose of perpetuating the memory of our departed heroes and to that alone. We trust it will be the privilege of our people to again hear Mr. Deyo under more favorable circumstances.

At the close of the address an interesting paper was read by Comrade [illegible] of Franklin, concerning his experience at Kenesaw mountain.

As if by special intervention, the rain ceased just long enough to allow the procession to form and march to the cemetery to perform the time honored service of decorating the graves of departed comrades. As quickly and completely as it had cleared off did the rain clouds gather again and the G. A. R. service at the cemetery was dispensed with, and the band, G. A. R., militia and floral car made double quick for shelter. They all got there too—after a most thorough drenching with mud and water.

Although the ceremonies of the day were a sad disappointment to those who had made such complete preparations for its observance as well as for those who regard its keeping as the most sacred duty of the year, they were one and all glad to know that a duty had been performed and that the old spirit of Memorial Day does not grow dim in the hearts of our citizens.

KELLOGG'S AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS.

The successful employment of mixed paints for residences, buildings, etc., is at last made possible by the use of an honestly made article. The Kellogg Paint Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., have built a world wide reputation on their AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS. They are honestly made of the purest pigments and are mixed in Calcutta or India Flax Seed Oil, aged and settled, which imparts a beautiful varnish-like gloss which is permanent and lasting. Thousands of hotels, residences and public buildings throughout the United States have been painted with these mixed paints with the best of satisfaction to their owners. Their enormous works at Buffalo are kept running night and day to supply the demand their excellent products merit. Having distributing points conveniently located throughout the country, the agencies are supplied on short notice, and parties who are interested in the subject of house painting, would do well to consider the matter and not buy paints of uncertain quality, and often inferior grades. If your local dealer does not handle Kellogg's BEST MIXED PAINTS, insist on his getting them for you or send direct to their distributing agents, where convenient cards with the shades displayed in great varieties are kept in quantities, together with complete information and full directions for the selection of proper shades and combinations. All orders and inquiries receive the most prompt and careful attention.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Diamondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last for hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Dideovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in resnlts." Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. 1

The eighth annual reunion of the Branch County Soldiers' and Sailors' association and the old Seventh Michigan volunteer infantry, at Bronson, on June 16 is expected to bring out at least 2,000 veterans, besides crowds of other people.

BANKER DROPS DEAD.

Andrew J. Bowne, of Grand Rapids, Succumbs to Heart Disease.

Grand Rapids, June 8.—Andrew J. Bowne, widely known in Michigan banking and business circles, dropped dead Sunday afternoon of heart disease. He was president of the Fourth national bank and of the Consolidated Street Railroad company, and was largely interested in the Lowell and Hastings railroad. He was one of the pioneer wool and grain buyers in the state, and at one time was one of the largest in the state. For 40 years he lived in Hastings, and about ten years ago came here. He was 65 years old and leaves a family.

TORNADO STRIKES LANSING.

Wind Demolishes Trees and Small Buildings—Torrents of Rain.

Lansing, June 8.—A tornado struck this city from the west shortly after 11 o'clock Sunday and a terrible rainstorm followed. It was the worst experienced here in years. Trees were uprooted and scores of them, some of which were a foot in diameter, were broken off. Several barns and numerous outbuildings were overturned and over 400 feet of sheds at the plant of the Michigan Stave company were leveled. The rain fell in torrents.

Peculiar Death of a Diver.

Harbor Springs, June 5.—A marine diver named Colwell lost his life Thursday in the wrecking operations on the sunken steamer Cayuga. He was employed by Capt. Reed and was lowered in the diving rig to the sunken boat. Five minutes later he was hoisted to the surface, and when his helmet was removed his head was found to be crushed. The cause is unknown.

Killed by the Cars.

Saginaw, June 4.—George Hartman, aged 33 and unmarried, met a terrible death by falling off the rear end of a gravel car, the next car in the train running over him. Both legs were cut completely off. He also had big holes in his head and side and was brought to St. Mary's hospital, where he died a few hours later.

Heavy Rainfall.

Adrian, June 9.—Prof. Howard, of Adrian college, reports that in the 36 hours preceding Sunday midnight within a fraction of five inches of rain fell in this city. The storms were intermittent and severe. A number of cattle are reported killed. Minor havoc by wind and water was extensive.

Absorbed a Rival.

Kalamazoo, June 6.—The Kalamazoo Radiator company has been absorbed by the American Radiator company, which belongs to the trust. It is feared that the institution, which employs 100 men, will be closed.

DEATH OF EX-GOV. BEGOLE.

He Expires Peacefully in His Home at Flint, at the Age of 81.

Flint, June 8. — Ex-Gov. Josiah W. Begole died at a late hour Friday night. He had been gradually failing for the last two years. He was 81 years old and leaves a widow and several children. The end came quickly after a protracted illness due to a general breaking down of a once robust constitution consequent upon an injury received a year ago last February by a fall as he was about to enter a carriage at his home. In the evening of a well-spent life and an honored career Michigan's kind-hearted and generally beloved ex-governor passed peacefully away, leaving as a rich legacy to his family an untarnished name that is held in honor wherever it is known.

Flint, June 9.—The remains of ex-Gov. Josiah W. Begole were laid to rest in Glenwood cemetery Monday afternoon with every mark of respect. The services were held at the First Presbyterian church, and the funeral was attended by Genessee Valley commandery K. T.; Flint Lodge, No. 23, F. and A. M.; Fenton Knights of the Loyal Guard; company A, Third regiment, M. N. G.; Gov. Crapo post, G. A. R.; members of the common council and ex-mayors and ex-aldermen and other past and present city officers in a body and Campbell's Flint City band. The stores on Saginaw and contiguous streets were closed during the hour of the funeral, and in the factories throughout the city there was a general suspension of work during the afternoon.

[Josiah W. Begole arrived in Michigan when it was a territory and almost a wilderness. He was born in Livingston county, N. Y., January 27, 1815. He received his early education in a log schoolhouse and subsequently attended Temple Hill academy at Genesee, N. Y. When 21 years old he left home to seek his fortune. He settled in Genesee county, and aided much in the prosperity of the city of Flint. He was married in 1839 to Miss Harriet A. Miles. He was a strong anti-slavery man and became a member of the republican party at its organization. Held several town and county offices, and in 1870 was nominated for state senator and elected by a large majority. He was a member of the national republican convention in 1872, and was elected to congress that year. In the gubernatorial election of 1883 he was the nominee of both the greenback and democratic parties, and defeated David H. Jerome, the republican candidate. He refused to be a candidate for reelection. Ex-Gov. Begole was a pioneer in masonry in this section of the state, having been made a member of the order about 50 years ago. He was a member of Flint lodge, No. 23, F. and A. M., and of Genesee Valley commandery, Knights Templar, and of the Mystic Shrine. He was for many years a member and communicant of the Presbyterian church and a liberal contributor to its support.]

GILBERT MEMORIAL UNVEILED.

Lorado Taft's Bust of the Grand Rapids Citizen Given to the City.

Grand Rapids, June 6.—A memorial to Thomas D. Gilbert was unveiled in Fulton Street Park Friday afternoon with prayer by Rev. D. E. Bradley and addresses by Col. George G. Briggs, George W. Thayer and President James B. Angell, of the University of Michigan. The memorial was accepted in behalf of the city by Mayor L. C. Snow.

Mr. Gilbert was for half a century one of the most prominent citizens of western Michigan, served 12 years as a member of the board of regents of the university, was once presidential elector and delegate-at-large to the national republican convention, besides holding city offices. He was also active in local charity work and was a generous giver. The memorial is a bronze bust executed by Lorado Taft, of Chicago.

Earnings of Michigan Roads.

Lansing, June 7.—Commissioner Billings reports that the Michigan earnings of the railroad companies for March were $2,273,282, an increase of $48,833 over March, 1895. The earnings to April 18 this year were $6,670,664, an increase of $427,955 or 6.42 per cent. over the same period last year.

Ex-Gov. Felch Very Ill.

Ann Arbor, June 10.—Ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch is very low and hardly expected to live. He is unable to move himself in bed. He is 92 years old. The heart action is bad, and there seems a general failing of his powers, both of mind and body, yet all hope is not given up.

Factory Undermined.

Battle Creek, June 9.—The storm Sunday night undermined the carriage works of Adams & Smith and the Hart flouring mill. A portion of three large buildings was carried through a washout 60 feet wide. Damage, $3,500.

Grasshoppers Do Much Damage.

Niles, June 7.—The farms of William Eisner and Peter Ellis, residing east of here, were ravaged by a flock of grasshoppers. The hoppers appeared to be in millions. They attacked hay and oats and did great damage.

Kalamazoo, June 6.—A ten-mile road race will be run here July 4, with $1 prizes, ranging from $2.50 to $100 wheels, of which there are five.

TERRIFIC STORMS.

Great Damage Done in Several Western States.

Several Persons Lose Their Lives and Over One Thousand Head of Live Stock Perish—Hail Cuts Down the Crops.

St. Paul, Minn., June 8.—Reports received in St. Paul up to midnight indicate that the damage done by the great storm will reach fully $300,000. The loss of human life is not yet known, but three people are known to have perished. These are C. W. Castleton, of Ash Lake; E. W. Hunter, of Adrian, and Moses Chadwick, of Nobles county. There were at least 1,000 cattle, sheep, hogs and horses drowned in southwestern Minnesota. The greatest casualties were at Luverne and on the Rock river. Two cloudbursts struck the latter in three hours and the river overflowed the country for miles.

Four Drowned in Kansas.

Leavenworth, Kan., June 8.—Mike and Dennis Desmond and Eugene and Danay Cummings were drowned here Sunday. About two o'clock p. m. a cloudburst came upon the city and no such flood of water has been witnessed here for many years. Upon the approach of the rain six small boys, the four named and two others, Mike Cummings and George Newsome, rushed to a culvert for shelter. Before they could realize what happened, four of them were carried off by the rush of water.

Roads Strewn with Dead Birds.

Wichita, Kan., June 8.—A terrific hailstorm at an early hour Sunday morning destroyed thousands of acres of ripe growing corn in southern Kansas with hailstones, cutting stalks off like a mowing machine. The storm was so severe that the roadsides are strewn with dead birds. The storm was general apparently all over southern Kansas and extending over a part of Oklahoma.

A Church Wrecked.

Lincoln, Neb., June 6.—Reports from northeastern Nebraska tell of a terrific storm of wind and rain. In Stanton county barns, schoolhouses and one large country church were torn to pieces. Much farm machinery and other personal property were destroyed. The wind was even more violent in Thurston county, developing almost into a tornado. Several residences were badly damaged, barns leveled and live stock killed. So far as known no lives were lost. One boy was injured.

Destroyed by the Wind.

O'Neill, Neb., June 8.—Word has reached here that Lynch, Boyd county, was destroyed by a tornado Saturday night. No lives were lost. Lynch is a small village 20 miles north of here, off the railroad and without telegraph communication. The condition of wagon roads makes it impossible to secure particulars.

Storm at Chicago.

Chicago, June 8.—There was a heavy hailstorm in Chicago Sunday afternoon and in the southeastern district much damage was done by wind and rain. In Hyde Park and Woodlawn all basements were flooded with water and many windows were broken by the hail. Many trees were blown down, signs were carried away and the roof of the Waukesha flats at Sixty-fourth and Grace streets was partially destroyed by the wind. Two boats were capsized by a squall on the lake, one at Thirty-ninth street and the other at South Chicago. Eight people in all were thrown into the lake but all were rescued alive.

Swept Over the Falls.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 9.—An unknown man, who is supposed to hail from Buffalo, lost his life here Monday night in a very mysterious manner. While standing on Luna island at the brink of the cave of the winds his hat blew off, and in making a sudden attempt to catch it the unfortunate man lost his footing, slipped into the water and on the slimy rocks and in an instant was swept over the falls.

Carlisle's Answer.

Washington, June 10.—Secretary Carlisle in his reply to the subcommittee of the senate finance committee charged with the investigation of the sale of United States bonds during the years 1894, 1895 and 1896, says that foreign investors became uneasy regarding our ability to pay in gold and bonds were necessary to maintain our credit.

Grasshopper Plague in Ohio.

Chillicothe, O., June 10.—The plague of grasshoppers which is ruining the farmers north of the city is on the increase. Several hundred of the insects have been captured and shipped to the Ohio experimental station at Columbus, where they will be inoculated with a virus to work their destruction.

Martial Law Declared.

Barcelona, June 9.—Martial law has been declared here. The total number of victims of the bomb explosion Sunday are eight dead, 21 dying and 18 injured. The impression is general that anarchists did the work as a result of a widespread anarchist plot.

Wants to Be Auditor General.

Decatur, June 4.—Edwin A. Wildey, of Paw Paw, has announced himself as a candidate for the republican nomination for auditor general.

CUSTOMER—I want a remedy for catarrh.

DRUG CLERK—All right, sir. Here's a blood tonic that is advertised to build up the constitution.

CUSTOMER—Young man, do you think I'm going to dose myself with a blood tonic for months, just on the chance of it doing me some good? Not much! I want immediate relief; besides, catarrh is a local affection, and no tonic or blood purifier ever made, can cure it. Here's 50 cents. Let me have Ely's Cream Balm. It's the only thing I know of to cure an attack of catarrh. 7

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., June 8, '96.

President Cleveland has been convinced that the silver men will control the Chicago convention. The Kentucky contest almost settled his hopes, and the business was clinched when Secretaries Smith and Morton returned to Washington and made their reports. Secretary Smith says Georgia will join the silver column at Chicago, and Secretary Morton, who has been visiting the Pacific coast, says the silver sentiment of that section is so overwhelming that no man or party can stand against it. It looks like this ought to be sufficient to take Mr. Cleveland out of the calculations at Chicago, and so it is with most people, but there are still a few men who cling to the idea that he is a pet of fate. These men hint mysteriously of something Mr. C. will shortly do, in connection with Cuba, that will renew his hold upon the country.

The passing of the River and Harbor bill over President Cleveland's veto was very quietly accomplished in both House and Senate, and there were plenty of votes to spare, over and above the two-thirds required.

The fact that the silver men will control the Chicago convention has upset a great many political plans, made upon the presumption that neither the republican nor democratic national conventions would declare for silver. Prominent members of the silver party, which is to hold a national convention at St. Louis on July 22d—the same time and place that the populist convention is to be held—, have already declared that they favored endorsing the ticket nominated at Chicago, if the platform declared for silver. This doesn't suit the populists who have been counting upon the co-operation of the silver party. There may be some sensational surprises in national politics this summer.

About the only result of the passing of the Butler anti-bond bill by the Senate was to emphasize what everybody already knew—that the silver men control that body. The bill, which reads as follows: "Be it enacted, that the issuance of interest bearing bonds of the United States for any purpose whatever without furthur authority of Congress is hereby prohibited," has been tabled by a majority vote of the House. The 32 votes cast in the Senate for the bill were from 10 republicans, 17 democrats and 5 populists, and the 25 against it were from 16 republicans and 9 democrats. Silver and not party was the dividing line, and during the debate which preceded the final vote several of the republican silver Senators, including Teller, Cannon and Brown, of Utah, took occasion to offer some advance advice to the St. Louis convention. Senator Teller was somewhat pointed in his remarks. He said: "What the republican party will do at St. Louis, I do not know, but I believe I know enough of the sentiment of the west and of the plain people of the country to say that the party that inscribes on its banner 'the gold standard' is doomed to defeat."

So far as the committees of the House and Senate are concerned these engineers who investigated and reported upon the Nicaragua canal, in accordance with instructions from Congress, would just as well have remained at home. Reports were submitted from the committees to both House and Senate, this week, and that of the House committee was positively disrespectful to the engineers, and impeached their estimates of the probable cost of the canal. The report made to the Senate wasn't quite so positive in referring to the work of the engineer commission, but was even more positive in advocating the building of the canal. There is no expectation of action upon this at the present session of Congress, and its fate at the next session will depend largely upon circumstances.

The real estate syndicates which heavily invested in land around the suburbs of Washington have not, except in rare instances, realized the expected profits, and they would be glad of some government assistance. This has been asked for in various ways, but the requests have not been heeded up to this time. Several years ago there was a bill to appropriate a million dollars to buy a specified piece of property just north of the city proper, upon which to erect a residence for the President of the United States. After that was shelved came a proposition to add about $12,000,000 to the bonded indebtedness of the District of Columbia, and to use the money putting in seweres and grading streets through country fields. That was killed as soon as its real purpose was discovered. The latest is the most modest request of all. It is a bill appropriating $100,000 for the purchase of 18 acres of land in a specified location, to be used as a summer home for the President. This land may have cost its owners in hundreds what they are seeking to get thousands from Congress for, but it is doubtful whether it cost them that much. It is also extremely doubtful about their unloading this land on Congress.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to know that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers' that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

When a man owns a blooded horse he is always careful of its health. He looks after its diet and is particular that the feeding shall be regular and right. While he is doing this it is likely as not that he is himself suffering from some disease or disorder. When the trouble gets so bad that he cannot work, he will begin to give himself the care he gave the horse at the start. Good pure, rich, red blood is the best insurance against disease of any kind. Almost all diseases come from impure or impoverished blood. Keep the blood pure and strong and disease can find no foothold. That is the principle upon which Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery works. It cleanses, purifies and enriches the blood puts and keeps the whole body in perfect order; makes appetite good, digestion strong, assimilation perfect. It brings ruddy, virile health. It builds up solid, wholesome flesh (not fat) when from any cause, reduced below the healthy standard. 1w

If strength is what you want, you should study what causes your weakness.

It is practically lack of food.

But you eat three meals a day and all you can eat at a time.

Yes, but do you digest it?

Food undigested, is not food. It is not nourishment.

It doesn't create strength.

To digest your food take Shaker Digestive Cordial at meals. After a while you will digest your food without it. Then you will get well, and strong and healthy.

Shaker Digestive Cordial cures indigestion and all its symptoms, such as nausea, headache, eructations, pain in the stomach, giddiness, loss of appetite, etc. It makes your food nourish you, and make you strong and fat and hearty.

A BACK BLOW.

The Weapon Small — but None More Certain or Effective.

In these times when backs are lame, when almost every other one we meet has now and then, or all the time, a back that aches or pains—"a weak back," "a bad back," a back that makes their life a misery to bear—and still they go on day by day in pain and suffering. Now 'tis the easiest thing in the world to give this played out back "a blow" that will settle it, and put in its place a new one equal to any. It's just like this: hit at the cause; most backaches come from kidney disorders. Reach the kidneys, start their clogged-up fibres in operation; when this is done you can say good-bye to backache.

Here is a case from Battle Creek: Mr. Josiah M. Shoup lives at 51 Broad Street, he was a member of the Battle Creek police force for many years. As a member of the force he served the city well, but the rough weather he was often subjected to laid the foundation of kidney disorder, which has troubled him very much. Here is what he says about it:

"About three years ago, while on the police force, I contracted from exposure a kidney trouble, which has since given me no end of trouble. The pain was right through my kidneys and across the small of my back; if sitting down and I wanted to stand up, I had to arise very slowly and gently to avoid increasing the pain; I had such tired-out feelings all the time, and I was steadily getting worse. About two months ago, hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a box. Their action and effect was most complete, they removed the old aching pains for good. I can now get around as quickly as anybody. Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly as represented."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

Weak, Irritable, Tired

"I Was No Good on Earth."

Dr. Miles' Nervine strengthens the weak, builds up the broken down constitution, and permanently cures every kind of nervous disease.

"About one year ago I was afflicted with nervousness, sleeplessness, Creeping sensation in my legs, Slight Dullsensation of my head, Distracting confusion of the mind, Nervous loss or lapses of memory, Weighted down with care and sorrow. I completely lost appetite, And felt and visibly wasting away. I was weak, irritable and blue. My weight was reduced to 160 lbs. In fact I was no good, on earth."

A friend brought me Dr. Miles' book, "New and Startling Facts," and I finally decided to try a bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. Before I had taken one bottle I could sleep as well as a 10-yr.-old boy. My appetite returned greatly increased.

When I had taken the sixth bottle My weight increased to 170 lbs. The sensation in my legs was gone. My nerves steadied completely. My memory was fully restored. My brain seemed clearer than ever. I felt as good as any man on earth. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a great medicine, I assure you.

Augusta, Me. WALTER B. BURNHAM.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price, by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

DISEASED MEN CURED

THOUSANDS of young men, middle aged men and old men can look back to their boyhood days or early manhood with a sigh of regret. The ignorance of early youth, or later on a misspent life as "one of the boys" has sown the seeds for future suffering. SELF ABUSE is a terrible sin against nature and will bring a rich harvest. Blood and Private Diseases sap the very life and vitality of the victim. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT will positively cure all the following diseases:

VARICOCELE, EMISSIONS, NERVOUS DEBILITY, SYPHILIS, STRICTURE, GLEET, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, PIMPLES, LOST MANHOOD, UNNATURAL DISCHARGES, KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES

ARE YOU? NERVOUS and despondent; weak or debilitated; tired mornings; lack ambition—lifeless; memory poor; easily fatigued; excitable and irritable; eyes sunken, red and blurred; pimples on face; dreams and night losses; restless; haggard looking; weak back, bone pains; hair loose; ulcers; sore throat; unnatural discharges; varicocele; deposit in urine and drains at stool; distressful want of confidence, lack of energy and strength—WE CAN CURE YOU OR ASK NO PAY.

CURES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY—CONFIDENTIAL

SNATCHED FROM THE GRAVE. A Warning from the Living. 13 I learned a bad habit. Tried doctors and nerve tonics by the score without benefit; emissions and drains increased. I became a nervous wreck. A friend who had been cured by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan of a similar disease, advised me to try them. I did so and in two months was perfectly cured. This was eight years ago. I am now married and have two healthy children."—C. W. LEWIS, Saginaw, VARICOCELE CURED. "Varicocele made life miserable. I was weak, nervous, eyes sunken, bashful in society, had no ambition. The 'Golden Monitor' opened my eyes. The New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan cured me in a few weeks.—I. L. PETERSON, Ionia.

EMISSIONS CURED. J. P. EMERSON relates his experience, "I was a farm. At school I learned an early habit. It weakened me physically, sexually and mentally. Family doctors said I was going into 'decline' (consumption.) Finally 'The Golden Monitor,' edited by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, fell into my hands. I learned the TRUTH and the CAUSE. Half had sapped my vitality, I took the New Method Treatment and was cured. friends think I was cured of consumption. I have sent them many patients, all whom were cured. Their New Method Treatment supplies vigor, vitality and manhood."

SYPHILIS CURED. "This terrible blood disease was in my system for years, but returned. Eyes red, pimples and blotches on the skin, ulcers in the mouth and on tongue; bone pains, falling out of hair, weakness, etc. My brother, who had been cured of Gleet and Stricture by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, recommended them. They cured me in a few weeks, and I thank God I consulted them. No return of disease in six years."—W. F. M., Jackson.

Rev. James Vincent, of Tecumseh, was an Adrian business visitor Saturday evening.—Adrian Telegram.

The Tecumseh Herald has just turned its 46th year of publication, and is growing good with age.—Blissfield Advance.

S. L. Plant, merchant tailor, late of Tecumseh, has located in Dundee to engage in business. His rooms are located over the store of Romig & Berg.—Dundee Reporter.

Tecumseh has been doing for some time without a police force, but since the bicycle ordinance was passed it has been found necessary to appoint a day and night patrolman.—Adrian Telegram.

The Brooklyn Exponent published a supplement last week, regular space having been crowded with advertising matter and the Memorial day address. Mrs. Clough is a hustling newspaper woman.

The men of the Lake Shore shops are taking turns in laying off a week. The arrangement reduces the force about one-eighth. The decrease in work which necessitates this plan is about a month earlier than in ordinary years.—Adrian Times.

Adrian was all torn up last week over the "Deestrick Skule," which was presented by local talent to the entire city Friday evening. Doc Morden, Seth Bean and many other Adrian "kids" took part and everybody laughed and had a good time.

The subscription books to stock in the Abbott Voting Machine company were opened at Hudson yesterday afternoon and $100,000 in stock was taken by local investors in thirty minutes. A factory will be started at Hudson at once.—Adrian Telegram.

Mr. R. S. Moreland states he has met with so little encouragement in regard to establishing a bicycle factory here, that he has abandoned all effort in that direction. Local capitalists have been disappointed so many times in similar enterprises that they have lost all heart.—Adrian Times.

The Herald shears always seem anxious to get a nip at the Monroe Democrat, but this week a long, white streak appears down "Philanders" funniest column, placed there on purpose, no doubt, by some thick headed pressman. The shears feel sad, but will go out and indulge in a new sharpen ready for next week.

The rain of Saturday and Sunday did much damage in Adrian, flooding stores washing out railway track and among other things drowned 26 chickens in Dewesse Wilson's cellar, while the lightning knocked out the boss elk in the Page Wire Fence Co.'s herd. Adrian never could stand much water, except "on the side."

The state crop report that wheat is seriously affected with rust, is without doubt untrue so far as this vicinity is concerned. In a 17-mile ride through the country, the other day, the Advance editor only saw one field of wheat in that condition. — Blissfield Advance. About the same report may be made of the wheat fields around Tecumseh. All are in fine condition.

Miss Carrie Jackson went to Tecumseh Friday last, to take part in a Musical given there that evening. In musical Tecumseh Miss Jackson stands high as a pianist, and her numbers upon the program were received with great enthusiasm. When the people of Dundee are educated to the same musical standard as are those of Tecumseh, Miss Jackson's talents will be appreciated at their true value.—Dundee Reporter.

The band boys will not give a concert tomorrow evening. The new instruments have not arrived, due to the fact that the Detroit Musical Company's building caught fire last Tuesday. The instruments were saved, however, and will undoubtedly arrive within a few days.—Britton Citizen. Later: The new instruments came, but the wind being constantly in the west Tecumseh people have not noticed any strange, mysterious noises.

Last week, the Tecumseh Herald began its 47th volume and appears to be prospering, and presents a very neat typographical appearance. The local and editorial work show enterprise and care, while the generous patronage of advertisers show that they appreciate the value of the paper as an advertising medium. The present management announces that it will be strictly independent in politics, and will try and do everything for the best, making the paper a faithful record of facts.—Adrian Press. Thanks. The Herald always appreciates a good notice from a good newspaper.

An exchange says A. J. Kempton, of Addison, being a gentleman of leisure, was selected to present the diplomas of the Addison graduating class. All that Kempton has had to do for the past few years, was to run a Sunday school, attend to the duties of alderman, sell watches and clocks, edit a newspaper, do the job work and preach.—Adrian Times. Yes, and they say he can clean a watch in twenty minutes, knock out the whole council in joint debate, run the Sunday school on business principles and preach like a whirlwind, beside printing a "hang up" good newspaper, and contemplates running for Justice of the Peace.

E. B. DOWNING, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Was troubled with Rheumatism—tried several remedies with no effect. Had several doctors who did me no good—half a bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequalled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy cured me."

J. FREE SMITH, Lansing, Mich.

"Doctors called it Bright's Disease in its early stage. One bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy removed all symptoms of the disease—have felt nothing of it since."

Mrs. DIANA RIGGS, Hillsdale, Mich.

"Was sick for four years with enlargement of the Liver and Spleen, and General Prostration of the Nervous System; was attended by two of the best Doctors in the town and used no end of Patent Medicines, all who saw me thought there was no relief except by death, which seemed sure. A friend recommended Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy; in less than a week after I commenced taking it I was better. Six bottles cured me. You are welcome to use my name and this statement, and also refer anyone to me either personally or by mail, and I will tell them much more than I can write."

We have many more letters to the same effect.

This preparation is in no way to be classed among the many worthless Patent Medicines of the day, being simply a Prescription used by Dr. F. French, of Hillsdale, for many years in his practice. It is offered to the public with the full assurance of its being the Best Medicine on Earth for the cure of Rheumatism in all its various forms. Affections of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, Scrofula-Eruptions, and Cutaneous Diseases, Female Weakness, and all complaints arising from an Impure Condition of the Blood.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 12, 1896.

For a number of years Scovel Walker has been connected in one capacity or another with the Tecumseh Herald, and it is with mingled pleasure and regret that we now chronicle the fact of his severing his connection with the old paper to assist Uncle Sam in the railway mail service. His first run was from Cleveland to Chicago last Saturday night, and that this may be the first of hundreds of lucky runs is the wish of the Herald and hosts of other friends. "Scove" will be missed in Tecumseh by every person who knows him, as he not only made friends by his unusual good nature but has always been regarded in this community as a young man who was in every way absolutely reliable. He will succeed with his new employment if honest purpose and hard work will bring success.

The editors of partisan newspapers become so biased in their opinions that it seems sometimes almost impossible for them to tell the truth. At the present time the republican newspapers are gloating over the fact that the River and Harbor bill was passed over Cleveland's veto by an overwhelming majority. Everyone of these republican editors well know that the river and harbor bill was a gigantic trade. Seventy millions of dollars have been appropriated to spend on the rivers and harbors of the United States, when one quarter of that amount, with judicious expenditure, would do the work. All the republican congressmen and senators voted for this bill for two reasons; first because they desired to fulfill their trade agreements; second because if the country was loaded down with this debt there would be more excuse for higher tariff in the future. The democrats had only the first reason. Both democrats and republicans are fully aware that Cleveland's veto was absolutely right. On the other hand, the democratic newspapers are very much worried about whether McKinley is a silverite or a gold-bug. What nonsense! Wm. McKinley will be nominated at St. Louis by a convention seven-eighths of the delegates to which are in favor of the gold standard, if he runs for president he will be obliged to do so standing on the platform that this convention adopts. This platform will be gold first, last and all the time. Why is it that partisans become so biased that they cannot, or will not, tell the truth?

The following extract from the Secretary of State's. June 1, crop report, will be of interest to every farmer. No matter what we may think, the facts of the case are that Michigan crops are in first rate condition: "The average condition of wheat June 1, was in the southern counties 69, and in the State 77, as compared with 91 and 92 on May 1. One year ago the averages were 66 and 73. The average condition now in the central counties is 87, and in the northern 95, as compared with 94 in each section one month ago, and 83 in the central and 87 in the northern one year ago. The average condition in the southern counties is 22 points, and in the State 15 points lower than one month ago. These figures may be taken to represent the average of our correspondents estimates of damage by Hessian fly and rust. In a special report given out May 23 the average damage in the southern counties was estimated at 26 per cent. The recent cool weather and heavy rains have been beneficial, but it is beyond question that the crop is seriously and permanently injured. Whatever the total yield it would have been much more had not the crop been damaged by Hessian fly and rust. The acreage planted to corn fully equals, and the acreage sowed to oats is from three to five per cent less than, the acreage in average years. In condition oats are nearly a full average. The average condition of meadows and pastures is in southern counties 79, central, 87, and northern 94, the average for the State being 83. Clover sowed this year is in good condition. The figures for the State are 95. Apples promise about 93 per cent and peaches 83 per cent of average crops. In the southern counties the wages per month of farm hand average $15.10 with board, and $20.85 without board; in the central counties, $13.86 with board, and $20.91 without board, and in the northern counties $15.49 with board, and $24.-99 without board. The averages for the State are $14.87 with board, and $21.35 without board. Wages now are lower than one year ago in each section of the State."

OBITUARY.

MEAD.

At the age of sixty-nine Mr. Cyrus Mead departed this life, on the 26th of May 1896. He was born in Lewiston, Westchester Co., N. Y., May 10, 1827. He was married to Ellen Bailey, of Milo, N. Y., Feb. 16, 1853, and moved to Macon, Mich., in November of the same year. During the forty years which he spent upon his farm in said township, he gained many friends by means of his jovial disposition and his kind, benevolent acts

In August, 1893, he took up his residence in Ypsilanti, Mich. It was there that the obsequies and burial took place. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. A. DeSpelder, formerly pastor of the family, and was attended by a large number of Ypsilanti and Macon neighbors and friends.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, Druggist, Heaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at Baker & Hall's drug store. 2

KELLOGG'S AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS.

The successful employment of mixed paints for residences, buildings, etc., is at last made possible by the use of an honestly made article. The Kellogg Paint Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., have built a world wide reputation on their AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS. They are honestly made of the purest pigments and are mixed in Calcutta or India Flax Seed Oil, aged and settled, which imparts a beautiful varnish-like gloss which is permanent and lasting. Thousands of hotels, residences and public buildings throughout the United States have been painted with these mixed paints with the best of satisfaction to their owners. Their enormous works at Buffalo are kept running night and day to supply the demand their excellent products merit. Having distributing points conveniently located throughout the country, the agencies are supplied on short notice, and parties who are interested in the subject of house painting would do well to consider the matter and not buy paints of uncertain quality, and often inferior grades. If your local dealer does not handle Kellogg's BEST MIXED PAINTS, insist on his getting them for you or send direct to their distributing agents, where convenient cards with the shades displayed in great varieties are kept in quantities, together with complete information and full directions for the selection of proper shades and combinations. All orders and inquiries receive the most prompt and careful attention.

Pat Redman and Sam Boyce were all fixed up over a horse Wednesday night and the worstof it all was the horse belonged to James McCarbury. Deputy Stevens did some great detective work during the evening but Thursday morning Sam drove up sober and all was settled.

James A. Boyd, Gen. F. B. Wood, Dan. Garlinghouse, J. J. Orr, Postmaster Thos. Kyle, I. D. Loree, John Hazlett and Dr. O. Q. Jones attended the laying of the corner stone of the new Masonic Temple at Palmyra Tuesday and report a grand good time.

The prizes in the coming bicycle contests will be the most valuable which have ever been offered outside of a National Circuit meet. No shoddy articles will be permitted on the list and in guaranteeing the value of each prize the association stakes its reputation.

Subjects for next Sunday, by E. C. Cyrus: 10:30a. m., "The Material Support of the Christian Church". 7:30 evening Convention of Charities". Sunday-school at 12:00 m. Y. P. C. U. devotional meeting at 6:30 p. m., Topic; "The Children and the Flowers", St. Luke, 18: 1 - 14; 6 - 28.

Aside from the pupils, about 150 people attended the recital given by the pupils of Miss Jennie Root last Friday evening. It is reported by those who are familiar with and enjoy music that the pupils advanced and beginners, have marked improvement since the last recital. The evening was made enjoyable by the smoothness with which every number was executed. It is to be hoped that such recitals may continue.

Last Sunday morning John Hialey lost one of the finest greyhound dogs in this section. Sunday evening the dog followed Mr. Hialey's daughter Gertrude to the C. J. & M. depot and returning, playfully chased some chickens along the road. Chas. Aten, seeing the performance, procured his shot gun and killed the dog. The dog was in no way molesting Mr. Aten and as a result Aten will have to settle the matter with the state's attorney, who was over from Adrian Monday and had Aten bound over to the circuit court. Mr. Hialey is worse over the loss of this dog than he would to have parted with his best horse and it certainly was a great loss to lose so fine an animal.

Home Seeker's Excursions, June 16 and 23, via Ohio Central Lines. 2

Lester Westcott started to work for James Lowry last Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Walker spent the Sabbath with relatives south of Adrian.

An additional pension has been granted to our afflicted townsman, Thomas Hanley.

R. J. W. Bowen and family, of Franklin, are spending the day at the home of Milo Dole.—Adrian Times.

Stephen Whittier is improving the looks of Geo. Merritt's house with a new porch and other work of repair.

Advices from our former townsman, David McNair, show him to be well located in a bank at Cripple Creek, Col.

Miss Mamie Haight, of Tecumseh, and Vada Shaw, of Ypsilanti, were Dundee visitors this week.—Dundee Reporter.

The Lilley State bank is undergoing a complete renovation, new wall paper, new floor, etc., but the same men remain to change the money.

D. S. Plant, who has been in the employment of J. C. Hazlett for some months, left last week for Dundee to open up a tailor shop in that place.

Misses Lina Jones and Nellie Kishpaugh, of Clinton, came over on their wheels, and were the guests of Mrs. Hanaibal Osborne Sunday and Monday.

Wolcott Marsh reports they had new potatoes, not new potato, but a sufficient quantity of good sized tubers to fully satisfy his entire family, last Sabbath.

If you happen to wake up at 7 o'clock and listen real sharp, you may perhaps hear the weather signal blown at that hour by the Gilliland electric works of Adrian.

A recent copy of the City and Island Methodist, of Brooklyn, N. Y., shows an excellent condition of the paper as it enters its third year under the management of A. R. Pardington.

Veterinary surgeons at Tecumseh are still digging plate glass out of a spirited horse which recently went in at the window to show the editor of the Herald how to write up "Hoss News.

The Tecumseh and Franklin Farmer's Club will hold their annual picnic at Putnam's landing, Sand Lake, on June 20th. Let all the members lay aside care and enjoy one day of rest and recreation.

Business cares have caused Capt. T. R. Kyle to resign from Co. C. First regiment, M. N. G., Tecumseh. Under his captaincy the company has much improved in discipline and work.—Adiran Times.

Leon McNeil, a printer employed in Finch's rubber stamp shop, was united in marriage last Thursday evening, to Miss Anna Richards, who resides on Madison street. Printers usually make good husbands and we trust the young man will prove to her a type of true manhood.—Adrian Press.

Dr. Thomas Miller, of Washington, D. C., was in town a few hours last Saturday. He was unexpectedly called home to attend his brother Alexander, of Raisin, who has been quite ill. He reports Alexander now better. Dr. Tom looks as if the world and all the people had been using him well.

At the regular meeting of Beers' Post, 140, G. A. R., June 1, it was moved and carried that a vote of thanks be tendered the committee that so kindly assisted in the Decoration on Memorial day, and especially to Hon. Albert Deyo, of Morenci, who delivered the oration.

A. W. Slayton, Adjt.
H. W. Stevens, Commander.

J. H. Bramble brought to the Herald office counting room last Monday, a quart of strawberries, which consisted of one measuring nine inches in circumference and 29 others. The editor of the Herald thinks this beats all record in this line, but suggests that future competitors in the strawberry line do not forget the 29 others as well as the large one.

Clayton, Lambert & Co., of Ypsilanti, will hold a Diamond Race Meet at the Ypsilanti Fair Ground Friday and Saturday, June 12 and 13. These gentlemen have been prominently mentioned in bicycle matters for the last few years and without question this meet will be a successful affair. The Great Fowler Sextet which was seen by a great many people at their spring show will endeavor each day to beat a mile record of 1:50.

The following concerning Mr. Cook, who has become known to many Tecumseh people through his connection with the Eastern Bankrupt Purchasing Asso. is taken from the Adrian Times: Harry E. Cook turned over the opera house to its owners yesterday, when his lease expired. Mr. Cook is undecided as to whether he will act as manager another season. It is to be hoped he may, as he furnished amusement lovers a finer class of attractions last season than was ever offered before. If Mr. Cook could also be induced to take the management of the Tecumseh opera House it would be a good thing.

We publish the following comparative meteorological data furnished from the report of Dr. F. O. Tefft to the state board of health, which will be of interest. The figures relate to the rain-fall and temperature in the month of May for four years. The rain-fall for May in those years is as follows: 1893—12 in., 1894—8.12 in., 1895—2.55 in., 1896—3.79 average 6.6 inches. The hottest and coldest temperatures in May for the 4 years, with days of month, is as follows: 1893, 23d,—86°, 3d—36°; 1894, 17th—84°, 18th—35 degrees; 1895, 30th—89 degrees, 14th—36 degrees, with snow; 1896, 10th—86 degrees, 31st—44 degrees. The average for May has been: 1893—55 degrees; 1894—57.05 degrees; 1895—59.58 degrees; 1896—65.12 degrees. It will be seen that the rain-fall for this year has not been unusual, but often and that the temperature has a remarkably high average.

The Bicycle Derby, Tecumseh, Thursday, July 23.

Mrs. Wm. Hayden and Will Hayden accompanied J. M. Hayden to his home in Grand Rapids, yesterday.

See those handsome new wash goods just opened at Anderson & Co.

Miss Mollie Healey, of Detroit, and John Webber and wife, of Chelsea, were in Tecumseh Thesday to attend the Martin-Kirchgessner wedding.

The ladies of the Methodist church will give a ten cent tea in the church, Wednesday, June 17. Supper served from 5:30 to 7. All are cordially invited.

A. W. Slayton is in Detroit this week looking after his wholesale lumber yard. He will also visit his retail yard at Royal Oak. His managers report trade very good.

Mrs. Dr. Miller, of Washington, D. C., accompanied by her son Thomas, arrived in Tecumseh yesterday and will spend several weeks with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. C. Tefft.

For Sale Cheap—A good barn. For particulars inquire at the Herald office.

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. A. Fitzsimmons have arrived safely at Middleton, N. Y. At least, so a letter from his honor this morning distinctly states. His only trouble seems to be that he forgot, before leaving, to order the Herald to follow. The Herald now goes.

H. M. Temple, an old Tecumseh boy, is chairman of the committee on entertainment for the G. A. R. encampment at St. Paul, and ample arrangement will be made to take care of all the old "Vets," who attend. This will be especially lucky for the Lenawee Co. boys, for he will know and be glad to see them all.

A special L. S. & M. S. train arrived at Tecumseh Monday, a score of workmen disembarked and planted in the vicinity of the station two beautiful beds of flowers. Chas. Orr, the baggage man, has signed a contract to keep the posies in growing condition, and the only objection Mr. Satterthwaite seems to have to the arrangement is that the flowers might have a tendency to attract the young ladies in that direction.

Tuesday June 9th, at 10:30 a. m., at the residence of Mr. E. F. Kirchgessner, occured the marriage of his sister, Miss Libbie Kirchgessner to Mr. Harry T. Martin, of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Heidnreich, of Manchester, only the relatives and friends being present. Miss Kirchgessner has for a nnmber of years been employed as an assistant in Anderson & Co's dry goods business and is well thought of by everyone for her genial disposition and high business qualities. Mr. Martin is the son of Michael J. Martin, of Macon, learned his first lessons in the Anderson store, and has been for the past four years employed in the wholesale house of J. V. Farwell & Co., of Chicago. The happy couple left Tecumseh at noon via Jackson for Chicago, which city will be their future home. Although the wedding was a quiet one, the bride's many friends did not forget her in the way of numerous and useful gifts and with these gifts came wishes of good luck and prosperity which will follow the couple through life.

It is with extreme regret that it becomes necessary for The Herald to announce that The Stimpson Scale Co. is about to remove its works and business from Tecumseh to Elkhart, Ind. We are informed by Mr. Barnes, the secretary, that this step has become necessary, not through any fault of our citizens, excepting in as much as it is necessary that the company, to keep pace with their increasing business, should increase their capital stock to $100,000, and that, of course, this amount was not forth-coming in Tecumseh. There are now associated with Messrs. Barnes and Finn, Messrs. H. E. Bucklen and Issac Grimes, of Elkhart, who have furnished the necessary capital to increase the stock to $100,000 which will put the concern on a footing equal to that of many concerns of twenty years' standing. The manufacture of the Stimpson scale is destined to become a great business. Aside from the computing part there is no doubt that this is the best built scale manufactured. The computing system is fully covered by patents, which have stood the tests of the courts, and it is so simple and absolutely accurate that it will be only a short time when these scales will be as necessary in all branches of mercantile business as the common scale is today. It seems very much to be regretted that such a concern, managed by such competent and painstaking men as Messrs. Barnes and Finn, should leave Tecumseh, still we cannot but congratulate these gentlemen on their success in securing the financial and business assistance of such a man as H. E. Bucklen. Aside from the business loss, Mr. Barnes will be greatly missed in a social and personal way by his Tecumseh friends and acquaintances.

The Bicycle Derby, Tecumseh, Thursday, July 23.

H. A. Worcester is now superintendent of this division of the Lake Shore.

A. J. Kempton, editor of the Addison Courier, and general Poo-Bah of that entire community, visited the Herald Monday.

Will McCowen, of Greensburgh, Ind., came home yesteaday. He looks as young as ever and will make his home folks quite a visit.

Geo. H. Tansley commenced suit in Justice Burridge's court Monday against Spencer Lester, Mrs. Lester and Clement Lester for the funeral expenses of the late G. S. Lester.

Under the new arrangement Mr. Geo Church is superintendent of the Tecumseh Electric Co., and has two assistants. The headquarters are now at C. A. Wright's drug store, where lamps and supplies can be obtained.

Mrs. Lybryant Wesselius and little daughter Marie, of Grand Rapids, arrived at M. Smeltzer's last Wednesday for an extended stay. Little Marie has been very ill and they came with the hope that the country air would be a benefit to her health.

The Republican Convention meets at St. Louis next Saturday, June 16th. McKinley will be nominated in the first ballot and although there may be a little "scrap" on the platform it will be for High Tariff and Gold Standard. Next weeks' Herald will contain a full account of the proceedings in detail.

Miss Harriet Whittier delightfully entertained a small company at her home Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. Addie Holmes, of Washington, D. C. The pleasure of the entertainment was in the variety of amusement offered, a feature of the evening being the art contest in which Mr. and Mrs. Whiting secured favors.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

DOWN ON THE FARM.

Reports from Various States Show the Progress of Crops.

Chicago, June 10.—The reports as to the condition of the crops throughout the country, and the general effect of the weather on the growth, cultivation and harvest of the same, were Tuesday made by the directors of the several climate and crop sections. The reports received at Chicago were as follows:

Ohio—Mostly warm and showery, but cool nights first part of week with light frosts which did no damage. Vegetation made satisfactory progress. Heavy local rains in some counties washed corn fields. Wheat maturing and heading fairly, but no special improvement.

Indiana—Warm sunny weather and good rains improved all crops. Wheat, barley, rye, clover and hay cutting commenced. Corn, oats and potatoes are in excellent condition, growing rapidly. Tobacco plants are being set out. The army worm is doing injury.

Michigan—Weather favorable with plenty of rain in lower half of state. Wheat shows less rust and has made some improvement. Oats, rye and new grass have done splendidly, but hay is light and will be a short crop. Because of cut worms, much corn has been replanted; but it is now about all in, coming up and being generally cultivated.

Illinois—The week has been favorable and crops have advanced rapidly; wheat harvest is progressing slowly and, with corn cultivation and clover cutting, has been delayed by wet land. Oats are in excellent condition, rank growth; rye cutting is progressing favorably. Broom corn, pastures and meadows, gardens and potatoes are generally in good condition; fruits fair, somewhat blown off by wind.

Wisconsin—The week has been more favorable to small grain than to corn, which needs warm weather and sunshine. Wheat is heading and promises better than at the beginning of the season. Fruit is in good condition. Hay will be lighter than was promised, on account of the damage by cut worms.

Iowa—Frequent showers in larger portion of state and excessive cloudiness have not been favorable for small grain and corn. Corn is generally backward and needs warm dry weather. Oats and wheat are too rank, showing tendency to lodge and rust.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

General Trade Continues Dull in Almost All Lines.

New York, June 6.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"It is highly suggestive that with as little help as there is now from new business, markets are so nearly maintained. The opinion gains ground that more active business is to be expected after the conventions have been held and the safety and sufficiency of crops has been assured.

"Failures for the week were 234 in the United States, against 195 last year; and 29 in Canada, against 25 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"General trade continues depressed in almost all lines. Demand is smaller than a week ago and the tendency of prices, particularly in cereals, sugar, coffee, pork products, cotton and cotton goods and iron and steel, continues downward. There is a moderate demand for dry goods at Chicago, but business generally is disappointing. The check to trade at St. Louis is, in part, the result of delays in distribution of merchandise on account of the late storm. Unseasonable cool weather and rain have interferred with retail trade in territory tributary to Kansas City."

CYCLONE IN ALABAMA.

Wyeth City Destroyed—Two Lives Lost—Many Injured.

Montgomery, Ala., June 10.—The little town of Wyeth City, in Marshall county, some 30 miles west of Gadsden with a population of about 300 souls, was completely wrecked at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning by a cyclone. Eighteen houses were destroyed. The cyclone lasted fully five minutes and then passed in a northeasterly direction. Fifteen persons are wounded, six fatally. Mrs Picketts and a man named Bundby were badly hurt and will die. Mrs. Clark, Mrs Brown and several children will probably die. The path of the cyclone was about 100 yards wide. Several persons are missing, and it is probable that they will be found dead. Ed Long and an unknown woman were killed by lightning.

Gifts to a College.

Alton, Ill., June 10.—As a happy surprise incidental to the 58th annual commencement of Monticello seminary Tuesday, the principal, Miss H. N. Haskell, announced the gift of $50,000 from Hon. W. H. Reid and wife, of Chicago, for the new annex now in course of construction. Also a bequest of $1,200 from the estate of the late singer, Emma Abbott.

AMANDA TODD.

BY MARY E. WILKINS.

Amanda Todd's orbit of existence is restricted, of a necessity, since she was born, brought up and will die in this village, but there is no doubt that it is eccentric. She moves apart on her own little course quite separate from the rest of us.

Had Amanda's lines of life been cast elsewhere, where circumstances had pushed her, instead of hemming her in, she might have become the feminine apostle of a new creed, have founded a sect or instituted a new system of female dress. As it is, she does not go to meeting, she never wears a bonnet and she keeps cats.

Amanda Todd is 60, and she never was married. Had she been, the close friction with another nature might have worn away some of the peculiarities of hers. She might have gone to meeting, she might have worn a bonnet, she might even have eschewed cats, but it is not probable. When peculiarities are in the grain of a person's nature, as they probably are in hers, such friction only brings them out more plainly, and it is the other person who suffers.

The village men are not, as a rule, very subtle, but they have seemed to feel this instinctively. Amanda was, they say, a very pretty girl in her youth, but no young man ever dared make love to her and marry her. She had always the reputation of being "an odd stick," even in the district school. She always kept by herself at recess, she never seemed to have anything in common with the other girls and she always went home alone from singing school. Probably never in her whole life has Amanda Todd known, what it is to be protected by some devoted person of the other sex through the mighty perils of our village street.

There is a tradition in the village that once in her life, when she was about 25 years old, Amanda Todd had a beautiful bonnet and went to meeting.

Old Mrs. Nathan Morse vouches for the reliability of it, and, moreover, she hints at a reason. "When Mandy, she was 'bout 25 years old," she says, "George Henry French, he come to town, and taught the district school, and he see Mandy, an' told Almira Benton that he thought she was about the prettiest girl he ever laid eyes on, and Almiry, she told Mandy. That was all there ever was to it, he never waited on her, never spoke to her, fur's I know, but right after that, Mandy, she had a bunnit, and she went reg'lar to meetin'. 'Fore that her mother could scarcely get her to keep a thing on her head out of doors—allers carried her sunbunnit a-danglin' by the strings, wonder she wasn't sunstruck a million times—and as for goin' to meetin', her mother, she talked and talked, but it didn't do a mite of good. I s'pose her father kind of upheld her in it. He was most as odd as Mandy. He wouldn't go to meetin' unless he was driv, and he wa'n't a member. 'Nough sight ruther go out prowlin' round in the woods like a wild animal, Sabbath days, than go to meetin'. Once he ketched a wildcat, an' tried to tame it, but he couldn't. It bit and chewed so he had to let it go. I guess Mandy gets her liking for cats from him fast enough. Well, Mandy, she had that handsome bunnit, and she went to meetin' reg'lar 'most a year, and she looked as pretty as a picture sittin' in the pew. The bunnit was trimmed with green gauze ribbon and had a wreath of fine pink flowers inside. Her mother was real tickled, thought Mandy had met with a change. But land, it didn't last no time. George Henry French, he quit town the next year and went to Somerset to teach, and pretty soon we heard he hed married a girl over there. Then Mandy, she didn't come to meetin' any more. I dunno what she did with the bunnit—stamped on it, most likely, she always had consider'ble temper—anyway, I never see her wear it arterwards."

Thus old Mrs. Nathan Morse tells the story, and somehow to a reflective mind the picture of Amanda Todd in her youth decked in her pink-wreathed bonnet, selfishly but innocently attending in the sanctuary of divine love in order to lay hands on her own little share of earthly affection, is inseparable from her, as she goes now, old and bare-headed, defiantly past the meeting house, when the Sabbath bells are ringing.

However, if Amanda Todd had elected to go bareheaded through the village street from feminine vanity, rather than eccentricity, it would have been no wonder. Not a young girl in the village has such a head of hair as Amanda. It is of a beautiful chestnut color, and there is not a gray thread in it. It is full of wonderful natural ripples, too—not one of the village girls can equal them with her papers and crimping pins—and Amanda arranges it in two superb braids wound twice around her head. Seen from behind, Amanda's head is that of a young beauty; when it turns a little, and her harsh old profile becomes visible, there is a shock to the stranger.

Amanda's father had a great shock of chestnut hair, which was seldom cut, and she inherits this adornment from him. He lived to be an old man, but that ruddy crown of his never turned gray.

Amanda's mother died long ago; then her father. Ever since she has lived alone in her shingled cottage with her cats. There were not so many cats at first; they say she started with one fine tabby, who became the mother, grandmother and great-grandmother to armies of kittens.

Amanda must destroy some when she can find no homes for them, otherwise she herself would be driven afield, but still the impression is of a legion.

A cat is so covert, it slinks so secretly from one abiding place to another and seems to duplicate itself with its sudden appearances, that it may account in a measure for this impression. Still there are a great many. Nobody knows just the number—the estimate runs anywhere from 15 to 50. Counting, or trying to count, Amanda Todd's cats is a favorite amusement of the village children. "Here's another," they shout, when a pair of green eyes gleams at them from a post. But is it another, or only the same cat who has moved? Cats sit in Amanda's windows; they stare out wisely at the passers-by, from behind the panes, or they fold their paws on the ledge outside in the sunshine. Cats walk Amanda's ridgepole and her fence, they perch on her posts and fly to her cherry trees with bristling fur at the sight of a dog. Amanda has as deadly a hatred of dogs as have her cats. Everyone which comes within stone throw of her she sends off yelping, for she is a good shot. Kittens tumble about Amanda's yard and crawl out between her fence pickets under people's feet, Amanda will never give away a kitten except to a responsible person, and is as particular as if the kitten were a human orphan, and she the manager of an asylum.

She will never, for any consideration, bestow one of her kittens upon a family that keeps a dog, or where there are many small children. Once she made a condition that the dog should be killed, and she may be at times inwardly disposed to banish the children.

Amanda Todd is extremely persistent when she has selected a home which is perfectly satisfactory to her for a kitten. Once one was found tied into a little basket like a baby on the doorstep of a childless and humane couple who kept no dog, and there is a story that Deacon Nehemiah Stockwell found one in his overcoat pocket and never knew how it came there. It is probable that Amanda resorts to these extreme measures to save herself from either destroying her kittens or being driven out of house and home by them.

However, once, when the case was reversed, Amanda herself was found wanting. When she began to grow old, and the care of her pets told upon her, it occurred to her that she might adopt a little girl. Amanda has a comfortable little income, and would have been able to provide a good living for a child, as far as that goes.

But the managers of the institution to whom Amanda applied made inquiries, and the result did not satisfy them. Amanda stated frankly her reason for wishing to take the child, and her intentions with regard to her. She wished the little girl to tend her cats and assist her in caring for them. She was willing that she should attend school four hours per day, going after the cats had their breakfast, and returning an hour earlier to give them their supper. She was willing that she should go to meeting in the afternoon only, and she could have no other children come to visit her for fear they would maltreat the kittens. She furthermore announced her intention to make her will, giving to the girl, whom she should adopt, her entire property in trust for her cats, to include her own maintenance on condition that she devote her life to them as she had done.

The trustees declared that they could not conscientiously commit a child to her keeping for such purposes, and the poor little girl orphan, who had the chance of devoting her life to the care of pussy cats and kittens, to the exclusion of all childish folowers, remained in her asylum.

So Amanda to this day lives alone, and manages as best she can. Nobody in the village can be induced to live with her; one forlorn old soul preferred the almshouse.

"I'd 'nough sight ruther go on the town than live with all them cats," she said.

It is rather unfortunate that Amanda's shingled cottage is next the meeting house, for that, somehow, seems to render her non-church-going more glaringly conspicuous, and then, too, there is a liability of indecorous proceedings on the part of the cats.

They evidently do not share their mistress' dislike of the sanctuary, and find its soft pew cushions very inviting. They watch their chances to slink in when the sexton opens the meeting house; he is an old man and dim-eyed, and they are often successful. It is wise for anybody before taking a seat in a pew to make sure that one of Amanda's cats has not forestalled him; and often a cat flees down one flight of the pulpit stairs as the minister ascends the other.

We all wonder what will become of Amanda's cats when she dies. There is a report that she has made her will and left her property in trust for the cats to somebody, but to whom? Nobody in this village is anxious for such a bequest, and whoever it may be will probably strive to repudiate it. Some day the cats will undoubtedly go by the board; young Henry Wilson, who has a gun, will shoot some, the rest will become aliens and wanderers, but we all hope Amanda Todd will never know it.

In the meantime she is undoubtedly carrying on among us an eccentric, but none the less genuine mission. A home missionary is Amanda Todd, and we should recognize her as such in spite of her non-church-going proclivities. Weak in faith though she may be, she is, perchance, as strong in love as the best of us. At least I do not doubt that her poor little four-footed dependents would so give evidence if they could speak.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Florida Indians.

"Our Indians," says Dr. Brecht, Indian commissioner in the state of Florida, "are not multiplying rapidly. This is due to physiological and social reasons. Still, there has been an increase. In 1859 there were but 112. Now there are something over 500. The chief social reason for their slow propogation is the custom of countenancing no marriages of persons who have a drop of the same blood in their veins. This is sometimes hard on the girls. One leader I know has two beautiful daughters, who cannot get married because the eligible young men are almost all akin, to them."—Chicago Chronicle.

WILL DO HIM HONOR.

Approach of President Angell's Twenty-Fifth Year of Service.

Ann Arbor, June 8.—Preparations are practically completed for a grand celebration on alumni day of commencement week of the completion of President James B. Angell's 25th year of service at the University of Michigan. The matter is being pushed both by the faculty and the regents. The whole affair is to be conducted as a personal tribute to Dr. Angell, and not as an educational celebration. In accordance with that idea official invitations have been issued to prominent educators, personal friends of Dr. Angell and to his colleagues in the executive chairs of the leading colleges and universities of of the country, and of Michigan particularly.

June 24 will be memorial day. In the morning the exercises will be held in the university hall. Regent W. J. Cocker will speak in behalf of the official board of control. Then an illuminated parchment containing an address from the university faculty, prepared by Dean Harry B. Hutchins, Dean M. L. D'Ooge and Prof. E. L. Walters, will be read and presented. Other congratulatory speeches will follow from Dean Murray, of Princeton, a classmate of President Angell in Brown university; Justin Winsor, librarian of Harvard; Dr. W. T. Harris, United States commissioner of education and president of the University of Illinois. Dr. Angell will respond.

An ode especially written for the occasion by Charles Mill Gayley, of the University of California, and set to music by Prof. A. A. Stanley, of the University of Michigan, will be rendered by the choral union, a chorus of 300 voices, accompanied by the big Columbian organ. A banquet will follow in the gymnasium. Dean M. L. D'Ooge will act as toastmaster, and among others responses will be given by Dr. Angell, Presidents Harper, of Chicago; Rogers, of Northwestern; Speery, of Olivet; Adams, of Wisconsin, and ex-President Andrew D. White, of Cornell. In the evening a reception will be given in the gymnasium by President and Mrs. Angell.

No Mercy for Mrs. Maybrick.

London, June 6.—The secretary of state for home affairs, Sir Matthew White Ridley, replying in the house of commons, said that the government did not see any reason for further clemency to Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the sentence of death having been imposed upon her, and subsequently commuted to imprisonment for life.

Trampled to Death.

Rockford, Ill., June 6.—Mrs. James E. Turner, a prominent Rockford lady, sister of Hugh Nicol, manager of the Rockford ball club, died Friday morning, the result of injuries received Thursday by being trampled on by a horse which she was holding when it became frightened.

Blind

Sometimes persons become blind from impure blood, which develops scrofulous ulcers on the eyeballs, iritis, granulated eyelids, etc. In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla has been marvelously successful in restoring sight. It shows its powers as a blood purifier and radical cure for scrofula, by removing the cause, thus curing the eyes and restoring all the affected parts to healthy condition. Read this:

"As an act of justice and for the benefit of other mothers who may have afflicted children, I write this. About the first of February, 1892, my daughter Zola, then three years old, contracted sore eyes of the worst form and in a few weeks was entirely blind, being unable to tolerate light of any kind. She suffered and cried until I was almost heartbroken. The best eye specialist in the county treated her for months, but the became worse. Then I took her to a specialist in Indianapolis, who said he could do nothing. I came away with a heavy heart. I met my father's physician, Dr. Berryman, who examined Zola's eyes, and told me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I began to give it as directed and wash her eyes with warm water. Soon I began to notice improvement, and now, having given the child over a half dozen bottles, her eyes are greatly improved and she can see as well as any one. She is five years of age, and goes to school. When she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, she had to eat her meals in a darkened room, but now she is able to sit at the table with the rest of the family." MRS. OLLIE BUSER, Colfax, Indiana.

This Matter of Darning doesn't amount to much, with the women who use Pearline. Most of it has to be done because you persist in rubbing things over the washboard so. You have to, to get them even passably clean, if you wash with soap in the old way. Use Pearline and you'll save the darning. You haven't rubbed the things to pieces, and you won't have to mend them. And another kind of darning won't suggest itself, either, for you haven't tired yourself out to the cross point with the hardest of women's work.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 19th day of November, A. D. 1892, executed by Harvey Hartman and Cora M. Hartman, his wife, and Joseph Hartman and Carrie L. Hartman, his wife, all of the township of Raisin, county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, to Alexander Richards of the same place, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Lenawee county in the state of Michigan, on the 21st day of November, A. D. 1892, in Liber 131, of Mortgages, on page 102, by the non-payment of interest due thereon, and of insurance on the buildings situate on the premises covered thereby, by which the power of sale therein contained has become operative, and on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sume of fifty and fifty-one hundredths dollars ($ 0.50), and the further sum of fifteen dollars ($15.00), provided in said mortgage and by law as a reasonable attorney fee for the foreclosure of said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the amount now remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; notice is, therefore, hereby given that on Monday, the 29th day of June, A. D. 1896, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day (standard time), at the easterly front entrance of the court house of the circuit court for the county of Lenawee in the city of Adrian, county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, there will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due as above specified, with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and the attorney fee, costs, charges and expenses allowed by law and provided for in said mortgage, said premises being described as follows: The following described lands and premises, situate in the township of Raisin, county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, viz: Beginning at a point on the south line of section twenty-three in the above named township two chains and seventy-five links west of the west line of land owned by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R. R. Co., thence north three chains, thence west one chain, thence south three chains, thence east along the above named section line one chain to the place of beginning, containing in all forty-eight square rods of land together with all tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging.

NOWADAYS, when women are trying to do everything it is not strange that many things are over-done. It is not strange that there are all kinds of physical and mental disturbances. If the woman who is a doctor, or a lawyer, or a journalist, or in business would not try to be a society woman too it might be different; but the woman who knows when she has done a day's work has yet to be born. Usually a woman's way is to keep doing until she drops.

Working in this way has manifold evils. As an old colored Aunty used ay: "There's always somethin' the ter. If it isn't one thing it's two." The common trouble resulting from over- tion, either mentally or physically, is tipation of the bowels, with all its at- ant horrors. ere is no human ailment that so sapa nergies, so deadens the ambitions, as coming from the bowels forgetting vocation, or the liver only work- bout eight hours out of the twenty-

FARM AND GARDEN.

GOOD SUBSOIL PLOW.

How to Make One Which Does Perfectly Satisfactory Work.

The following description of a home-made subsoil plow said to do perfectly satisfactory work when made strong enough is condensed from the Country Gentleman:

Some 18 months ago I had occasion to visit a brother gardener in the western part of the county late in the fall, and found him using a home-made subsoiler that exactly met my ideas of what such a tool should accomplish. It was a straight beam of hard wood three by four inches in size and about six feet long, supported with an ordinary plow-wheel at each end, and carrying on either side between the wheels a stiff steel shank, which in turn carried a steel wedge-shaped shoe. The shank of each shoe was a piece of mowing-machine cutter-bar, about five-eighths of an inch thick and three or four wide.

They were attached at the upper end by a bolt, one being on each side, and about two feet apart, and a slanting brace made of wagon tire was bolted to the shank about a third of the way from the bottom and to the beam some 18 inches ahead. The shoe was a piece of inch-steel about three inches wide, and in a finished condition about seven inches long, the back three inches being full size and the front drawn down to a tapering chisel-edge with a slight inclination down just sufficient to make it draw into the soil and rest upon the wheels. A clevis and handles attached like cultivator handles completed the outfit.

At the time I saw the plow work there had been a prolonged drought, and it was being used in an undrained, heavy clay loam, and it did its work perfectly, with a not very heavy team drawing it. The surface plowing was nine inches, and the subsoiler went seven inches lower, making a total of 16 inches. I could not find any lumps bigger than a butternut.

The entire iron work of the outfit was made by a country blacksmith, and the cost was quite small in proportion to the usefulness of the tool. Fig. 1 shows the plow as my friend had got it up. He had a hook clevis, and changed from one plow to the other every time round. The subsoiler ran as steady as a mud sled, keeping right down to its work without any exertion on the part of the driver. Its only weak point was the side strain on the shank, which, having only a three-inch bearing against the beam and a 20-inch leverage, was liable to be bent sidewise and run either nearer or farther from its partner than was best to insure equality of work. As height of beam is necessary to clear furrows with the double tree, this fault can only be remedied by putting another and shorter beam below, bolting each shank to each. I give a drawing, Fig. 2, showing the construction after such a plan.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

The Wisconsin station finds 100 pounds of whey produces as much pork as 13 cents worth of corn.

A sheep grower says that when lambs are tormented with ticks they will drop down on the ground and try to bite their flanks and bellies in the most frantic fashion.

Prof. Shaw, of the Minnesota experiment station, cautions farmers to grow peas on land that has a clay subsoil, and states that they will not thrive on sandy soil.

The Vermont station kills potato bugs with a mixture of one pound Paris green to 100 pounds land plaster, all costing 65 cents, while 100 pounds patent bug remedies cost five dollars and up.

Divide the day up so as to have plenty of time to rest and recreate. There is no sense in working 12 hours a day on the farm. It is the best way in the world to disgust the boys with farm life.

Bulletin 25, of the Wyoming station, gives results of six years experiments in growing wheat by irrigation. The average cost was $7.75 per acre; average profit, $10.16 per acre, which is ten per cent. on a valuation of $100 per acre, 20 per cent. on $50, or 40 per cent. on $25 per acre. The advantages of irrigation are an assured crop, a heavier yield, a better grain, and increasing fertility of the soil.—Journal of Agriculture.

Telling a Horse's Age.

"The popular idea that the age of a horse can always be told by looking at his teeth," said a veterinary surgeon on Michigan avenue, "is not entirely correct. After the eighth year the horse has no more new teeth, so that the tooth method is useless for telling the age of a horse which is more than eight years old. As soon as the set of teeth is complete, however, a wrinkle begins to appear on the upper edge of the lower eyelid, and a new wrinkle is added each year, so that to get at the age of a horse more than eight years old you must figure the teeth plus the wrinkles."—Chicago Tribune.

FARMERS WHO SUCCEED.

Three Types of Agriculturists Found in the Western States.

Farmers are divided into three classes: First, those who take up with everything new in grains, vegetables, fruits and machinery without stopping to think or studying the demands of their market, the possibilities of their soil and peculiarities of the climate. Invariably they make failures. The second class are those who never buy or produce anything new in the way of grains, etc., use the same implements their fathers did, irrigate only when the spirit moves them, let their cattle run around the straw pile in winter, feeding them a few nubbins; make all their butter in the summer and use the old dash churn. They are homely likened to a cow's tail, inasmuch as they are always behind.

The third class are those who think, study their market and soil, begin on a small scale and experiment until the problem is solved. If a new fruit is being advertised and trees sold at enormous prices they buy but one and see if it suits their soil and climate. They will not set out a peach orchard in a swamp or a cherry orchard on an alluvial soil underlaid with gravel. This class is the one that is making money at farming—the other two are in the background. One and two are both bound for the same place, but seemingly traveling in opposite directions.

One acts without thinking; the other thinks without acting. One is extravagant in buying unnecessary things; the other extravagant in not buying necessary articles. One has no fixed method of labor; the other's method of labor fixes him. These two classes are an anomaly, and, as Lamartine said to Robespierre, are "shadowy, undefined—mixed." Not so with those designated as the third class. They have an aim in farming, and as a result have a well defined plan and combine brain and muscle—theory and practice, know the old way, but adopt the new and are a success. In the new agriculture of the far west these farmers are legion and are rapidly coming to the front. They believe in the modern theory of advancement as applied to agriculture and are bettering their condition by working along these lines. The methods of the past generations will not do for them and they are reaching out for the improved order of things that mark the pathway of other men who are a great success in this world.—Denver Field and Farm.

STRONG FARM GATE.

It Is Cheaply and Easily Made, and Not Apt to Sag.

I send description of a farm gate, cheaply and easily made, strong and not apt to sag. I have made several for myself and am well pleased with them. The hinge piece is 4 feet 6 inches long, 3x4 inches, rounded at the ends, and banded to prevent splitting. A round rod three-fourths inch in diameter and about 5 inches long is inserted in each end about 3 inches; the lower rod or pivot should have a flange welded on 1½ inches from one end. At the foot of the post sink a block of wood (or stone) so that its upper surface will be level with the ground. In its upper surface mortise a hole about 2 inches square and 1½ inches deep; in the bottom of this hole lay a piece of an old buggy spring 2 inches long; on it place a blank seven-eighths-inch nut. This will be a step for the gate to be pivoted on. Set the gate in the step; take a piece of plank about 18 inches long; bore a three-fourths-inch hole 6 inches from one end; put the plank on the top, and pivot and spike it securely to top of gate post. The gate swings in either direction, and does not pull on the post so hard as if hung on hinges.—Ohio Farmer.

May Need It in the Fall.

No matter how favorable crop prospects may be now, no human being is gifted with sufficient foresight to tell with any degree of certainty what the final outcome will be. With chinch bugs, drouth, army worms, cut worms, grub worms, cyclones, wet, unfavorable weather for harvesting, etc., the crops run a terrible gauntlet from the time they are planted till safely garnered. Who knows but that the surplus corn, wheat, etc., of last year's bountiful crop may all be needed for home use before another crop is raised? The man who is able to hold his surplus may do well to refuse to sell it at present prices. See that the corn stored in pens is well protected from the weather.—Journal of Agriculture.

Weeds in the Farm Garden.

Few gardens have the opportunity to show of what the soil is capable, because they are not kept free from weeds and as well cultivated as they should be. This work needs to be done at the start and kept up to the end. And indeed it should not stop until the weeds stop growing. It is often the case with the garden as it is with the fields, that when the crops are thought to be safe the weeds are let alone to grow and mature seeds. Thus the land is stocked for years to come. Five years of perseverance in killing weeds and preventing the seeding of them will secure clean ground in the garden, and the field as well.—Rural World.

Root Crops for Stock.

Be sure and fit a piece of good land for the root crops that are so nourishing and healthful as cattle feed. The sugar beets and the mangels will yield immensely on good land, if put in in good time and well tended, and no farm crops are more valuable. Cattle thrive on such food in winter, when it forms a large part of their rations, and every stock owner should have a good supply. Carrots are particularly desirable for horses, keeping them in good, thrifty condition.

"I was troubled for years with a sore on my knee, which several physicians, who treated me, called a cancer, assuring me that nothing could be done to save my life. As a last resort, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after taking a number of bottles, the sore began to disappear and my general health improve. I persisted in this treatment, until the sore was entirely healed. "The People's Bible History."

After twelve years of careful preparation, and at an enormous cost, "The People's Bible History" has just appeared from the press of the Henry O. Shepherd Company, Chicago, and has been welcomed unqualified by the press, the pulpit and the people. It is superbly printed and bound, and its many illustrations are exquisite in conception and detail. Eighteen specialists of world-wide renown have concentrated their power in the writing of this great book. Of the introduction by the Right Hon. William E. Gladstone, Rev. H. W. Bolton, D. D., of Chicago, says: "The introduction itself is worth the price of the book, written by one whose utterances are from the deepest wells of wells of thought His rare experiences have given him authority to speak concerning the greatest book of the world—the Word of Life."

No one should be without this most important work, which is sold by subscription in several styles of binding.

The "popular edition," of 928 pages will undoubtedly be the work that will meet the most popular demand, but to satisfy those who desire a handsome form the publishers have produced an editon de luxe containing 1,283 pages and 200 full-page illustrations and maps. The latter is said to be a wonder in modern book making, and is pronounced the finest work of the kind ever printed.

High School Commencement.

The exercises properly began last Sunday evening, when Rev. B. S. Hudson delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the class in the Presbyterian church, which was filled to its utmost capacity with representations of nearly every family in town. The address received the closest attention and was appreciated by all.

The class exercises were held in the Opera House last evening. That spacious edifice was filled with relatives and friends of the class. No effort was made by the graduates to trim the hall, the class colors (violet and white) or the motto ("Success Means Sacrifice") were not displayed. The platform presented a neat appearance, in front on either side there were, tastily arranged, palms and potted plants. Promptly on time the class, numbering thirteen, consisting of ten young ladies and three gentlemen, made their appearance and as they took their seats presented a pretty picture. While some of the former classes may have exceeded the class of '96 in numbers, it is doubtful if any presented a more interesting program than was given last evening. Each member in their appointed role acquitting themselves with such credit that comparison was well nigh impossible.

The exercises opened with a piano solo by Miss Harding, which was well executed and received a hearty encore. After the Invocation by Rev. J. P. Varner Christine Wilson stepped forward and in a clear tone delivered the salutatory in a graceful manner. Charles Hurry then showed the "Progress of Invention," his production was well written and nicely delivered. Mertie Macham presented in a charming manner her essay, topic "Self-Interest, not Selfishness," then followed a chorus, by over seventy school children, which, reflected credit not only to themselves but their instrucror, Miss Grayson. Bessie Spayde then made many statements concerning the class, unknown to the public generally, she evidently knew of what she was speaking and demonstrated her fitness for the task. Nellie Lowden presented many stronng arguments why a woman should be educated in such a convincing manner that the most skeptical must have been shaken. Lavern Smith made a strong plea for parents to early instill in the minds of the young, self-reliance. His subject was "Judgement." Retrospect and Prospect" by Kittie Bowers was carefully prepared and her mahner and delivery were fine.

Naomi North then executed a piano solo in an artistic manner, which called forth hearty applause.

The Class Prophecy was given by Adah Erskine and Minnie Russell, in a way which showed their selection for the task was just the thing. It was unique, terse and witty. Julia Gilmore handled her subject "Cost of Greatness" in an able manner, and won new laurels. Mabel Smith showed conclusively that no great things were brought about without the aid of so-called "Cranks and Crazes". She did well. The school children then sang a chorus.

Eloise Waring presented a carefully prepared paper, subject, "Value of the Study of Music," in hearing her one was led to exclaim "Music is the highest of all arts." Frank Keeney then gave the Valedictory in a feeling manner. It was an appropiate close to a choice program.

The pupils then rendered another chorus which was finer than than either of the others.

To Peter S. McKinnon was assigned the presentation of diplomas and certainly no better selection could have been made. His remarks to the class were choice, and full of encouragement and good advice. Rev. J. P. Varner pronounced the benediction after which the class received congratulations of their friends. The gifts to each member of the class were many and valuable.

MUMMY OF AN UNKNOWN RACE.

Remains of Prehistoric Man Unearthed in Southern Arizona.

John McCarthy has brought into Prescott a mummy that is believed to antedate the Indians and is of a decidedly different type. He found it, says the Prescott (Ariz.) Courier, while hunting a lion, which he had treed and brought down in the Verde canyon. In a cliff dwelling he had found a sealed chamber seven by nine feet. Tearing it open, he met a grisly sight. It was a mummy kneeling on a soap weed mat, with the body upright and head erect, the long arms hanging straight down from the shoulder. In life he was about five feet seven inches high. In one hand he grasped a stone ax, in the other a bundle of barbed flint-headed arrows. As the air rushed into the vault the rawhide shafts of the arrow heads and the rawhide handle of the stone ax crumbled to ashes, as did the mat and the mantle which covered the mummy. The fine brown hair, about two feet in length, fell from the head.

In the cave were found several earthenware bowls, a tortoise shell, and about $1,000 worth of best grade turquoise in the rough, just as it was taken from the ledge. The pieces ranged in size from the dimensions of a walnut to that of a hen's egg. As there is no flint in this part of the country, and no known vein of turquoise in the western hemisphere of the width of these dimensions, where the ancient got them is a mystery. The absence of high cheek bones and the fine hair indicate that he was not related to the Indian of to-day.

THE REASON WHY.

You Weigh No More After You Eat Than You Did Before.

Many of us have laughed at that absurd conceit in one of Hoyt's productions—"A Texas Steer," we believe—where, in the restaurant scene, customers are put on the scale immediately before and after eating, and are charged in proportion to the extra weight they have taken on. The idea for a comedy is good, but restaurant keepers who adopt it as a practical means of gauging their charges would come out at the small end of the horn.

It is a well-known fact, though somewhat anomalous, that a person weighs no more after eating a hearty meal than he did before. A little reflection will readily explain this apparent mystery. During the process of mastication, deglutition, etc., certain muscles are brought into active play, and the exercise of any muscle necessitates a temporary waste of its tissues, and a certain amount of carbon is eliminated and passed off during the course of the meal.

This loss, however, is trifling, as compared with that of respiration and perspiration, both of which are increased during the various operations of making a meal. The length of time one may take to consume a pound of food makes no little difference to these losses, for if eaten leisurely, there is but slight increase of respiration or perspiration, whereas, if it is hurried through, both are abnormally accelerated. Hence, by the time the pound is eaten, the consumer has lost appreciably in moisture or carbonic acid.

WHERE THE BEAVER DIVED.

Kind of Picture Which Is Full of Suggestion to the Sportsman.

Forest and Stream prints from a photograph a wood scene that should bring a far-away look into the beaver trapper's eyes the moment he sees it. There are fallen logs in a tangle of brush trees denuded of leaves mostly, and down a slight incline, surrounded by the brush, is a pool. Ripples of water are waggling the shadows of the trees, which were caused by a beaver that had just dived, alarmed by the approach of E. Hofer, who took the photograph.

No picture is so suggestive to a sportsman as one which shows where game has been. Sportsmen's papers print photographs of the tracks of deer, bears and other game, and these are more suggestive than a view of the game itself. A fox's track, leading away across the snow-covered fields, or the ripple where a fish has slapped the water's surface are full of life to a sportsman. There is a chance with such evidence before him of exercising his craft and skill.

It is related of an amateur photographer of field scenes that one day he tried to catch a running gray squirrel with his little camera. When the negative was developed he found that he had a picture of the animal's tail alone, but because of the very incompleteness of the scene he values that picture above any six in his collection.

The Temple of Serpents.

The small town of Werda, in the kingdom of Dahomey, is celebrated for a loathesome den called the Temple of Serpents. It is a long building dedicated to the priests and mystery men of the kingdom, and in it they keep thousands of snakes of all kinds and sizes. These slimy, crawling creatures literally own the village, as well as the temple which has been erected for their special accommodation, and may be seen hanging from the rafters and door posts of any house in town. In Werda to kill a serpent is a crime punishable by death. The serpents in the sacred temple are fed by a regular corps of hunters, who are paid for their services out of the public exchequer.

Monarchs Meet and Shake.

When the late shah of Persia was in Paris in 1889 he visited the Wild West Show, and there met the famous Indian chief, Red Shirt. The latter was in his tent and was presented to the Persian monarch. To the shah's astonishment Red Shirt held out his hand as though to an equal. The shah hesitated, but when the interpreter whispered: "He is a king," he took the Indian's hand and shook it. He was evidently immensely amused and interested by the dignified old warrior, with his feathers and primitive surroundings.

THE WORK DONE.

A Resume of the Important Business of Congress.

Great Number of Bills Presented in Both Houses—The Most Important of Those That Have Become Laws.

Washington, June 8.—The first session of the Fifty-fourth congress, now in its closing hours, enjoys the distinction of being the shortest "long" session for a period of 20 years. Of the measures which become laws, the most important from an international standpoint, was the bill creating the commission "to determine the true divisional line between Venezuela and British Guiana." Of scarcely less general interest were the bills prohibiting prize fights in the territories; permitting appointments in the army and navy of former United States officers who served in the rebellion and making one year's residence in a territory a prerequisite to obtaining a divorce there.

Excepting these, however, the remainder of the 235 bills and resolutions which received the president's approval were not of a character to deserve extended mention. The more important were the bills incorporating the national society of the Daughters of the Revolution, opening the forest reservations in Colorado, for the location of mining claims; regulating proof of death in pension cases; providing for a naval training school in San Francisco harbor; making it unlawful to shoot at any railway train or any person thereon or to throw missiles into such train, and repealing clause 61 of the tariff law providing for a rebate on alcohol used in the arts.

Great Number of Measures Presented.

If the session, however, be conspicuous by reason of its brevity and the limited number of important laws enacted, it resulted in the introduction of a larger number of bills in the house than during any similar period for a quarter of a century. The total number of bills introduced during the entire last congress was 8,987, of which 4,405 were introduced during the first session, which corresponds to the session now drawing to a close and in which latter the aggregate reaches 9,500. Of these 2,300 were favorably reported by the committees to whom they were referred, and scores of them are likely to be brought to the attention of the house next winter.

The Nicaragua canal bill is one of these measures. After many months of consideration in the committee, it received a favorable report in the face of an absolute certainty that it would not be taken up during the present session. The bill to liquidate the indebtedness of the Pacific railways to the government is another far-reaching measure, which is also upon the calendar with a favorable report, but which for prudential reasons will continue to slumber there. Others are the service pension bill, reported by the invalid pensions committee; the Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma statehood bills; the Pacific cable bill and the joint resolution conferring the rank of lieutenant general upon Maj. Gen. Miles.

Interest in the Cuban Revolution.

The popular interest in the Cuban revolution was shown in the large number of resolutions, more than 50 in all, that were introduced and referred to the committee on foreign affairs. After careful consideration, a concurrent resolution was reported, for which was subsequently substituted, in conference, the senate resolution expressing the sympathy of the United States with the insurgents, recognizing their belligerency and calling upon the president to use his good offices to secure the independence of the island.

Measures for which there has been a widespread demand that have passed the house and will probably receive consideration from the senate next session, include the bankruptcy bill, the McCall bill, providing an educational test for immigrants, the labor commission and labor arbitration bills and the bill simplifying the rules of the pension office so as to facilitate the adjustment of private pension cases.

Much Work for Committees.

The early weeks of the session were a busy period for the ways and means committee. Of the 187 measures referred to it, 30 were acted upon. Two of the greatest importance were the bond and revenue bills. The bond bill passed the house, was sent to the senate and returned with the addition of an amendment providing for the free coinage of silver. The revenue bill died in the senate committee on finance. Among other measures of interest reported by the ways and means committee were the bills permitting the killing of all the fur seals in Alaskan waters; the "filled cheese" bill and the bill amending the law permitting a rebate on alcohol used in the arts.

The committee on invalid pensions broke all previous records for work. Upwards of 2,800 bills were referred to it, of which 700 private bills were reported to the house. Among the measures reported in addition to those which passed the house, were bills giving members of state militia a pensionable status; granting pensions to remarried war widows; broadening the scope of the law pensioning army nurses; increasing the pensions of those who lost limbs in the service and providing for the payment of pensions by check.

The pensions committee, which deals with a different class of measures from those which are referred to the invalid pensions committee, disposed of 240 of the 600 bills referred to them.

The committees on post offices and post roads, railways and canals, coinage, weights and measures, agriculture, military, public lands, patents, judiciary and commerce reported the ordinary number of measures, but with few exceptions they were not of unusual importance.

Business in the Senate.

The results accomplished by the senate during the session just closing are entirely out of proportion with the legislation that was introduced. Up to Saturday there had been introduced a total of 3,261 bills more than were introduced during the whole of the last congress. The same ratio of increase is found in the flood of memorials and petitions that have been laid before the senate. Out of this array of proposed legislation but little has been done.

The finance committee, to which was referred 105 different measures, has succeeded in getting through the senate but three of any importance that have become laws—the filled cheese bill; the amendment to the administrative feature of the tariff act permitting express companies to pay the duty on packages valued at not more than $500 and deliver them to the residence of the importer direct, and the bill to repeal the free alcohol clause of the tariff law. The Dingley bill came out of committee with a free coinage amendment which prevailed in the senate, and this proposition to increase the revenues through tariff duties has ever since been hung in the air between the two houses. The bankruptcy and contempt of court bills, the two most important measures emanating from the committee on the judiciary, were not even considered by the senate. The favorable report from the committee on privileges and elections for an amendment for the election of senators by popular vote, became the text for many speeches that never got beyond that indefinite stage.

The senate committee on pensions shows a better record for accomplished results. Senate pension bills aggregating 1,020 were referred to this committee. Similar bills aggregating 220 came over from the house. Two hundred and seventy senate bills were passed by the senate, of which the house passed but 50. On the other hand, the senate passed 110 of the house pension bills out of a total of 220 passed by the house. Out of all this proposed legislation but 83 bills became laws, as follows: Senate bills without the approval of the president, 1; senate bills approved, 27; house bills become a law without approval, 8; house bills approved, 27; total, 83.

Nominated for President on First Ballot by Republican Convention.

Pandemonium Reigns Supreme in Vast Hall at the Mention of the Ohioan's Name.

Sculptural Bust of McKinley Presented by Republican Club of University of Chicago.

Exciting Scenes on the Withdrawal of Senator Teller — The Declaration.

Convention Hall, St. Louis, June 19.—Bright sunshine, cloudless skies, and a temperature up in the eighties, and going higher, diffuse an inspiriting influence on the many thousand men and women who are swarming through the streets, or jamming the cable and trolley cars which converge on the large, squat, flag-bedecked building in which the republican national convention holds its session. It is the morning of the third day—the decisive day, the day which gives to the "grand old party," for victory or for defeat, its battle cry and its leader. Both are already fixed upon with but little probability of change or variation—the battle cry "the gold standard," and the leader, "William McKinley, of Ohio."

Colored Gentleman Offers Prayer.

At 10:35 the president, Senator Thurston, announced that the divine blessing would be invoked by Rev. John R. Scott, of Florida.

Platform Is Presented.

The chairman said the first order of business was the reception of the report of the committee on resolutions, and the chair recognized for that purpose Senator-elect Foraker, of Ohio.

Sound Money Plank Cheered.

As Mr. Foraker approached the financial plank Mr. Teller left his seat with the Colorado delegation and moved up to the platform where he seated himself at the end of the second row of seats to the right of the chairman. With the opening sentence "the republican party is unreservedly for sound money," which Mr. Foraker read slowly and very emphatically, a burst of cheering occurred, and the applause was repeated with redoubled volume when the pledge to promote international agreement for free coinage was read. The cheering at this point was so prolonged that it interrupted the proceedings for some time and compelled the chairman to rap for order.

The reading of the platform as a whole was listened to with marked attention, and at the close it was greatly cheered. The reading occupied 25 minutes.

Mr. Foraker moved the adoption of the report as the republican national platform for 1896.

Teller Presents Minority Report.

Then the chair, amid the breathless attention of the convention, recognized Senator Teller, who sent to the secretary's desk and had read the following minority report:

"We, the undersigned members of the committee on resolutions, being unable to agree with that portion of the majority report which treats of the subjects of coinage and finance, respectfully submit the following paragraph as a substitute therefor:

"The republican party favors the use of both gold and silver as equal standard money, and pledges its power to secure the free, unrestricted and independent coinage of gold and silver at our mints at the ratio of sixteen parts of silver to one of gold.'"

Teller Addresses the Convention.

Mr. Teller then advanced to the front and in earnest tones addressed the convention in explanation of his course. He disclaimed that his advocacy of free silver was in any manner controlled by the fact that he represented a state which produced silver. He contended for it because he believed that no country could prosper without it, and because he believed that it was the great weight which was now weighing down the country. Professing tolerance for those who differed from him, he said his decision had been arrived at after many years of deliberate thought. The great contest whether there should be one flag or two in this country was not more important than this. Confronted for the first time in the history of this glorious party of ours with the danger of a financial system which in our judgment would be destructive to the country, they were called upon to decide whether to adhere to it or reject it.

"I cannot go out without saying that I cherish down in my heart a hope—nay a belief—that better counsels will prevail and that at some future day on a true republican platform, sustaining republican principles, I may have the inestimable privilege of again addressing you."

Teller's Substitute Tabled.

Mr. Foraker, of Ohio, chairman of the committee on resolutions, moved to lay Teller's substitute on the table.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, seconded the motion.

The yeas and nays were demanded by the states of Colorado, Montana and Idaho and the vote was taken.

As states usually classed as silver states, such as Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon and South Dakota, cast their votes in favor of tabling the resolution and added to the rapidly growing majority in favor of that motion there were demonstrations of delight from the exulting gold standard men.

The result of the roll call was announced: Yeas, 818½; nays, 105½.

So the motion to lay Senator Teller's substitute free silver plank on the table was carried.

Mr. Foraker was recognized to move the previous question on the passage of the resolutions.

Financial Plank Adopted.

Mr. Dubois demanded a roll call of states on the passage of the financial plank, and Colorado and Montana seconded the call.

The chairman said the question to be voted on was:

"Shall the financial plank be adopted as the sense of this convention?" On this the roll of states was called.

The roll call proceeded amid so much confusion that the chairman had to suspend it until order was restored.

The result of the roll call on the question of the adoption of the financial plank was announced: Ayes, 812½; nays, 110½. "And the financial plank is adopted," added the chairman amid cheers.

The rest of the platform was adopted with a ringing chorus of ayes, there being but one solitary "No."

As a matter of personal privilege the chair announced that he would permit Senator Cannon to read a statement prepared by certain members of the convention and asked respectful attention and perfect quiet.

Silver Men's Declaration of Withdrawal.

Mr. Frank Cannon, the youthful senator from Utah, advanced to the platform and with Senator Teller sitting by his side, read in ringing tones and with many gestures the following protest:

"In announcing the purpose asserted in this paper, it is due to our constituents and to ourselves that there shall be a public showing of vindicating facts."

The declaration then reviews the position of the republican party on the money question as set forth in the platform of 1892, which was favorable to silver and acceptable to bimetallists. The right of the majority of the republican convention to change the party tenets is not questioned. But "as surely as it is requisite for peace and progress that minorities shall yield to majorities in matter of mere method, just so surely is it necessary for that same peace and progress that minorities shall not yield in matters of fundamental truth."

Seceded from the Truth.

"We hold that this convention has seceded from the truth; that the triumph of such secession would be the eventual destruction of our freedom and our civilization. To that end the people will not knowingly follow any political party; and we choose to take our place in the ranks of the great mass of citizens who realize that the hour has come for justice. Did we deem this issue less important to humanity we would yield, since the associations of all our political lives have been intertwined with the men and the measures of this party of past mighty achievements.

Withdrawal from the Party.

"Accepting the fiat of this convention as the present purpose of the party, we withdraw from this convention to return to our constituents the authority with which they invested us, believing that we have better discharged their trust by this action which restores to them authority unsullied than by giving cowardly and wrong ever willfully attempted within the republican party—once redeemer of the people, but now about to become their oppressor, unless providentially restrained by the votes of free men."

A Wild Scene.

At Mr. Cannon's closing words, declaring that the republican party, once the redeemer of the people, was now about to become its oppressor, a storm of hisses and groans was raised from all parts of the hall and cries of "Down" were raised.

The chair, with his resonant voice rising, above the tumult, said: "The chair suggests to this convention that the republican party in convention assembled need not fear any declaration." Here an outburst of cheers, which lasted several seconds, interrupted the chairman.

"His great ability, his originality of thought, his power in debate, his strong will, are known of all men, and are part of the history of the last 20 years. His public career is as spotless as his private character is pure and unblemished. He is a trained statesman fit for the heaviest task the country can impose upon him. He commands the confidence of his party and his country. He is a leader of men. We know it because we have seen him lead. To those who have followed him he never said 'go,' but always 'come.' He is entirely fearless. We know it for we have seen his courage tested on a hundred fields. He has been called to great places and to great trials, and he has never failed nor flinched. He is fit to stand at the head of the republican column. He is worthy to be an American president. I have the honor, the very great honor, to present to you, as a candidate for your nomination, the speaker of the national house of representatives, Thomas B. Reed, of Maine.

Mr. Reed's nomination was loudly applauded, many of the delegations rising and waving flags, amid much cheering. The nomination was seconded by Charles E. Littlefield, of Rockland, Me.

Depew Presents Morton.

When the state of New York was called Mr. Sutherland, of Rochester, rose and said that the name of New York's favorite son would be presented by another "favorite son of that state and of all the states, Chauncey M. Depew."

"We meet to take up the broken cord of national development and happiness and link it once more to the car of progress. With our industries stagnant, our manufactures paralyzed, our agriculture disheartened, our artisans unemployed, our credit impaired, our treasury bankrupt, our position among the nations of the world questioned, all look to this convention and call upon its wisdom for hope and rescue.

"Whoever may be nominated by this convention will receive the cordial support, the enthusiastic advocacy of the republicans of New York, but in the shifting conditions of our commonwealth Gov. Morton can secure more than the party strength, and without question in the coming canvass, no matter what issue may arise between now and November, place the Empire state solidly in the republican column."

Mr. Depew closed at 3:06.

The state of Ohio was reached at 3:07 p. m.

CONVENTION GOES WILD.

Foraker Rises to Nominate McKinley Amid Tremendous Applause.

Foraker rose in his place, and delegates and spectators jumped to chairs and tables. Fans, plumes, hats, etc., were waved for the space of 90 seconds.

As Ohio was called and Gov. Foraker came to the front there was such cheering as had not marked the proceedings of the convention at any previous time. He characterized the four years of democratic administration as one stupendous disaster which had fallen on all alike, the just and the unjust. But this affliction had one compensating advantage, it had destroyed the democratic party. Their approaching national convention was an approaching national nightmare.

No one knew what they were going to do, and no one was seeking the nomination except a limited few who had proclaimed their unfitness by announcing a willingness to stand on any kind of platform. If the republican party made no mistake here, it would be reestablished in control of the government to hold it till Providence in His infinite mercy chose again to chasten the nation. [Laughter and applause.] The people wanted something more than a good business man, a fearless leader, a wise statesman, one who, in addition to all these, presented qualifications which were exactly the opposite of this free-trade, deficit-making, bond-issuing, democratic administration.

"I present to you such a man," said Gov. Foraker, "in William McKinley."

Pandemonium Let Loose.

At this point pandemonium let loose and the convention gave up to unrestrained yelling, cheering, horn-blowing, whistling, cat-calling and all the other devices common to such occasions. A number of red, white and blue plumes which (carefully wrapped up) had been brought into the convention earlier in the proceedings, were uncovered and waved, whilst almost every delegate seemed to be wildly gesticulating with either a fan or a flag in the air. The band tried in vain to compete with the ear-splitting clamor, but at last the strains of "Marching Through Georgia" caught the ears of the crowd and they joined in the chorus and gradually quieted down.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Portrait of McKinley Hoisted.

Then a portrait of McKinley was hoisted on a line with the United States flag on the gallery facing the platform, and the cheering began over again, to which the band responded by playing "Rally Round the Flag," the convention joining in the chorus.

After at least 12 minutes of this kind of proceeding, the chair began to rap for a restoration of order, but without avail.

Gov. Foraker stood during all this scene smiling his approval. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, had in the meantime been called to the chair by Senator Thurston, but just when he had nearly restored order Mrs. W. H. Strong, of California, who had presented the plumes in honor of Ohio's choice, made her appearance on the floor waving one of them, and another uncontrollable outburst of temporary insanity occurred.

Bust of McKinley Presented.

During the interval of confusion a three-quarter face, life-size sculptured bust of Mr. McKinley was presented to Mr. Foraker by the Republican club, of the University of Chicago. The portrait was in a mahogany frame, decorated with red, white and blue ribbons and with a bow of the maroon-colored ribbons forming the colors of the university. The portrait was the work of Mr. Hans Hirsch, and was presented by Dr. Liston H. Montgomery, of Chicago, with a letter signed by Mr. H. L. Ickes, president of the club. It was accepted by Gov. Foraker in dumb show.

Foraker Allowed to Finish His Speech.

After 25 minutes of incessant turmoil Mr. Foraker was allowed to resume his speech. He said from what had occurred it was evident the convention had heard of his candidate before. Then he sketched his career, his war services under Phil Sheridan, his legislative experience under James G. Blaine, and claimed for him the honor of having been, when in congress, the leader of the house of representatives and the author of the McKinley bill. He closed an eloquent peroration by submitting in the name of the 46 delegates William McKinley's name for the consideration of the convention.

Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, was recognized by Temporary Chairman Hepburn, and seconded the nomination of McKinley.

At the close of Mr. Thurston's effective speech, cries of "Vote" were raised, interspersed with cries for "Quay." In the midst of this Gov. Hastings took the stand and placed in nomination the name of Matthew Stanley Quay.

The Total Vote.

Ohio, McKinley, 46. With the vote of Ohio McKinley had 661½ votes, which nominates him. Necessary to a choice, 643.

There was much cheering when it was seen that the vote of Ohio made the nomination.

The total result of the ballot was as follows:

McKinley, 661½; Reed, 84½; Allison, 35½; Morton, 58; Quay, 61½; Cameron, 1.

He left Wednesday morning for the Thousand Islands, where he will combine business with pleasure until the Opera season begins, when he will again take the road. He reports the past season a most prosperous one for the company he was with.

The graduating exercises Thursday evening and those of the alumni Friday evening were very interesting and largely attended. The class of '96, consisting of six gentlemen and three ladies, presented a delightful program and all acquitted themselves with great credit. The presents were fine and abundant. The alumni banquet was par excellence. The hop was by no means least in the evening enjoyment.

F. D. Lancaster was out Tuesday doing missionary work. He was enlisting the farmers in the vicinity of the lakes to (at a most convenient time to the majority) turn out and with clay and gravel transform the stretch of deep sand west of Runy Witherell's into a fine road, the business men of Clinton to furnish the shovelers and they to draw the loads. It will be done, as Frank is a hustler and completes what he undertakes.

Tuesday morn about 5 a. m. the slumbers of H. D. Niblack and F. D. Lancaster, were suddenly disturbed by the blending of cat and dog voices. They both rushed out clad only in their slumber robes, just in time to witness the death of Jim. Frank's fine cat, which was the pet of the neighborhood. Jim during the summer has slept in an arm chair on the stoop and was in deep repose when the dogs took him unawares. When Frank gets the dogs located the canine family of Clinton will be speedily reduced by two members. The scene, while in a sense tragic, must have been grotesque as well.

The Habits of Children

Should be closely watched and regulated by mothers. Carelessness in childhood often leads to serious troubles in after life. The digestive organs and bowels should be kept in the best possible condition to insure good health, not only for the present, but for years to come. The committee of arrangements, which consists of some of the leading business men of the village, have met with success thus far in their arrangements for a grand celebration of America's independence on Saturday July 4. Boos' celebrated band of 18 instruments and drum major will furnish excellent music throughout the day. At the grove—not Arbeiter, but one near the center of the village—the forenoon exercises will be held. Mayor Pingree of Detroit, Hon. Charles E. Townsend, of Jackson, and W. W. Wedemeyer of Ann Arbor, are among the speakers who have agreed to be present. Appropriate patriotic vocal music will be furnished by a choir of good singers. The afternoon sports will consist of long distance, township and other bicycle races by both sexes; foot, sack, wheelbarrow; 3-legged, egg and other races will be held on exchange place. Swimming races, tub races, etc., will be given in the mill pond in the center of the village, for which liberal prizes will be given and in which all who wish may participate. A business parade will be held and perhaps the "Omegas" may yet be induced to return and give an exhibition. A military parade by some of Jackson's best companies will be an attraction. The day will close with a display of fireworks, better than is usually seen outside of large cities. The railroads have promised special trains and half fare, and our citizens will give all visitors a hearty welcome.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to know that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

For washing Dishes, there's nothing like Pearline.

Why don't you begin the use of it in that way, if you're one of the timid sisters who still think that Pearline "eats the clothes?" Then you can soak things in it for a year or two, and test it in every way, until you become convinced that Pearline can't do any harm. But it won't eat your dishes, that's sure. It won't clog up the sink pipes, either, as soap does. And that cloudy effect that you've probably noticed on cut glass and china when it's washed with soap—that won't be there if you wash it with Pearline.

A WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

Related by a Keeper of the Michigan State Prison at Jackson.

(From the Jackson Citizen.)

Mr. A. E. Wing resides at 612 N. Jackson Street, Jackson, Mich. He is a keeper in the Michigan State Prison, a man of sterling integrity, and whose word is beyond dispute. He tells the following story of a wonderful escape, and the incidents connected with the dangerous position in which he was placed. He says, some months ago my attention was attracted by a swelling of my groins, which began to increase in size to such an extent that I was alarmed. It spread down my legs to my feet, and I was bloated from my waist down, so badly that I could not pull my pants, over my legs, and I had to open my shoes fully two inches before I could get them on. Even my face became puffed up, and my whole system seemed affected. I could hardly drag myself upstairs to unlock my men. I consulted a physician, one of the best in the city. He said the swelling was caused by an irritation of the kidneys, and I commenced treatment with him. But I seemed to be getting worse. I was strongly urged by a friend to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I finally consented. After the first week I commenced to see a change, and felt much better. This was encouraging, and I continued their use. I took five boxes in all, with the happy result that I was completely cured. I have never heard of any medicine which had such a pronounced and radical effect, and yet not affect the system generally and leave it in such a good condition. I feel better now than I ever did. After the effect was once established the swelling gradually disappeared until it was entirely gone. I regard Doan's Kidney Pills as a most wonderful agent in the curing of any form of kidney disorder.

HEADACHE cured in 20 minutes by Dr. Miles' Pain Pills. "One cent a dose." At druggists.

The doctor may be a good old man, but even so, medical examinations and the "local application" treatment are abhorrent to every modest woman. They are embarrasing—often useless. They should not be submitted to until everything else has been tried. In nine cases out of ten, there is no reason for them. In nine cases out of ten, the doctor in general practise isn't competent to treat female diseases. They make a branch of medicine by themselves. They are distinct from other ailments. They can be properly understood and treated only by one who has had years of actual practice and experience in this particular line. This is true of Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalid's Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a remedy for all derangements of the reproductive organs of women, has been in actual use for more than thirty years. It cures every form of "female weakness." 1w

The school year closed Friday evening of last week, and the commencement exercises of the graduating class of the high school were held in the auditorium of the church. There was a very large attendance, and the exercises were from first to last, each graduate rendering his carefully and well-chosen subject in a manner that commanded the attention of the large gathering and left many thoughts for future study and consideration. The large number of beautiful and valuable gifts received bears evidence of the esteem they merit as a class by their many friends. Ella Boyd and Ray Murphy each received a beautiful gold watch, and Ben Johnson a silver cup among their numerous gifts. The class consisted of one lady and four gentlemen. The class ring is a heavy gold band. The class colors were pink and green, the badge a star of the class colors.

The platform was decorated with house plants and boquets, class motto and a design of the coat of Armor hung in gilt letters, "Class of '96." The Acme Quartet, of Adrian furnished excellent music for the occasion, which was encored and received by rousing encores after each selection. The residents of the district, as well as parents and class of '96, have every reason to be proud of our school and should lend every assistance to push it until it stands second to none in the state. Prof. Howell, on behalf of the class, desires to express appreciation to Mr. Decker for his valuable and willing assistance in the preparation of the church exercises evening, also to all who lent a helping heart and ready hand in the

PARALYZING, but unnecessary. You don't have to run for a Doctor whenever you feel a little out of sorts. A few doses of Dr. F. FRENCH'S UNEQUALED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RHEUMATIC REMEDY, will make you feel all right and save you a lot of money. Some people have found this out, and this is what they say about it:

E. B. DOWNING, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Was troubled with Rheumatism—tried several remedies with no effect. Had several doctors who did me no good—half a bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequalled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy cured me."

J. FREE SMITH, Lansing, Mich.

"Doctors called it Bright's Disease in its early stage. One bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy removed all symptoms of the disease—have felt nothing of it since."

Mrs. DIANA RIGGS, Hillsdale, Mich.

"Was sick for four years with enlargement of the Liver and Spleen, and General Prostration of the Nervous System; was attended by two of the best Doctors in the town and used no end of Patent Medicines, all who saw me thought there was no relief except by death, which seemed sure. A friend recommended Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy; in less than a week after I commenced taking it I was better. Six bottles cured me. You are welcome to use my name and this statement, and also refer anyone to me either personally or by mail, and I will tell them much more than I can write."

We have many more letters to the same effect.

This preparation is in no way to be classed among the many worthless Patent Medicines of the day, being simply a Prescription used by Dr. F. French, of Hillsdale, for many years in his practice. It is offered to the public with the full assurance of its being the Best Medicine on Earth for the cure of Rheumatism in all its various forms. Affections of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, Scrofula-Eruptions, and Cutaneous Diseases, Female Weakness, and all complaints arising from an Impure Condition of the Blood.

Prepared only by

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 19, 1896.

The village owns a fine lot on which is built the stand pipe, and with the beautiful trees and well kept carpet of grass, presents in summer, a beautiful park like appearance. It seems a pity that the entire beauty of the spot should be marred by the building in the middle of the Chicago street front, an ugly looking circus bill-board. The business eye of the circus man was all right, but the city fathers who gave permission were short sighted indeed. If no permission was given the thing should be taken down at once.

"And may God save the country." Shouted Senator Hill when it was announced that the senate had passed the Butler Bond bill. This bill took away from the President the right to issue bonds for any purpose without the consent of Congress. Of course the bill never could become a law as, even if the house had acquiesced, the presidential veto would have settled it; but had this power been entirely vested in the last Congress, the finances of the country might have been in the bottom of the Red Sea before anything could have been accomplished. The last Senate has not only refused to enact any useful legislation but with pure maliciousness seems to be proud of attempts to do the country and people absolute damage.

Nearly every one has been reading of the "Filled Cheese" bill recently passed by Congress. It is practically as follows: The "filled cheese" act defines "filled cheese" to embrace "all substances made of milk or skimmed milk the admixture of butter, animal oils or fats, vegetable or any other oils, or compounds foreign to such milk, and made in imitation or semblance of cheese." Manufacturers of filled cheese are taxed $400 annually; wholesale dealers, $250; retail dealers, $12. In addition to these taxes the product itself is taxed 1 cent per pound and imported filled cheese is taxed 8 cents per pound in addition to the import duty. This is one of the most important bills in the interest of the dairy business ever passed by Congress. Whether it will entirely stop the manufacture of filled cheese is a question but one thing certain if the consumer wishes filled cheese he will buy it knowing what he is buying. Let the stuff be sold on its mer its

The nomination of Wm. McKinley by the Republicans by a more unanimous declaration than was ever given any other nominee since the tine of Lincoln, was brought about by two causes. First. The political organization of Mark Hanna is the most perfect known to civilization. For over two years he, and trusted lieutenants, have worked, and planned, and organized for the nomination of McKinley, and good business judgment has for once overcome all methods of the machine politician. Second. The majority of the people in all parties desire that the country should raise sufficient revenue to pay it normal expenses, and think, in want of better theory, that a return to the McKinley idea of a high tariff will produce this result and bring back "better times." It is no use denying the fact, even the farmers of all parties feel this way. The American Agriculturist, a non-partisan newspaper which has a general circulation all over the United States on request of the views of their subscribers as to whether the protection policy of the McKinley bill shauld be endorsed, received 4,168 answers yes, and 1,672 no. The people demand a resume of prosperity. This country has the climate, the soil, the same natural conditions it always enjoyed. The people, both capitalist and laborer have the same disposition to do business and to work, still the wheels stand idle. The Herald does not agree with McKinley in his idea of extreme high tariff, but does think that a country should be run the same as a private business, viz: to provide revenue enough to pay its expenses, and the Herald, as an independent newspaper, cannot help but see that whether the policy be right or wrong, the Republicans, rank and file, demanded the nomination of McKinley at their convention, and the people of all parties will vote for and elect him next November.

"Dr. Fowler's Ext. of Wild Strawberry is considered a necessity in our house." It is an excellent remedy for summer complaints, especially with children." Wm. Reid, 66 College St., Buffalo, N. Y. 1w

The 7th Reunion of Co. F 26th Michigan Inf.—A Pleasant Meeting at Blissfield.

Ever since the surviving members of old Co. F, 26th Michigan Inf., met at Jehiel Davidson's seven years ago and decided to hold annual reunions thereafter, they have looked forward to their reunion as the most interesting event of the year. And well may they regard the day with a deep interest. For it brings together the old comrades of the war and renews and strengthens those strong bonds of friendship that were formed when they marched side by side in the stirring days of war. It awakens emotions of pleasure as they grasp each other's hands once more, and of sorrow as they recall their comrades gone before. To the boys of Co. F therefore each recurring 13th day of June is a memorable one.

The meeting this year was held at the hospitable home of Frank Sperry, in Blissfield. It is unnecessary to say to any one who has ever experienced Mr. Sperry's whole souled hospitality, and that of his fellow villagers, that everything was done which kindness could suggest to make the occasion an enjoyable one. The house and grounds were profusely adorned with national flags and bunting and other ornamentations that gave a decidedly bright and patriotic appearance to the whole premises. The reunion was held on the lawn west of the house under the shade of the evergreen trees and as the weather was perfect nothing was lacking to make the surroundings delightful.

Twenty-six members fell in line for roll call and Sergeant Jehiel Davidson called the long muster roll of the company, the following answered to their names:

Jehiel Davidson, Tecumseh; John H. Dunbar, Deerfield; Jared Ward, Whiteford; Norman Ackley, Britton; Henry Ball, Dundee; Harley Decker, Adrian; Philemon Brewer, Dundee; Michael Biggs, Genoa; James Ebbitt, Hudson; John Exelby, Britton; Chas. F. Howes, Adrian; Lyman Hause, Britton; Marquis Hadley, Whiteford; John Osterhout, Britton; J. K. Quick, Bridgewater; Henry Reynolds, Britton; Wm. Smalldge, Tecumseh; Frank Sperry, Blissfield; Richard Tappin, Deerfield; Joseph Thackery, Britton; Charles Willes, Dundee; John Britton, Britton; Chester Linn, Britton; James Crane, Blissfield; Palmer Hamilton, Elkhart, Ind.; C. W. Haynes, Ypsilanti.

The next command was given by Comrade Sperry, it was: "Get your ladies and come to dinner." Besides the old soldiers there were present a large number of people, consisting of soldiers wives, families and friends, and when dinner was announced the long array of tables under the trees were quickly filled it is hardly necessary to add that the dinner was an excellent one, to which the hungry assemblage did ample justice. The following program was listened to with great interest.

Mrs. J. Davidson presented and read resolutions commemorating Mrs. A. W. Harding, Anna Harding, Mrs. Henry Reynolds, Mrs. Archie Hamilton and Scovel C. Stacy. Mr. Stacy was not a member of the Co. but had attended every reunion and his good humor and ready wit and presence will always be missed.

The business meeting was then held. Secretary Crane read his report, which was adopted. Treasurer reported balance on hand, $1.75. It was voted to hold the next reunion at Philemon Brewer's, June 11, 1897. The following officers were elected:

Pres.—Philemon Brewer.
Sec.—J. K. Crane.
Treas.—N. H. Ackley.
Historian—R. Tappin.

Mr. and Mrs. Sperry are to be congratulated on the success which attended their efforts in behalf of the old soldier boys, of Co. F, and may well look back upon the occasion as one of the red letter days of their lives.

"I am an old soldier of the Rebellion. A year ago I was in bed all winter with chronic rheumatism. Three doctors failed to give me relief. Two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters put me on my feet. It is worth its weight in gold." W. B. Knapp, Litchfield, Hillsdale Co., Mich. 1w

The Relation of the Pulpit and Parent to the Teacher—C. F. Field.
The Alumnus in Journalism—S. S. Walker.
The Alumnus in the Legal Profession—Walter Burridge.
The Ladies—Geo. N. Stacy.

The alumni reunions of Tecumseh are always a success for in them all seem interested. No one in our town is called upon to assist but he does so with willingness to the best of his ability.

The credit of the success of the reunion of '96 can be given to the faithful and painstaking efforts of Chas. A. Slayton, president, Walter Burridge, chairman of the executive committee, and Sumner Collins, toastmaster, and in numbers in attendance, variety and quality of entertainment and interest to the guests this may be considered one of the best of the Tecumseh alumni meetings.

The number at the banquet was 91 and the spread furnished by C. F. Patterson was ample, tasty and served beautifully. The dining room of the Lilley house is well adopted for the use of a gathering of this kind and the association was fortunate indeed to leave the matter of banquet to those who so well understood it.

Those who attended heard and were pleased, hence no use for the newspaper man to particularize. Those who were not present care not else they would have been there, so particulars of solid essays and bright sayings will not be printed. Let all come next year and learn and enjoy.

OFFICERS FOR 1897.

President—Abner Wilson.
1st Vice Pres.—Maggie Haire.
2nd Vice Pres.—Minnie Russell.
Secy.—Edith Ingersoll.
Treas.—P. W. A. Fitzsimmons.
Orator—Garland Gillespie.
Alternate—Clarence Hurry.
Poet—Mrs. C. A. Wright.
Alternate—A. O. Howard.
Historian—Loana M. Davidson.
Alternate—Anna May Bailey.
Toastmaster—L. G. North.
Alternate—F. B. Wood.
Executive Committee—R. S. Moore, Lavern Smith, L. P. Tribou.

After the adjournment of the banquet all who desired enjoyed dancing at the armory.

Among those present from out of town were: Miss Gertrude Haynes and Miss Rawson, of Dundee; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bowerfind, the Misses Jones, Miss Lizzie Clark and Messrs Geo. Jones and Otis Peavey, of Adrian; Guy Davidson and Miss Thompson, of Detroit.

Some people are constantly troubled with pimples and boils, especially about the face and neck. The best remedy is a through course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which expels all humors through the proper channels, and so makes the skin become soft, healthy and fair. 1w

Ava Spayde is not particularly struck with the trade in Tecumseh this season but says he has no real cause for complaint as last week's trade was the best of the summer. But Tecumseh depends on the trade of the farming community and the lack of wool to sell and the market here to buy makes much difference in summer trade.

The secret of success in a retail store and particularly in the dry goods business is to purchase the variety and quality of goods peculiarly adapted to the trade. Harris & Hiteshu purchase only the latest novelties in their lines and aim to please their trade in selection and price. An inspection of their new summer novelties will please you whether you desire to purchase or not.

Wm. Cupples and James Elliott Lowry commenced a friendly discussion relating to a point of law, in Geo. Heesen's store, Wednesday. As the discussion waxed warmer the "Point" seemed to grow farther away, till finally Lowry, to more forcibly emphasize his argument, knocked Mr. Cupples over the head with a chair. Dr. Catlin repaired the physical damage, but the end is not yet.

TELLER IS OUT.

Silver Leader Is Defeated and Declares His Withdrawal.

Solemn Scene in Committee Room—Platform Substantially as Adopted by Full Committee.

St. Louis, June 17.—It was 10:30 when Chairman Foraker called the full committee on resolutions together.

The platform was read by paragraphs, the agreement being that each paragraph should be voted upon separately. The preamble was objected to, and the phraseology was ordered to be changed so that the wording of the paragraph should be less obscure.

Mr. Teller, of Colorado, then arose and stated that he had prepared a minority report on the financial plank which he would present when that subject was reached. The remainder of the platform was, he added, entirely satisfactory to him.

A Pathetic Scene.

There was a pathetic scene in the committee room when the financial plank was reached and Senator Teller, of Colorado, presented his minority report. It took the form of a substitute and declared in general terms for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of sixteen to one.

Teller's Substitute Defeated.

The test vote of the committee on platform was taken on Teller's free coinage substitute. It was defeated by 41 to 10, the silver votes being from the states of Colorado, California, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada and North Carolina and the territories of Arizona and New Mexico.

Minority's Silver Planks.

The minority report of the resolutions committee took issue squarely on the sixteen to one silver issue. It sets forth as follows:

"The republican party favors the use of both gold and silver as equal standard money, and pledges its power to secure the free, unrestricted and independent coinage of gold and silver at our mints at the ratio of sixteen parts of silver to one of gold."

When this was voted down, Mr. Teller offered the following, proposed by Senator Cannon, and intended to combine silver and protection:

"Whereas, The basis of the great doctrine of protection is to give constancy of employment and good wages to the toilers; and upon this basis the great men of the party have stood and the party's victories have been achieved: and

"Whereas, The effect of the single gold standard in this country is to make employment insecure and to decrease the wages of toilers by decreasing the prices of human production; and

"Whereas, Since the single gold standard and protection are irreconcilable, it follows that a party cannot reasonably declare for both and attempt to achieve the purpose of both: and if the republican party shall devote itself to the single gold standard it will be led to the fatal policy which commends the Americans to buy where they can buy the cheapest: and,

"Whereas, If the republican party is to still continue as the advocate and exponent of protection to the American people it must logically oppose the single gold standard policy now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the republican party, in national convention assembled, holding to the great truth that its highest mission is to advance the interests of the toilers of the United States, reaffirms the doctrine of protection to American industries and resolves to use all its power to achieve bimetallism, being the free, unrestricted and independent coinage of silver at our mints as they were coming previous to 1878."

IN THE HOTEL LOBBY.

THE PLATFORM.

Text of the Resolutions as Substantially Agreed To.

"The republicans of the United States assembled by their representatives in national convention, appealing for the popular and historical justification of their claim to the bitter fruits of four years of democratic control, as well as the matchless achievements of 30 years of republican rule, earnestly and confidently address themselves to the awakened intelligence, experience and conscience of their countrymen in the following declaration of facts and principles:

Consequences of Democratic Rule.

"For the first time since the civil war the American people have now witnessed the calamitous consequences of full and unrestricted democratic control of the government. It has been a record of unparalleled incapacity, dishonor and disaster. In the administrative management it has ruthlessly sacrificed indispensable revenue, eked out ordinary current running expenses with borrowed money, piled up the public debt $262,000,000 in time of peace, forced an adverse balance of trade, kept a perpetual menace hanging over the redemption fund, pawned American credit to alien syndicates and reversed all the measures and results of successful republican rule. In the broad effect of its policy it has precipitated panic, blighted industry and trade with prolonged depression, closed factories, reduced work and wages, halted enterprise and crippled American production while stimulating foreign production for the American market. Every consideration of public safety and individual interest demands that the government shall be rescued from the hands of those who have shown themselves incapable of conducting it without disaster at home and dishonor abroad and shall be restored to the party which for 30 years administered it with unequal success and prosperity.

Policy of Protection.

"We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of American industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity. This true American policy taxes foreign products and encourages home industry; it puts the burden of revenue on foreign goods; it secures the American market for the American producer; it upholds the American standard of wages for the American workingman; it puts the factory by the side of the farm, and makes the American farmer less dependent on foreign demand and prices; it diffuses general thrift and founds the strength of all on the strength of each. In its responsible application it is just, fair and impartial, equally opposed to foreign control and domestic monopoly, to sectional discrimination and individual favoritism.

Democratic Tariff Denounced.

"We denounce the present democratic tariff as sectional, partisan and one-sided, and disastrous to the treasury and destructive of business enterprise, and we demand such equitable tariff on foreign imports which come into competition with American products as will not only furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the government, but will protect the American labor from degradation and the wage level of other lands. We are not pledged to any particular schedule. The question of rates is a practical question, to be governed by the conditions of the time and of production. The ruling and uncompromising principle is the protection and development of American labor and industry. The country wants a right settlement and then it wants rest.

Pledges Renewed.

"The republican party renews its pledge for the protection of all American industries against foreign competition, and declares its faith that the supremacy of the United States among the nations is the result of such a policy. We believe in liberal reciprocity and just retaliation, and demand the application of the golden rule of commerce to all future legislation affecting the tariff and foreign trade.

Demand for Reciprocity.

"We believe the repeal of the reciprocity arrangements negotiated by the last republican administration was a national calamity, and we demand their renewal and extension on such terms as will equalize our trade with other nations, remove the restrictions that now obstruct the sale of American products in the ports of other countries and secure enlarged markets for the products of our farms, forests and factories.

Twin Measures.

"Protection and reciprocity are twin measures of republican policy and go hand in hand. Democratic rule has recklessly struck down both, and both must be reestablished. Protection for what we produce; free admission for the necessaries of life which we do not produce; reciprocal agreements of mutual interest which gain open markets for us in return for our open markets to others. Protection builds up domestic indstry and trade, and secures our own market for ourselves; reciprocity builds up foreign trade and finds an outlet for our surplus.

Present Administration Condemned.

"We condemn the present administration for not keeping faith with the sugar producers of this country; the republican party favors such protection as will lead to the production upon American soil of all sugar which the American people use, and for which they pay to the other countries more than $100,000,000 annually.

"To all our products, to those of the mine and the field, as well as those of the shop and the factory, to wool, the products of the great industry of sheep husbandry, as well as to the finished woolens of the mill, we promise the most ample protection.

Cuban Resolution.

"The government of Spain, having lost control of Cuba, and being unable to protect the property or lives of resident American citizens there, or to comply with its treaty obligations, we demand that the armed force of the United States shall be promptly interposed to restore peace in the island. We hold it to be necessary to our national peace and prosperity that the people of Cuba shall achieve political independence, and we pledge to them our sympathy in their noble struggle against the corrupt and barbarous Spanish monarchy.

The Financial Plank.

"The republican party is unreservedly for sound money. It caused the enactment of the law providing for the resumption of specie payment in 1879; since then every dollar has been as good as gold.

"We are unalterably opposed to every measure calculated to debase our currency or impair the credit of our country. We are therefore opposed to the free coinage of silver except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote, and until such an agreement can be obtained the existing gold standard must be preserved. All our silver and paper currency now in circulation must be maintained at parity with gold, and we favor all measures designed to maintain inviolably the obligations of the United States and all our money, either coin or paper, at the present standard, the standard of the most enlightened nations of the earth."

CONVENTION HALL.

DELAY TACTICS.

Republican Convention Accomplishes Little on Second Day.

Thurston Made Permanent Chairman —His Speech in Full—The Afternoon Session.

Convention Hall, St. Louis, June 17.—The early morning hours of the second day of the convention were cloudy and drizzly, and threatened a rather disagreeable, rainy condition of the weather, but just before the hour fixed for the meeting—ten a. m., the clouds began to disperse, and there was every appearance of sultry weather.

PERMANENT CHAIRMAN JOHN M. THURSTON.

By ten o'clock hardly half the delegates were present, but they kept pouring in all the time, while the band discoursed popular airs. In the meantime the galleries were being filled up, and when at last Mr. Fairbanks called the convention to order there were few seats unoccupied either in the galleries or in the sections assigned to delegates and alternates.

Seats of Delegates Changed.

Since Tuesday's adjournment the arrangement of the floor has undergone a change—the positions of the several states having been shifted, and in a way far from satisfactory to the reporters, because, instead of having Senators Teller, of Colorado; Lodge, of Massachusetts; Chauncey M. Depew and Thomas C. Platt, of New York, between whom much of the discussion is anticipated, in close proximity to each other and to the reporters, they have been removed to remote quarters back of the hall, where they can neither be seen nor heard from the platform seats.

The California delegates occupied one of the first four rows in the right hand section from the platform and were conspicuous by each of them wearing on his left shoulder a plume of red, white and blue cock's feathers, which had been adopted by the republicans of that state four years ago as a Blaine badge, and is still worn by them.

Delay in Calling Convention to Order.

The convention was called to order at 10:45, three quarters of an hour behind time, when prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. William G. Williams.

"The senator from Massachusetts," said the chairman, and Mr. Lodge rose amid applause and said: "I desire to say, in behalf of the committee on resolutions, that the sub-committee has completed a draft of a platform and that it is now under consideration by the full committee. The committee is unable to report this morning and asks leave of the convention to sit during this morning's session, hoping to be able to report a platform of principles to the afternoon convention, and on behalf of the committee I ask that leave of the convention."

Leave was unanimously granted.

The committee on credentials was called upon for report, but was not ready. Neither was the committee on permanent organization.

Mr. Wellington, of Maryland, asked unanimous consent that the committee on rules be allowed to report at this time. This was refused.

A motion for a recess till two o'clock in the afternoon was made by Mr. Wellington, and was voted down, to the satisfaction of the galleries—as indicated by cheers.

A motion that the report of the committee on permanent organization be accepted was made by Senator Sewell, of New Jersey, and was agreed to amid applause.

Permanent Organization Effected.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was then presented and read.

It named Senator J. M. Thurston, of Nebraska, as chairman, made the secretaries, sergeant-at-arms and other temporary officers permanent officers of the convention, and gave a list of vice presidents one from each state, as agreed on by the delegation.

The reading of the list of vice presidents was interrupted by applause as popular names were reached.

Mr. Mudd, of Maryland, made the point of order that although the convention might receive the report of the committee on permanent organization, it could not act upon it until the report of the committee on credentials had been acted upon. There was no convention here, now, he said.

The chairman overruled the point of order and promptly put the question on the adoption of the report of the committee on permanent organization. Whilst a rising vote was being taken Mr. Mudd made another point of order that the roll of states must be called according to the rules. "There is no convention now," he said, "until we have a permanent organization."

Disregarding the point, the chairman said:

"Those opposed will rise," and declared that the ayes had it, and that the report of the committee on permanent organization was adopted.

The chair appointed Senator Sewall, of New Jersey, and Representative Serene Hayne, of New York, to conduct Senator Thurston to the chair.

Chairman Thurston's Address.

Senator Thurston took the chair amid tumultuous applause and addressed the convention. He said:

"Gentlemen of the Convention: The happy memory of your kindness and confidence will abide in my grateful heart forever. My sole ambition is to meet your expectations, and I pledge myself to exercise the important powers of this high office with absolute justice and impartiality, I bespeak your cordial cooperation and support to the end that our proceedings may be orderly and dignified, as befits the deliberations of the supreme council of the republican party.

"Eight years ago I had the distinguished honor to preside over the convention which nominated the last republican president of the United States. To-day I have the further distinguished honor to preside over the convention which is to nominate the next president of the United States. This generation has had its object lesson and the doom of the democratic party is already pronounced. The American people will return the republican party to power because they know that its administration will mean:

"The supremacy of the constitution of the United States.

"The maintenance of law and order.

"The protection of every American citizen in his right to live, to labor and to vote.

"A vigorous foreign policy.

"The enforcement of the Monroe doctrine.

"The restoration of our merchant marine.

"Safety under the stars and stripes on every sea, in every port.

"A revenue adequate for all government expenditures and the gradual extinguishment of the national debt.

"A currency as sound as the government and as untarnished as its honor, whose dollars, whether of gold, silver or paper, shall have equal purchasing and debt-paying power with the best dollars of the civilized world.

"A protective tariff which protects, coupled with a reciprocity which reciprocates, thereby securing the best markets for American products and opening American factories to the free coinage of American muscle.

"A pension policy just and generous to our living heroes and to the widows and orphans of their dead comrades.

"The government supervision and control of transportation lines and rates.

"The protection of the people from all unlawful combinations and unjust exactions of aggregated capital and corporate power.

"An American welcome to every God-fearing, liberty-loving, constitution-respecting, law-abiding, labor-seeking, decent man.

"The exclusion of all whose birth, whose blood, whose conditions, whose teachings, whose practices would menace the permanency of free institutions, endanger the safety of American society or lessen the opportunities of American labor.

"The abolition of sectionalism — every star in the flag shining for the honor and welfare and happiness of every commonwealth and of all the people.

"A deathless loyalty to all that is truly American and a patriotism eternal as the stars."

As Senator Thurston closed his short speech with the phrase "a patriotism eternal as the stars," the air was rent with cheers, amid which he was heard to ask the official question: "Gentlemen, what is your pleasure?"

The secretary read a letter from the chairman of the committee on credentials, saying they were engaged in the consideration of the Texas case, and had not been able to complete it.

On motion of Gov. Buchnell, of Ohio, the convention then adjourned until two p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Convention Is Slow to Resume—Committee on Credentials Reports.

St. Louis, June 17.—There was the usual delay in calling the convention to order for the afternoon session, but the waiting time was pleasantly whiled away by strains of sweet music. There was a great pressure in all parts of the immense hall; the galleries were packed; and there, as well as on the floor, palm leaf fans were in ceaseless agitation. The heat was very oppressive.

It was 2:40 when the chairman's (Mr. Thurston's) hammer knocked for order and announced that the afternoon session would be opened with prayer by Bishop Arnett, of Wilberforce college, Ohio.

Historic Gavels Presented.

Mr. Madden, of Chicago, was recognized by the chair, for a special purpose. Mr. Madden then, in appropriate terms, presented a gavel made from a portion of the house in which Abraham Lincoln once lived.

The chairman, in accepting it, expressed the hope that the inspiration of the immortal Lincoln might fire the hearts of the convention to higher patriotism.

SENATOR FRANK CANNON, OF UTAH.

Judge Denny, of Kentucky, presented a second gavel made from the wood which formed part of the homestead of Henry Clay, the father of protection.

Temporary Chairman Fairbanks responded, expressing his gratification that the state of Henry Clay had entered the republican fold, and trusted that it would be found true to the standard bearer of this great convention in November next.

A voice in the hall exclaimed: "By 25,000."

Mr. Torrence, of Minnesota, then presented, in the name of that state, to the chairman of the convention the table which stood in front of the presiding officer.

In accepting the table the president sent back word to the boys of Minnesota that, even as the fathers of the republic handed the union down, so would the republican party of to-day hand down the government under republican institutions, with all the rights and privileges and opportunities for the boys to come. [Cheers.]

The report of the committee on credentials was then presented by its chairman, Mr. Fort, of New Jersey.

At three p. m. the report of the committee on credentials was presented by Hon. J. Franklin Fort, of New Jersey. The paragraph in the report seating the Higgins delegation was received with slight applause, and there was more applause when the seating of the Grant faction of the Texas republicans was announced.

Some one called for three cheers for Grant, but they were not given.

Majority report of committee on credentials was adopted, seating Grant faction in Texas and shutting out Addicks faction of Delaware.

Convention adjourned at 5:07 until 10 a. m. Thursday morning.

Resolution on Mob Violence.

Mr. H. A. Rucker, one of the colored delegates at large from Georgia, introduced into the convention Wednesday the following resolutions, which were referred to the committee on resolutions:

"Resolved, That we denounce mod violence and lynch law as the work of savages, and we denounce those composing the mobs as the most dangerous, despicable and odious of all murderers, and we earnestly appeal to the people of the various states, the state government and to the government of the United States to enact and enforce laws which will protect citizens of all classes, colors and conditions, at home on American soil, as well as they are protected abroad.

"Further, that humanity, enforcement of the laws constitute more vital factors in the progress of civilization than any question of the currency or tariff, and equal civil and political rights to all citizens within our borders.

"Further, that we protest against treatment received by a portion of the delegates to this national convention by the city of St. Louis and that this national convention instructs the national committee not to accept an invitation from any city that does not guarantee to every delegate fair and equal treatment."

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default of payment having been made of a mortgage made by Ezra Day and Hannah Day, his wife, to Jacob L. Day, bearing date November 29th, A. CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

First Session of the Fifty-Fourth Assembly Ends Its Work.

Shortest "Long" Session, with Two Exceptions, in the History of the Government—What Was Done in the Closing Days.

Washington, June 11.—The senate disposed of the appropriation bills yesterday and fixed four o'clock p. m. today as the time for final adjournment. Bills were passed to increase the pay of letter carriers, to prevent the shipment of liquors under false labels, and the bill giving right of trial by jury in all contempt cases.

Washington, June 12.—The senate adjourned sine die yesterday after passing resolutions expressing thanks to Senator Frye, of Maine, president pro tem., and Vice President Stevenson for the uniform courtesy and ability with which they had presided over the senate. Promptly at four o'clock the vice president delivered the following valedictory, at the close of which the gavel fell and the senate stood adjourned sine die:

"Senators: I am deeply touched by the resolutions personal to myself adopted by the senate. It has been my earnest endeavor impartially to execute the rules prescribed for the guidance of this body. For the aid you have so generously given me in the discharge of the duties that pertain to this office, as well as for the courtesy uniformly shown me, I am profoundly grateful. And now wishing each of you a safe return to homes and constituents, it only remains for me to declare the first session of the Fifty-fourth congress adjourned without day."

THE HOUSE.

Bills Introduced and Petitions and Resolutions Presented.

Washington, June 11.—In the house yesterday the concurrent resolution for the final adjournment of congress at four o'clock p. m. to-day was received from the senate and agreed to. The senate amendments to the sundry civil bill were concurred in and many bills were passed, among them being one to extend the scope of investigation of the agricultural department into the question of road improvement.

Washington, June 12.—In the house yesterday a resolution offered by Mr. Turner (dem., Ga.) was adopted thanking Speaker Reed for the ability, efficiency and strict impartiality with which he had discharged the arduous and responsible duties of his office, after which Speaker Reed closed the session with the following remarks:

"Gentlemen of the house of representatives: Before pronouncing those words which close the session, I desire to offer to the house my grateful recognition of its kindness. The thanks of the house of representatives is always a high honor, but is especially so at the end of a session where the speaker has been forced to say "No" more times, perhaps, than in the history of any other congress. While thanking you for your kindness to me, I must congratulate the house on its conduct of the public business. Ordinarily, a majority of two and a half to one, a majority of 150, means disorganization, faction and discord. In this house 150 new members of both parties have behaved with the steadiness of veterans, and if our connection with other branches of government with different ideas has prevented us from serving the country as we might have done, we at least have behaved with dignity, fairness and credit. With the kindest personal wishes to you all, I again return thanks. By virtue of the concurrent resolution of both branches, I declare this house adjourned without day."

Noted Mine Owner Dead.

Galena, Ill., June 15.—James M. Day died here, aged 77 years. He was a resident of Galena over 60 years. He was a part owner of the famous Little Emma mine in Utah, which was eventually sold when worked out to English capitalists for $5,000,000. Mr. Day made a half-million out of the mine, but refused to be a party to the huge swindle on the Englishmen, and sold his share at a nominal figure.

Louisiana for Silver.

Baton Rouge, La., June 17.—Free silver carried the day at the democratic state convention, which completed its labors early Tuesday morning. There will be a solid free silver delegation to Chicago pledged to vote for a free silver plank in the democratic platform and for a straightout free silver man for the presidency.

Fast Flights of Pigeons.

Green Bay, Wis., June 15.—Fifty-eight pigeons belonging to the Green Bay Homing club were released at Alton, Ill., at 4:55 Sunday morning for a homeward flight. The aerial distance is 403 miles. Four of the birds arrived in their coops here Sunday evening at 5:23, 5:27¼, 6:04 and 6:05.

President Goes Fishing.

Washington, June 16.—The president, accompanied by Internal Revenue Commissioner Miller, has gone on a fishing trip to Leesburg, Va., where he again will be the guest of Mr. Harrison, who has a fine trout preserve just outside the village.

Another Civil Service Order.

Washington, June 15.—President Cleveland has issued another civil service order that brings under the civil service rules all government employes carried on the pay rolls as laborers who really perform clerical duties.

Sent to Prison.

Manitowoc, Wis., June 15.—Fred Thiedmann and William Goetsche pleaded guilty to robbing farmhouses and were sentenced to two years each in prison. Both are married and more than 50 years of age.

Great Harvest in Nebraska.

Omaha, Neb., June 15.—The wheat and oats harvest is in progress in Nebraska. The period is from one to five weeks in advance of the season. The yield is something unprecedented in Nebraska.

Crushed to Death.

Iowa Falls, Ia., June 15.—William Adams was crushed to death by falling rock at the V. A. Beggs stone quarry here, and other workmen narrowly escaped a similar fate.

Killed Himself.

Sioux City, Ia., June 17.—A. W. Coats, for 25 years a resident here, killed himself. Sickness and financial troubles caused the suicide.

CLEVELAND TALKS.

The President Interviewed on His Party's Prospects.

Refuses to Believe That the Convention Will Adopt a Silver Platform—Such Action, He Thinks, Would Bring Disaster.

Washington, June 17.—President Cleveland on Tuesday made the following reply to a representative of the New York Herald who asked of the president a statement concerning the democratic situation. Mr. Cleveland said:

"I have made no figures as to the probable action of delegates already chosen or to be chosen to the democratic national convention, but I refuse to believe that when the time arrives for deliberate action there will be engrafted upon our democratic creed a demand for the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver. I cannot believe this because I know the democratic party is neither unpatriotic nor foolish and because it seems so clear to me that such a course will inflict a very great injury upon every interest of our country, which it has been the mission of democracy to advance, and will result in lasting disaster to our party organization. There is little hope that as a means of success this free silver proposition, after its thorough discussion during a political campaign, will attract a majority of the voters of the country. It must be that many of the illusions influencing those now relying upon this alleged panacea for their ills be dispelled before the time comes for them to cast their ballots which will express their sober second thought. The adoption by the democracy of this proposition would, I believe, give to our opponents an advantage both in the present and future which they do not deserve.

Should Make No Mistake.

"My attachment to true democracy is so strong that I consider its success as identical with the promotion of the country's good. This ought sufficiently to account for my anxiety that no mistake be made at our party convention. In my opinion no effort should be spared to secure such action of the delegates as will avert party demoralization. It is a place for consultation and comparison of views and those democrats who believe in the cause of sound money should there be heard and be constantly in evidence. A cause worth fighting for is worth fighting for to the end. If sound money democrats suppose there is danger of a mistake being made such danger should stimulate their activity in averting it instead of creating discouragement.

Wants No Further Honors.

"I am very far from arrogating to myself a controlling influence upon the policy of my party; but as an unflinching democrat who has been honored by his party and who desires hereafter no greater political privileges than to occupy the place of private in its ranks, I hope I may not be blamed for saying this much at this time, in the interest, as it seems to me, of the grand old organization, so rich in honorable traditions, so justly proud of its achievements, and always so undaunted and brave in its battles for the people's welfare."

A FAMILY DROWNED.

Big Reservoir in Oregon Bursts—Five Persons Lose Their Lives.

Baker City, Ore., June 17.—The Goodrich reservoir, located 15 miles from this city, collapsed at an early hour Tuesday morning and a great volume of water rushed down the gulch, wrecking everything in its path. The home of R. French was swept away and the entire family, consisting of the parents and five children, was drowned. A number of bridges were carried away and considerable damage was done to grain fields. The reservoir was constructed in 1863, and was used for mining purposes.

Died in Abject Poverty.

Boston, June 15.—Rodney Fisk, who two years ago was a millionaire and lost his all in Wall street, died Sunday at a lodging house in South Boston. He was a nephew of John Flood, one of the bonanza kings. He leaves three brothers in southern California, one of whom, James, is a candidate for congress.

Two Boys Killed.

St. Louis, June 17.—While a party of men and boys were at work in the Knapp-Stout lumber yard, at the foot of Salisbury street, Tuesday afternoon a pile of lumber collapsed, killing two and fatally injuring four others. The dead are: Philip Slushman, 19 years old, and William Stoll, aged 17.

Sisters Commit Suicide.

Grinnell, Ia., June 17.—Two daughters of Frank P. Hipps, a farmer living a few miles from here, committed suicide Tuesday afternoon at their father's house by taking strychnine. Bertha, the elder, had left her husband, but no motive is known for the self-destruction of Eva, the other sister.

Hotel and Depots Burned.

Janesville, Wis., June 16.—Fire at Clinton Junction Monday morning destroyed the Taylor house, Chicago & Northwestern depot, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul depot and American Express office. The total loss will aggregate $10,000, $5,000 on the hotel alone; partially insured.

Bank President Shot.

New York, June 16.—George H. Wyckoff, president of the Bank of New Amsterdam, was probably fatally shot by a crank because he refused to hand over to him $5,000. The man, who gave the name of Charles Clark, shot himself, but will recover.

Work of a Fiend.

Elkhart, Ind., June 17.—Milton R. Wells, a widower about 50 years old, shot Miss Jennie Walters, aged 23 years, in this city, and then set her clothing on fire and she was burned to death. No cause for the crime is known.

Ball Player Killed.

Newark, O., June 16.—In a game of ball Pitcher McLaughlin hit William Swartz in the head. At first base Swartz fainted and died within a few minutes, his skull having been fractured.

Quits the Stage.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 15.—With the disbanding here of Parson Davies' "Wicklow Postman company" John L. Sullivan says farewell to the stage. He is a wreck both physically and financially.

Seven Armenians Hanged.

Constantinople, June 16.—The police Monday morning hanged seven Armenians in different parts of Galata, a suburb of this city.

New Through Line to Cincinnati and the South.

The Lake Shore in connection with the Ohio Central and Big Four railways are now running two trains daily each way between Detroit, Toledo and Cincinnati. This line lands you in Cincinnati at the Grand Central Union Station right in the heart of the city and if you are going beyond you have a decided advantage as there is no transfer necessary. The trains of the Q. & C., L. & N., Ill. Central, Chesapeake & Ohio and Baltimore & Ohio roads all leave from Grand Central Union Station. Parlor cars on day trains and Wagner sleepers on night trains. Further information given by any Lake Shore Ticket Agent, also by addressing A. J. Smith, G. P. & T. A., Cleveland, Ohio, or H. J. If a small bottle of Shaker Digestive Cordial does you no good, don't buy a large one.

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." It's not good for everybody, only for the thin, pale sick, weak and weary. For those who are starving for want of digested food. For those who cannot get fat or strong, because their stomachs do not work as they ought to.

These are the people, millions of them, whom Shaker Digestive Cordial will cure.

Food makes strength, muscle, brain, blood, energy—after it is digested. If not digested, it will do you no good at all.

Shaker Digestive Cordial helps your stomach to digest your food and cures indigestion permanently. When you've tried a small bottle, you can tell.

AYER'S PILLS

"I would like to add my testimony to that of others who have used Ayer's Pills, and to say that I have taken them for many years, and always derived the best results from their use. For stomach and liver troubles, and for the cure of headache caused by these derangements, Ayer's Pills cannot be equaled.

When my friends ask me what is the best remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, or bowels, my invariable answer is, Ayer's Pills. Taken in season, they will break up a cold, prevent la grippe, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are easy to take, and are, indeed, the best all-round family medicine I have ever known."—Mrs. MAY JOHNSON, 368 Rider Avenue, New York City.

Prosecuting Attorney John E. Bird, of Adrian, was in town on professional business Monday. He will look after the councils interest in the bond case.—Clinton Local. Great time they are having up at Clinton over those liquor bonds. Meantime the old settlers are very dry.

Miss E. Cora DePuy, of Tecumseh, author of "The Workinan's Tariff," a story that has had quite an extensive circulation among tariff reformers, was an Adrian visitor today, and remembered this office with a pleasant call. Miss DePuy is an able and entertaining writer.—Adrian Times.

Phenominal growths continue to be reported. Mrs. Wilhelmina M. Schnieder, Toledo street, has a stalk of corn in her garden seven feet high, measured by a Telegram carrier boy and guaranteed correct. Next.—Adrian Telegram. Well done my boy. Time you get to be an editor "Jack and the bean stalk" will not be in it with your yarns.

A letter from Dr. Hardy while at Prospect Park Hotel, Catskill, N. Y., says: "Having an elegant time. My wife and baby are with me. We spent a few days in New York City, the remainder of the time thus far at above hotel. Eastern New York has suffered for want of rain, many parts are very dry. The Raines bill has also dried parts of New York City.—Britton Citizen.

The paper contains an official register showing that Frank Pierce was president and Joe Jefferson secretary of war; Kinsley S. Bingham was governor of Michigan, and the county officers were: S. S. Wilkinson, prosecutor; G. W. Ketcham, sheriff; C. A. Stacy, judge of probate; Jas. Geddes, treasurer; William Kinsley, county clerk; Charles Chandler, register; Lucien B. Bowen, circuit court com'r; James B. Hampton and James Swords, coroners.—Morenci Observer. The above clipping relates to minutes taken from a paper printed in Morenci in 1855.

George Carl, a farmer 52 years of age who lived two miles northeast of Clayton village, fell dead at the home of Race Noble, in the village, about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He had just entered and taken a seat beside his sister-in-law's bed, when he suddenly cried, "Get some one to help," and then expired. Dr. Williams, who was attending Mrs. Noble, had only just left the house. He was immediately recalled, but his services could be of no avail. Heart disease was the cause of death. A child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Noble shortly after midnight. The funeral of Mr. Carl will be held at 2:30 sun time, Tuesday afternoon.—Adrian Times.

A Tecumseh grocery firm advertises that it sells nothing else, but pure Georgia cod fish. Not much of a business it strikes us. They remind us of the reply a young lady in Tecumseh made a few years ago, when her sister remarked. "You are not going to wear those drab gloves to the party, I hope." Said the determined young belle, "Well I'm not going to wear anything else," But she did, though.—Adrian Press. Yes, this grocery firm succeeds in doing every week the same as this time, attracting attention with their advertisements.

Cute fellows are those politicians at Adrian. A few days ago they sent emissaries down here to induce Dr. Edgar to enter the field this fall for probate judge nomination, but their scheme was too gauzy, and it won't work. The evident object was to divide the interests of the people, and by having more than one candidate for a county office, thus endeavor to weaken the strength already manifest for the favorite son of this section of the county. These same cunning politicians have evidently been getting in their work at Tecumseh, for that place has alreadv three candidates in the field for county officers, and the result will undoubtedly be a division of strength and all will fall by the wayside. So far as the probate judgeship is concerned, the people of Eastern Lenawee are decidedly pleased with Judge Robbins' labors and feeling that he has made a good record of which any honest man might well be proud, propose using their influence to keep a good man in an office for which he is eminently fitted. They think that the office of probate judge, which is the guardian of the widows and orphans, is one that should be kept above political scheming.—Bliesfield Advance.

Stock in the Abbot Voting Machine company went kiting the day following the organization of the company. Holders of stock were offered 55 per cent advance upon their investment Saturday, by anxious would-be buyers. They declined the tempting offers.—Hudson Republican. Good for Hudson. Half this sum would keep the Stimpson Scale Co. in Tecumseh and the latter is no experiment.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

COUNCIL ROOM, June 15th, 1896.

Present, the president, clerk, Trustees Boyd, Heesen, Wright. Absent, Trustees Hall and Lowry.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were reported by the clerk and referred to finance committee:—

Labor: Wm. Fielder, $16.00; W. H. Bird, $16.00; A. Park, $7.50; Dell Packard, $9.13; John Hastings, $2.50; Jehiel Davidson, balance due as assessor, $11.25; Chas. Bidwell, marshal, $25.00. Cement sidewalks: Matthew Boyd, $14.14; W. A. Frost, $8.33; Mrs. P. J. Welling, $19.85. Water works: C. J. & M. Ry. Co., freight on coal, $53.20; L. S. & M. S. Ry. Co., freight, 76c; M. L. Gillen, to apply on account for painting standpipe, $42.26.

Committee reporting favorably on all of above bills, clerk was instructed to draw his orders on the treasurer for the several amounts thereof.

Moved that clerk draw his order on the treasurer for $852.13 in payment of July installment of interest of water bonds. Supported. Carried.

Council then adjourned.

Merrill, Baldwinsville, Mass., says that he has used and recommended it and never knew it to fail and would rather have it than any doctor, because it always cures. THE BATTLE CRY.

Sound Money and Protective Tariff Carry Republican Convention.

Platform in Full as Adopted—Principles Upon Which the Party Will Fight Its Campaign.

St. Louis, June 18.—Following is the full text of the platform adopted Thursday by the national republican convention:

"The republicans of the United States, assembled by their representatives in national convention, appealing to the popular and historical justification of their claims to the matchless achievements of 30 years of republican rule, earnestly and confidently address themselves to the awakened intelligence, experience and conscience of their countrymen in the following declaration of facts and principles:

"For the first time since the civil war the American people have witnessed the calamitous consequences of full and unrestricted democratic control of the government. It has been a record of unparalleled incapacity, dishonor and disaster. In administrative management it has ruthlessly sacrificed indispensable revenue, entailed an unceasing deficit, eked out ordinary current expenses with borrowed money, piled up the public debt by $262,000,000 in time of peace, forced an adverse balance of trade, kept a perpetual menace hanging over the redemption fund, pawned American credit to alien syndicates, and reversed all the measures and results of successful republican rule. In the broad effect of its policy it has precipitated panic, blighted industry and trade with prolonged depression, closed factories, reduced work and wages, halted enterprise, and crippled American production while stimulating foreign production for the American market.

"Every consideration of public safety and individual interest demands that the government shall be rescued from the hands of those who have shown themselves incapable to conduct it without disaster at home and dishonor abroad, and shall be restored to the party which for 30 years administered it with unequaled success and prosperity. And in this connection we heartily indorse the wisdom, the patriotism and the success of the administration of President Harrison.

Tariff.

"We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of American industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity. This true American policy taxes foreign products and encourages home industry; it puts the burden of revenue on foreign goods; it secures the American market for the American producer; it upholds the American standard of wages for the American workingman; it puts the factory by the side of the farm, and makes the American farmer less dependent on foreign demand and price; it diffuses general thrift, and founds the strength of all on the strength of each. In its reasonable application it is just, fair and impartial, equally opposed to foreign control and domestic monopoly, to sectional discrimination and individual favoritism.

"We denounce the present democratic tariff as sectional, injurious to the public credit, and destructive to business enterprise. We demand such an equitable tariff on foreign imports which come into competition with American products as will not only furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the government, but will protect American labor from degradation to the wage level of other lands.

"We are not pledged to any particular schedules. The question of rates is a practical question, to be governed by the conditions of the time and of production; the ruling and uncompromising principle is the protection and development of American labor and industry. The country demands a right settlement and then it wants rest.

Reciprocity.

"We believe the repeal of the reciprocity arrangements negotiated by the last republican administration was a national calamity, and we demand their renewal and extension on such terms as will equalize our trade with other nations, remove the restrictions which now obstruct the sale of American products in the ports of other countries, and secure enlarged markets for the products of our farms, forests and factories.

"Protection and reciprocity are twin measures of republican policy and go hand in hand. Democratic rule has recklessly struck down both and both must be reestablished. "Protection for what we produce; free admission for the necessaries of life which we do not produce; reciprocal agreements of mutual interests which gain open markets for us in return for our open market to others. Protection builds up domestic industry and trade, and secures our own market for ourselves, reciprocity builds up foreign trade and finds an outlet for our surplus.

Sugar.

"We condemn the present administration for not keeping faith with the sugar producers of this country. The republican party favors such protection as will lead to the production on American soil of all the sugar which the American people use, and for which they pay other countries more than $100,000,000 annually.

Wool and Woolens.

"To all our products—to those of the mine and the field as well as to those of the shop and the factory—to hemp, to wool, the product of the great industry of sheep husbandry, as well as to the finished woolens of the mill—we promise the most ample protection.

Merchant Marine.

"We favor restoring the early American policy of discriminating duties for the upbuilding of our merchant marine and the protection of our shipping in the foreign-carrying trade, so that American ships—the product of American labor, employed in American shipyards, sailing under the stars and stripes, and manned, officered and owned by Americans—may regain the carrying of our foreign commerce.

Money.

"The republican party is unreservedly for sound money. It caused the enactment of the law providing for the resumption of specie payments in 1879; since then every dollar has been as good as gold.

"We are unalterably opposed to every measure calculated to debase our currency or impair the credit of our country. We are therefore opposed to the free coinage of silver except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote, and until such agreement can be obtained the existing gold standard must be preserved.

"All our silver and paper currency must be maintained at parity with gold, and we favor all measures designed to maintain inviolably the obligations of the United States and all our money, whether coin or paper, at the present standard, the standard of the most enlightened nations of the earth.

Pensions.

"The veterans of the union army deserve and should receive fair treatment and generous recognition. Whenever practicable they should be given the preference in the matter of employment, and they are entitled to the enactment of such laws as are best calculated to secure the fulfillment of the pledges made to them in the dark days of the country's peril.

"We denounce the practice in the pension bureau, so recklessly and unjustly carried on by the present administration, of reducing pensions and arbitrarily dropping names from the rolls, as deserving the severest condemnation of the American people.

Foreign Relations.

"Our foreign policy should be at all times firm, vigorous and dignified, and all our interests in the western hemisphere carefully watched and guarded.

"The Hawaiian islands should be controlled by the United States, and no foreign power should be permitted to interfere with them.

"The Nicaraguan canal should be built, owned and operated by the United States; and by the purchase of the Danish islands we should secure a proper and much needed naval station in the West Indies.

Armenian Massacres.

"The massacres in Armenia have aroused the deep sympathy and just indignation of the American people, and we believe that the United States should exercise all the influence it can properly exert to bring these atrocities to an end. In Turkey American residents have been exposed to the gravest dangers and American property destroyed. There and everywhere American citizens and American property must be absolutely protected at all hazards, and at any cost.

Monroe Doctrine.

"We reassert the Monroe doctrine in its full extent, and we reaffirm the right of the United States to give the doctrine effect by responding to the appeals of any American state for friendly intervention in case of European encroachment. We have not interfered and shall not interfere with the existing possessions of any European power in this hemisphere, but those possessions must not on any pretext be extended.

"We hopefully look forward to the eventual withdrawal of the European powers from this hemisphere, and to the ultimate union of all the English-speaking part of the continent by the free consent of its inhabitants.

Cuba.

"From the hour of achieving their own independence the people of the United States have regarded with sympathy the struggles of other American peoples to free themselves from European domination. We watch with deep and abiding interest the heroic battle of the Cuban patriots against cruelty and oppression, and our best hopes go out for the full success of their determined contest for liberty.

"The government of Spain, having lost control of Cuba, and being unable to protect the property or lives of resident American citizens, or to comply with its treaty obligations, we believe that the government of the United States should actively use its influence and good offices to restore peace and give independence to the island.

The Navy.

"The peace and security of the republic, and the maintenance of its rightful influence among the nations of the earth, demand a naval power commensurate with its position and responsibility. We, therefore, favor the continued enlargement of the navy and a complete system of harbor and seacoast defenses.

Foreign Immigration.

"For the protection of the quality of our American citizenship and of the wages of our workingmen against the fatal competition of low-priced labor, we demand that the immigration laws be thoroughly enforced, and so extended as to exclude from entrance to the United States those who can neither read nor write.

Civil Service.

"The civil-service law was placed on the statute book by the republican party, which has always sustained it, and we renew our repeated declarations that it shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable.

Free Ballot.

"We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one free and unrestricted ballot, and that such ballot shall be counted and returned as cast.

Lynchings.

"We proclaim our unqualified condemnation of the uncivilized and barbarious practice well known as lynching, or killing of human beings, suspected or charged with crime, without process of law.

National Arbitration.

"We favor the creation of a national board of arbitration to settle and adjust differences which may arise between employers and employed engaged in interstate commerce.

Homesteads.

"We believe in an immediate return to the free homestead policy of the republican party, and urge the passage by congress of the satisfactory free homestead measure which has already passed the house and is now pending in the senate.

Territories.

"We favor the admission of the remaining territories at the earliest practicable date, having due regard to the interests of the people of the territories and of the United States. All the federal officers appointed for the territories should be elected from bona fide residents thereof, and the right of self-government should be accorded as far as practicable.

Alaska.

"We believe the citizens of Alaska should have representation in the congress of the United States, to the end that needful legislation may be intelligently enacted.

Temperance.

"We sympathize with all wise and legitimate efforts to lessen and prevent the evils of intemperance and promote morality.

Rights of Women.

"The republican party is mindful of the rights and interests of women. Protection of American industries includes equal opportunities, equal pay for equal work, and protection to the home. We favor the admission of women to wider spheres of usefulness and welcome their cooperation in rescuing the country from democratic and populistic mismanagement and misrule.

Conclusion.

"Such are the principles and policies of the republican party. By these principles we will abide and these policies we will put into execution. We ask for them the considerate judgment of the American people. Confident alike in the history of our great party and in the justice of our cause, we present our platform and our candidates in the full assurance that the election will bring victory to the republican party and prosperity to the people of the United States."

WHITNEY DECLINES.

The Ex-Secretary Refuses to Be the Democratic Candidate.

He Fears the Chicago Convention Will Adopt a Free Silver Platform, Points Out the Danger of Such a Course

New York, June 22.—Hon. William C. Whitney, who has been named as a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination has given the following to the press:

"I find it necessary to make a public statement embodying my views of the situation to correct misconceptions and to save the time now occupied in answering questions. Far too great importance has been attached to my decision to go to the Chicago convention. I have been practically out of politics for four years, and there are now many eastern democrats who can do much more than I can for the party. I shall not assume any position of leadership. My decision to stay was simply based on the duty of every person who believes in the party for its principles, to stand by and lend his aid and take his chances when a great crisis is upon it.

Differences in the Party.

"There can be no question but that a great crisis is upon the democratic party. Fundamental differences of principle exist inside the party, marked almost by sectional lines. The great question to my mind is whether the party meets in convention now as in 1860, with issues and differences that are for the moment irreconcilable. For the past 15 years leaders of public opinion in the south and west have been advocating as the great remedy for existing ills the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one, with or without the cooperation of other nations. It has come to be believed in there quite generally and conscientiously. A large majority of the delegates to the coming democratic convention have been elected by the people for the purpose of incorporating that doctrine into the platform of the democratic party.

Views of Eastern Democrats.

"Our people, on the other hand, entirely disagree with these views and believe almost universally that it will bring general ruin to the business and prosperity of the country. It is deemed a new doctrine when proposed to be incorporated into the platform of the national democracy. It is true that in no previous platform of the party can it specifically be found. Consequently no party obligations heretofore assumed oblige them to subscribe to it.

May Disrupt the Party.

"Under these circumstances, if the results of the democratic convention should be to establish as the issue of this campaign the free coinage of silver at a ratio of sixteen to one, independent of other nations, in the intensity of feeling likely to arise it is to be seriously apprehended that a disruption of the democratic party might occur. Certainly no substantial following could be secured for the doctrine among eastern democrats. They might not vote the republican ticket for other reasons (believing that the republican party stands for other issues that are detrimental to the country), but the democrats in the east would not, in my opinion, vote for it.

Refuses to Be a Candidate.

"It ought not to be necessary for me to say anything of a personal nature. I find myself, however, spoken of here and there as a possible candidate—not very seriously or prominently, but sufficiently to attract attention if I should fail to notice it. It sometimes affects one's influence in cases like the present. I have no personal motive in entering this fight. I have said that I would not be a candidate. I will add, copying the emphatic language once used by the late Gen. Sherman (I think I remember it correctly): 'I will not run if nominated, nor serve if elected.' I am not foolish enough to suppose that any eastern man could be nominated by this convention—much less that I could. I sympathize thoroughly with the feeling in the south that has caused this uprising and will find its expression at Chicago, but as to the principles which the uprising has brought forth and the issues being framed I entirely disagree. WILLIAM C. WHITNEY."

REPLY TO WHITNEY.

Hon. Wharton Barker Takes Issue with the Ex-Secretary.

New York, June 24.—Wharton Barker has written a reply to the statement of Hon. W. C. Whitney, which was published on Monday morning. Mr. Barker says:

"Mr. Whitney's statements are so misleading and fallacial that they really should not go unchallenged. It is fortunate that he represents so few of the members of the democratic party who entertain the belief to which he gives expression. The people have been misled and deceived too long. They have believed, hoped and doubted, their condition gradually growing from bad to worse, until the unalterable conviction has settled upon them that they have been used by such men as Mr. Whitney, not in the advancement of the interests of the people at large, but merely as a part of a great piece of machinery to further their own selfish ends. His appeal will be of no avail. Cleveland could not stem the tide, with all the power of office at his command; Whitney cannot do it, even though backed by the combined wealth of England.

"Mr. Whitney declares that we must remain subservient to Great Britain: that we must not think of restoring bimetallism until the British government, controlled by the creditor classes, expresses willingness to cooperate with us to that end. No steps must be taken to restore bimetallism until we have the consent and approval of those who, prompted by selfish motives and by the hope of enrichment and self-aggrandizement at the expense of the producing classes, have advocated the gold standard with the avowed purpose of doubling the burden of all debts."

We Must Not Wait.

"The creditor classes of Great Britain will never advocate bimetallism until they have succeeded in confiscating the property of all their debtors. Then, as owners of property, their interests will be in restoring bimetallism and raising prices, but not before. If we wait upon Great Britain we will wait until the property of our industrial classes has been confiscated by foreign money lenders; until our producing classes have become bankrupt and reduced to poverty, misery and despair, and until the foreign bondholders who lay tribute upon them have given place to foreign landlords ready to lay tribute upon us in a new role.

"Yet Mr. Whitney tells us that any move on our part to lift the yoke of vassalage to Great Britain and free our producing classes from the owners' tribute that now rests upon them must end in disaster; that any attempt on our part to do away with the 200-cent dollar that is sapping our vitality must end in disaster.

How to Avert Disaster.

"The truth is, disaster can only be averted by doing away with this 200-cent dollar. The alternative that confronts us is not sound money or disaster, but free coinage or bankruptcy. Unless we open our mints to silver, check the appreciation of gold and free our producing classes from the owners' tribute to the creditor classes of Great Britain which the appreciating gold standard lays upon them bankruptcy is inevitable.

FAVORABLE OUTLOOK.

Crops Pushed Forward by the Weather Conditions.

Chicago, June 24.—The reports as to the condition of the crops throughout the country, and the general effect of the weather on the growth, cultivation and harvest of the same, were Tuesday made by the directors of the several climate and crop sections. The reports received at Chicago were as follows:

Ohio—Warm sunny days, cool nights, local showers. Wheat and rye cutting is nearing completion in southern counties and begun in middle section. Clover hay making continued. Oats, gardens, grass, potatoes and corn made good progress, but cool nights early in week retarded corn. Corn is mostly of a good color and clean and some is laid by. Tobacco all set out, doing well and some is a foot high and is free from worms thus far. Raspberries are ripe.

Michigan—Generally favorable weather for all crops. Wheat continues to improve and is beginning to turn. Corn has grown slowly, but ready to cut. Pastures are good. Weather has allowed much cultivation and given haying a good start.

Indiana—Warm weather, several rains. Growing crops in best condition. Corn growing fast, oats heading; pasturage good; wheat and rye harvest and haying continued; barley being thrashed.

Illinois—Warm, favorable, a growing and working week; wheat, rye and clover cutting practically finished to north counties, and stacking general. Oats ripening rapidly, and a rank growth, with some rust; cutting will begin in southern section this week. Corn has been cleaned and much has been laid by. Broom corn, potatoes, gardens, pastures and small fruits are in good condition. Haying is beginning.

Wisconsin—The week has been very favorable to all kinds of vegetation, and the high temperature and full sunshine have been especially favorable to corn. Rye is ripening nicely, and wheat is doing fairly well, although rust is appearing in some localities. Oats on rich soil are very heavy and are lodging.

Iowa—A favorable week for cultivation and growth of corn which is generally clean and doing well. Small grain needs dry and cooler weather. Hay harvest in progress and fall grain nearly ready to cut.

HON. BENJAMIN BRISTOW DEAD.

Was Secretary of Treasury Under Grant—Was Candidate for President in 1876.

New York, June 23.—Hon. Benjamin H. Bristow, the well-known lawyer and former secretary of the treasury, died at his home in this city Monday of peritonitis.

[Benjamin H. Bristow is best known as President Grant's secretary of the treasury for two years from June, 1874, until June, 1876, and as a candidate for the nomination for the presidency at the republican convention of 1876 in which he received 113 votes on the first ballot. Rutherford B. Hayes was nominated. Benjamin Helm Bristow was born June 20, 1832, at Elkton, Todd county, Ky. He was graduated at Jefferson college, Pennsylvania, in 1851, and in 1853 was admitted to the bar at Elkton, Ky. When the civil war broke out he threw in his fortunes with the union side and became lieutenant-colonel of the Twenty-fifth Kentucky infantry. From 1863 to 1865 he served in the Kentucky senate. As United States district attorney for the Louisville district for five years, beginning in 1865, he proved so efficient that he was appointed solicitor-general of the United States. In 1873 President Grant sent his name to the senate for the place of attorney-general, but the senate refused to confirm the nomination. The following year Mr. Bristow became secretary of the treasury. Since 1876 he had practiced law in New York city.]

PRESIDENT DIAZ HONORED.

Mexican Chief Executive Is Nominated for the Fifth Term.

City of Mexico, June 22.—There was a great demonstration here Sunday in honor of President Diaz, who has been renominated for a fifth term. There was a procession of about 5,000 persons, including 4,000 pure blooded Indians from neighboring villages, carrying banners and flags. The bells were ringing all day and at night there was a display of fireworks. Forty volumes with more than 500,000 signatures favoring the renomination of President Diaz were presented. He had practically no opposition.

Three Killed by Lightning.

Sioux City, Ia., June 24.—This city was visited by a heavy rain and thunderstorm Tuesday morning, and water rushed through the streets, doing much damage. During the storm lightning struck and instantly killed Mrs. Mary Paulsen. At Newell, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson was struck, and they were both killed together on a lounge.

Killed His Wife and Himself.

Wichita, Kan., June 23.—In a fit of insane jealousy, O. E. Hart, a prominent young man here, shot and killed his wife Sunday afternoon, then turned the weapon on himself and sent a bullet through his brain.

EVACUATION DAY.

Detroit Prepares for a Big Celebration on July 11.

Detroit, June 23.—Detroit will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the evacuation of the city by the British, July 11, in a manner befitting the historic character of the event. The success of the celebration was assured Monday afternoon at a general meeting of all the committees assigned to prepare for the celebration. Gen. R. A. Alger presided. The reports submitted showed systematic progress in all departments. Don M. Dickinson announced having secured the consent of the authorities for the troops in this vicinity and the United States steamer Michigan and crew and the Michigan naval reserves to participate. Gov. O'Ferral, of Virginia, will deliver the oration of the day, and a party of distinguished eastern guests will come from Washington to attend the ceremonies. The principal exercises of the day will be at the new federal building, which stands on what was once the site of the last fort on United States soil which was occupied by the British. The new structure will be elaborately decorated for the occasion.

CROSSED THE DARK RIVER.

Ex-Congressman Stout Passes Away at His Home at Pontiac.

Pontiac, June 20.—Ex-Congressman Bryon C. Stout died at his home in this city Friday morning after a long illness of cancer.

[Hon. Byron Gray Stout was born in Richmond, Ontario country, N. Y., January 12, 1822. Two years later his parents moved to Michigan. Mr. Stout was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1851. He served a term in the state legislature, and was elected to congress in 1863, being defeated for reelection two years later. He was also a member of the Fifty-second congress. In 1862 Mr. Stout was nominated for governor by the union party and indorsed by the democrats, but was defeated owing to his views on the civil war. Mr. Stout was the fusion candidate for United States senator from Michigan in 1883.]

WILL REMEMBER THE DAY.

A Chicagoan Visits St. Joseph and Has All Kinds of Trouble.

St. Joseph, June 23.—W. L. Johnson came over from Chicago and was the victim of aggravating circumstances Monday. He began the day by falling down the long flight of steps that lead to the hotel St. Joseph and narrowly escaped breaking his neck. Then he started up the beach on his wheel, and by accident fell into the lake. Later in the day his wheel was stolen. When he went to take the boat home Monday afternoon he found that his pocketbook containing $85 in cash and $4,000 in securities had been deftly removed by a clever pickpocket.

HONOR FOR CHINESE WOMEN.

Two of Them to Graduate from Michigan's University.

Ann Arbor, June 24.—While some of the Americans in the senior class have been compelled to appeal to the faculty and get special examinations at the last moment in order to go through, two Chinese girls in the class have finished with a splendid record for scholarship, both with the faculty and with their fellow students. They are Meiyie Shie and Ida Kahn, two girls who register from Kiukiang, China, and who are the first Chinese girls to graduate from the University of Michigan, and almost the first Chinese to graduate here.

SUCCESSFULLY LAUNCHED.

Largest Boat Ever Built in Michigan Set Afloat at Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., June 22.—The largest boat ever built in Michigan was successfully launched from the Wyandotte yards of the Detroit Dry Dock company Saturday morning. The new boat was christened "The Senator." She was built for the Wolverine Steamship company, of Detroit, and cost $260,000. She is 420 feet over all, 400 feet keel, 45 feet 6 inches beam and 28 feet deep. She is expected to carry 4,300 gross tons on about 15 feet draft.

Charged with Child Murder.

Menominee, June 23.—Carl Wendel, aged 14, is on trial here for the murder of Eva Lafrenier, aged six. Nearly a year ago the little girl went into the Wendel house and asked Carl for some ice cream. For three months afterward nothing was seen or heard of her, until a noisome stench near the Wendel house caused an investigation. In an unused attic in the Wendel home the decayed body of the child was found.

Denounces the Gold Platform.

Detroit, June 19.—The Tribune, one of the oldest daily newspapers in the west and the leading republican paper of Michigan since the birth of the party, has unequivocally repudiated the action of the republican national convention in declaring absolutely for the gold standard, as against bimetallism. It declares the platform to be unpatriotic and unrepublican.

Found a Counterfeiter's Den.

Niles, June 23.—Louise Leff bought an old house in McBride, Calhoun county, and while tearing it down found counterfeiters' dies, which appeared to have been used considerably, and crude metal. The dies were used to make half-dollars, and bear the date of 1891. For the last two years bad half-dollars have been plentiful in that county.

Many Injured.

Ottawa, Kan., June 10.—By the fall of a balcony here 50 persons were injured, some probably fatally.

Good Health

And a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its great merits as a purifier of the blood, its powers to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Ex-President Harrison will discuss our national finances in an article on "The Secretary of the Treasury," which will appear in the August issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. He will tell briefly of the origin of our financial system; its expansion or development; how the nation raises its revenues, and disburses its moneys; and detail the faults of our system of financiering. Referring to the methods necessary to maintain our gold reserve General Harrison expresses himself with evident disapproval, and says that "the present situation would be absurd if it were not so serious." The increase or diminution of the gold reserve, the ex-President asserts, powerfully affects every interest, and the "mending of the existing conditions will be a task for the wisest and strongest statesmanship."

Whoever cares to know how Rudyard Kipling composes one of his spirited barrack-room ballads will be interested in the opening paper in McClure's Magazine for July. Written by Mr. E. Kay Robison, with whom Kipling was intimately associated in the editorship of a newspaper in India, the paper is full of interesting personal facts about Kipling. But perhaps surpassing this in a paper of recollections of Longfellow, Whittier, and Holmes, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. Whittier, it appears, while never lacking for affectionate care, and never losing his cheerful tone, was, in his last years, much oppressed by loneliness; and Holmes, while outwardly so merry a man, was at heart grave almost to melancholy. In his later years the latter experienced, too, quite a radical change in his religious views. Both papers are fully illustrated with portraits and other pictures; and, forming an independent article, is a comprehensive series of portraits of Longfellow.

The complete novel in the July issue of Lippincott's is "A Judicial Error," by Marion Manville Pope. It is a strong story, based on a murder for which the wrong man was convicted and hanged. He has a friend who determines to prove his innocence, and does it. This plot involves some rousing scenes and situations, and the author has not been slow to improve her opportunities.

"A Twenty-dollar Bill," by Algernon Tassin, is a pathetic tale of honesty among the very poor and in the face of the strongest possible temptation—to save a sister's life. Gilliam W. Ford tells about "The Rector's Game-cock," which came to the minister in a singular way, and was thenceforth a bird of peace. Jean Wright narrates briefly "An Old Story"—which is not a familiar or commonplace one at all—of the army.

A Russian, who for obvious reasons withholds his name, writes forcibly on the "Decadence of Modern Russian Literature." His terrible array of facts shows clearly, what might be expected, but has not been much thought of at this distance, the benumbing effect of despotism when vigorously exercised through a censorship of the press.

The July number of Harper's Magazine will open with a paper on General Washington and the period of the Revolution, by Woodrow Wilson. Rarely has a historic personage been made so real and human as Washington appears (thanks to the art of this skillful writer) in camp and on the battle-field no less than in the Virginia House of Burgesses or at his Mount Vernon plantation. Mr. Pyle' illustrations of historic scenes worthily accompany Professor Wilson's admirable studies of colonial life and politics.

The number will be strong in fiction. There will be presented the opening chapters of "Two Mormons from Muddlety," a three part novelette, by Langdon Elwyn Mitchell, whose scene is laid among the West Virginian hills, and whose characters are the rude population of a primitive community, enlivened by the visits of two Latterday Saints engaged in proselyting. The story will be illustrated by Gilbert Gaul. "The Wedding Gown," a charming poem by Alice Archer Sewell, will appear with four page illustrations by H. Siddons Mowbray. Other poems in the number will be "A Wayside Grave," by Margaret E. Sangster, and "Orbis Terræ," by C. H. Gothwaite.

Song of the Washboard.

Endless rubbing—tiresome, ruinous, back-breaking; wear and tear on things rubbed; wear and tear on temper and health; wear and tear on everything—even the washboard itself. It's all done away with, if you use Pearline. There is no washboard; no rubbing; there's no wear, and there's little work. It's the only sensible way of washing—easy, economical, and, above all things, absolutely safe.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 418 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

TOO MUCH WORK

For a Healthy Existence.—That's Why the Kidneys so often Fail.

Nature has provided a certain amount of work for every organ of the human body; overtax the and disease eventually follows. There is not one portion of our organism that is so overworked as the kidneys; on them is placed the important function of filtering the blood of the impurities which naturally form in the regular action of life and digestion. The kidneys are consequently termed the sewerage of the system; clog up this sewer, and the blood becomes tainted with poisonous uric acid, which brings on disease in many forms. The back is the first to show this stoppage. From there comes the warning note; it should be heeded, and the kidneys receive prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills will right the action of the kidneys quickly, relieve the back of pains and aches, and cure all troubles of kidneys and bladder. Read the following:

Mr. Wm. Nelson is a well-known business man of Kalamazoo, he resides at 822 Portage Street, and his business is that of a grain buyer. He says:

"For five years I have suffered from an inability to urinate, which resulted from what was said to be a stoppage of the bladder. During these years I have taken mineral and electric baths and used other means in expectancy of getting better, but they all proved unavailing. Some months ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I had heard highly recommended, and I can now say that the flattering reports were not greater than they deserved. I got better right along, and I am free from any trouble now. I feel better than I have done for three years past. If Doan's Kidney Pills were well known all over they would do an immense amount of good."

Sold by all dealers—price, 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

From LaGrippe

How Dr. Miles' Nervine Restored One of Kentucky's Business Men to Health.

NO DISEASE has ever presented such peculiarities as LaGrippe. It leaves its victims so debilitated, sleepless, nerveless, as LaGrippe.

Mr. D. W. Hilton, state agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Kentucky, says: "In 1889 and '90 I had two severe attacks of LaGrippe, the last one attacking me very severely. I was despaired of. I had not taken more than two months except by the use of narcotics that stupefied me, but got no rest. I was only conscious of intense weakness, agonizing bodily pain and the fact that I was hourly growing worse.

When in this condition, I commenced using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. In two days I began to improve and in one month from that time I was cured, much to the surprise of all who knew of my condition. I have been in excellent health since and have recommended your remedies to many of my friends."

DISEASED MEN CURED

THOUSANDS of young men, middle aged men and old men can look back to their boyhood days or early manhood with a sigh of regret. The ignorance of early youth, or later on a misspent life as "one of the boys" has sown the seeds for future suffering. SELF ABUSE is a terrible sin against nature and will bring a rich harvest. Blood and Private Diseases sap the very life and vitality of the victim. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT will positively cure all the following diseases:

VARICOCELE, EMISSIONS, NERVOUS DEBILITY, SYPHILIS, STRICTURE, GLEET, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, PIMPLES, LOST MANHOOD, UNNATURAL DISCHARGES, KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES

ARE YOU? NERVOUS and despondent; weak or debilitated; tired morning; lack ambition—lifeless; memory poor; easily fatigued; excitable manner; pimples on face; dreams and night losses; unfit for study or business; restless; haggard looking; weak back, bone pains; hair loose; ulcers; sore throat; mucous patches in mouth; blotches; ulcers; sore throat; swollen glands in groin; varicocele; deposit in urine and drains at stool; distrustful; want of confidence; lack energy and strength—WE CAN CURE YOU OR ASK NO PAY.

CURES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY—CONFIDENTIAL.

SNATCHED FROM THE GRAVE. A Warning from the Living Dead. 15 I learned a bad habit. The doctors and nerve tonics by the score without benefit; emissions and drains increased. I became a nervous wreck. A friend who had been cured by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan of a similar disease, advised me to try them. I did so and in two months was perfectly cured. This was eight years ago. I am now married and have two healthy children."—C. W. LEWIS, Saginaw.

VARICOCELE CURED. "Varicocele made life miserable. I was weak, nervous, eyes sunken, bashful in society, had no ambition. The 'Golden Monitor' opened my eyes. The New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan cured me in a few weeks.—I. L. PETERSON, Ionia.

EMISSIONS CURED. J. P. EMERSON relates his experience. "I was raised on a farm. At school I learned an early habit. The doctors and nerve tonics weakened me physically, sexually and mentally. Family doctors said I was going into 'decline' (consumption.) Finally 'The Golden Monitor,' edited by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, fell into my hands. I learned the TRUTH and the CAUSE. Self abuse had sapped my vitality. I took the New Method Treatment and was cured. My friends think I was cured of consumption. I have sent them many patients of whom were cured. Their New Method Treatment supplies vigor, vitality and manhood."

SYPHILIS CURED. "This terrible blood disease was in my system for years. Had taken mercury for two years, but the disease returned. Eyes red, pimples and blotches on the skin, ulcers in the mouth and on tongue, bone pains, falling out of hair, weakness, etc. My brother, who had been cured of Gleet and Stricture by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, recommended them. They cured me in a few weeks, and I thank God I consulted them. No return of disease in six years."—W. P. M., Jackson.

17 YEARS IN DETROIT, 200,000 CURED. NO RISK.

We have always considered Will J. Britton possessed of many accomplishments, but the past week he has demonstrated marked ability in a new role, that of landscape gardener. The Wabash depot grounds have been very tastefully laid out, under his directions, and contains many set figures, which when filled with plants, will be very attractive. No doubt Brittons fair visitors will see that he has plenty of courage to carry out dis artistic design in full.

Now is the time to get rope, pulleys and other tools. Jas. Haight & Co., has them, and cheap.

Alexander Peters, youngest son, a lad of about 15 years old, had a very narrow escape from a serious accident if not death Wednesday. When the Wabash train pulled in he was on the platform and he very carelessly attempted to get on. Not paying much attention to what he knew he was on the ground between the platform and car. Preserving his presence of mind he kept his hold and by great effort drew himself up till he reached the platform and threw himself away from the train. His strength was all gone for a time. He was thoroughly frightened and it is hoped this will prove a lesson to him.

Food, undigested, is poison. Digested, it is life and strength. Millions of us suffer from indigestion, but we often don't know it. We think it is something else. Even doctors often mistake the symptoms.

Pale, thin people, who are overworked, who need strength, who seem in want of proper food, should take Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is astonishing what food will do, when properly digested. It will make you strong, revive you, refresh you, sustain you, make you fat, restore your color, make muscle, brain fibre, courage endurance, energy; increase your power to throw off disease and make you healthy and happy.

Indigestion does just the opposite, but indigestion can be cured and prevented with Shaker Digestive Cordial. Sold by druggists. Trial bottle 10 cents. 1w

THE DOCTOR'S BILL

PARALYZING, but unnecessary. You don't have to run for a Doctor whenever you feel a little out of sorts. A few doses of Dr. F. FRENCH'S UNEQUALED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RHEUMATIC REMEDY, will make you feel all right and save you a lot of money. Some people have found this out, and this is what they say about it.

E. B. DOWNING, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Was troubled with Rheumatism—tried several remedies with no effect. Had several doctors who did me no good—half a bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequalled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy cured me."

J. FREE SMITH, Lansing, Mich.

"Doctors called it Bright's Disease in its early stage. One bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy removed all symptoms of the disease—have felt nothing of it since."

Mrs. DIANA RIGGS, Hillsdale, Mich.

"Was sick for four years with enlargement of the Liver and Spleen, and General Prostration of the Nervous System; was attended by two of the best Doctors in the town and used no end of Patent Medicines, all who saw me thought there was no relief except by death, which seemed sure. A friend recommended Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy; in less than a week after I commenced taking it I was better. Six bottles cured me. You are welcome to use my name and this statement, and also refer anyone to me either personally or by mail, and I will tell them much more than I can write."

We have many more letters to the same effect.

This preparation is in no way to be classed among the many worthless Patent Medicines of the day, being simply a Prescription used by Dr. F. French, of Hillsdale, for many years in his practice. It is offered to the public with the full assurance of its being the Best Medicine on Earth for the cure of Rheumatism in all its various forms. Affections of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, Scrofula-Eruptions, and Cutaneous Diseases, Female Weakness, and all complaints arising from an Impure Condition of the Blood.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 26, 1896.

Should the democrats nominate Boise, of Iowa, there could not be any honest mud throwing during the campaign, for personally both McKinley and Boise are above reproach.

The adoption of the Gold Standard plank in the St. Louis platform forces the democrats to come out straight for free silver at the Chicago convention July 7, if they would have any idea of winning at the November election. This is as it should be, for the country demands that this question of finance should be settled.

The politicians all over the state are in a bad way about their party papers. The old Detroit Tribune has come out for free silver and the Adrian Times, Jackson Citizen and other G. O. P. war horses are crazy, advising all good republicans to stop the Tribune, and at the same time wondering what they will do for a state party organ. The Detroit Journal is about half and half republican gold standard and the Free Press is "Between the Devil and the Deep Sea," favoring gold money, but hardly knowing what to do in face of such a strong free silver sentiment among the Michigan democrats. And the editorials at this exciting political time about "Destruction of the Forests" "Outrages in Cuba," etc., etc., are very "pat." Verily the life of the editor of a political organ is hard. His brain must be fertile and his body capable of squeezing through minute holes.

The time is now at hand for the establishment of Postal Savings institutions in the United States. The laboring wage earner should be afforded a place of absolute security for his earnings at the same time he should be able to draw some interest. This period of hard times has given to the wage earner a spirit of unrest, he should be encouraged to save even if only a trifle at a time. The existing tendency is that National banks will discontinue the payment of any interest on deposits even now the question is being agitated by metropolitan bankers whether to discontinue all interest or reduce the rate to 2, 2 1-2 or, at most, 3 per cent. This will effect the country banks so they will be able to pay very little if any interest and the country should provide a Postal Savings Institution on a plan similar to that of Germany and England.

MATINEE.

Fine Races—Great Sport—Track Record Lowered.

A large crowd attended the second matinee last Saturday afternoon, and it is doubtful if ever a more interesting one has been given. Those present were delighted and those who were not there are kicking themselves that they were not. The weather, though at times lowery, was just suited to racing. While there were some fast horses from away, yet the horses entered from here and vicinity, were strictly in it from start to finish, and surprised their most ardent admirers by the grand work they did. Notably was this true with Robert Elliott's bay gelding, Startle; Geo. Teachout's pacer, Central Bay; T. R. Kyle's b. g., Green Goods; and Henry Lancaster's b. m., Clinton Girl. These, all, though in fast company, made the efforts of their lives. There were four races, viz.: 3 minute, 2:40 trot or pace, named race and free for all. In each phenomenal time was made. There was also a bicycle race and a foot race. Captain Kyle is entitled to great credit for furnishing an afternoon of rare enjoyment and he is determined to have all matinees to come, as good if not better.

The afternoon's sport began on time with the 3 minute race in which there were six starters, and the heat was won by Prarie Lil, with Harold 2d, Clinton Girl 3d, Bonnie Bell 4th, Josie L 5th, Valentine 6th. Time 1:24. In the 2:40 trot or pace there were 6 starters, the first heat being won by Frankie B R, Clinton Boy 2d, Frank B 3d, Texas Jim 4th, Maud A 5th, Rightwood 6th. Time 1:17 1-2

In the second heat of the 3 minute race but four contested, Josie L and Valentine being drawn; won by Harold, Bonnie Bell 2d, Clinton Girl 3d, Prarie Lil 4th. Time 1:23.

In the bicycle race there were four starters, who came in as follows; Rosacrans 1st, Bradford 2d, Burleson 3d, and Taylor 4th. Time 1:19 1-3.

2d heat of 2:40 had 5 starters: Frankie B R 1st, Central Boy 2d, Frank B 3d, Texas Jim 4th, Maud A 5th. Time 1:16. The finish between Central Boy and Frank B was very exciting, they came down the stretch neck and neck but the little pacer crossed the wire first.

3d heat 3 minute race: Harold 1st, Clinton Girl 2d, Prarie Lil 3d, Bonnie Bell 4th. Time 1:18 1-2.

The foot race had four starters and Mead won easily, Pritchard 2d, Anderson 3d, Fink 4th. Time 2:34 1-2

In the 3d heat of 2:40 race matters were changed. Frank B was at himself and came in first, Frankie B R 2d, Central Boy 3d, Texas Jim 4th, Maud A 5th. Time 1:14.

2d heat of bicycle race resulted: Rosacrans 1st, Bradford 2d, Taylor 3d, Burleson 4th. Time 1:39 1-2.

Last heat of 3 minute race won by Harold, Prarie Lil 2d, Clinton Girl 3d, Bonnie Bell 4th. Time 1:21.

Taylor and Burleson then rode a heat to see who was entitled to third prize in the bicycle race, and Burleson won. Time 1:33 1-4

Last heat in 2:40 race won by Frank B R, Frank B 2d, Central Boy 3d, Texas Jim 4th. Time 1:14. Another exciting finish between Frank B and Central Bay, while the pacer crossed the wire first, he was set back for running.

In the named race there were four starters, 1st heat won by Bell Boyd, Green Goods 2d, Startle 3d, Hamiltonian Girl 4th. Time 1:21 1-2

In the free for all Red Flame came in first, Panama Gazelle 2d, Frank B 3d, Fannie H 4th. When the time, 1:10, was announced from the stand and the track record tied, a loud cheer went up.

The 2d heat of the named race was won by Startle, Green Goods 2d, Hamiltonian Girl 3d, Bell Boyd 4th. Time 1:16.

2d heat free for all won by Red Flame, Panama Gazelle 2d, Fannie H 3d, Frank B 4th. Time 1:09. When the crowd realized that the track record had been lowered one second they let loose again.

3d heat of the named race resulted as did the 2d save being 1-2 second slower.

Last heat of the free for all was a repetition of the 2d, even to time, 1:09.

Last heat of the named race, won by Startle, Green Goods 2d, Bell Boyd 3d, Hamiltonian Girl 4th. In this heat Startle and Green Goods demonstrated that they were fast ones and aroused great enthusiasm, especially when the time was called out, 1:13¼. Fred Teachout drove Startle, and Campbell, the driver of Red Flame, held the ribbons over Green Goods. This ended the day's races, the best ever on the track.

The next matinee will occur Wednesday, July 15, and will consist of four races: 3 minute, 2:40, free for all, and bicycle race. $25 in three purses will be given in the free for all.

Your Boy Won't Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill St. South Gardener, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had Lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy won't live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for Lung trouble. Trial Bottles Free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Short Stories of Local Interest.

Mrs. Hixon, of Clinton village, visited the Brewer homestead, in Tecumseh, a few days ago and amongst other conversation related the fact that in the year 1814 she had the pleasure of riding in the steam war vessel "Fulton the First" commanded by Fulton himself. This was the first steamship. Not only this, but this was the second voyage this first steamship ever made. Mrs. Hixon is one of the most remarkable ladies in Southern Michigan. She is 96 years of age today and not only remembers all that has happened for the last 80 years but has a faculty of telling it in a manner so interesting and entertaining that all are delighted to listen.

It seems lucky that the aperature in our front window is filled with pine flooring rather than plate glass. Monday, an extremely swarthy coon, suffering from temporary or chronic alcoholism, came along the sidewalk. He acted like a new bicycle rider, he didn't exactly fall down, but could'n control his steering apparatus. He suddenly turned into the office, plunged around behind the door into the wooden glass and fell down into a chair. He afterwards went to bed across the sidewalk on Evan's street but was provided with more comfortable quarters in the cooler.

Sam Hatch is a farmer, know it for I saw him and he looks like one. All tanned up, hands as hard as door knobs and carries that nervous hungry feeling round with him all the time. For years Sam peddled candy for the largest wholesale house in Detroit. He was known all over Southern Michigan as the best natured man on the road, and it is really quite astonishing to see him settle down now and behave himself. Think of it! Sam Hatch a "Horny handed son of toil."

Dr. Frost looks like an inoffensive sort of a man still sometimes his very name will cause remarks. I was talking with the doctor the other day, and after the conversation a young lady inquired, "who is that gentleman?" I replied, "That is Dr. Frost, one of Tecumseh's best phicicians," and was startled with the reply "Would'nt that freeze you?"

B. L. Baxter has a couple of grandchildren, Florence and Frances Winans, who live down in Toledo, and are no doubt the most wonderful grandchildren in the world, and nothing pleases our venerable townsman more than to relate anecdotes about the lives of these little ones. Frances B., he claims is a natural born lawyer and proves this statement by the following story. She and her sister were one day discussing, amongst other things about how good a mother they have. Francis claimed her judgement in picking out so good a mother was something wonderful. Florence, the eldest sister, began to think this a pretty strong statement and said, "How could you, a little baby, not able to talk, pick out your mother?" Frances answered, "That is easy; I simply pointed."

Up at Hudson lives an old lawyer called "Jeff" Hiller. His boyhood days were spent in the township of Macon and he started out in the practice of law with bright prospects. Fortune did not favor "Jeff," in the latter years of his life, younger members of the bar strode past him in the race, discouragement came, and in settling an estate, about $720 could not be accounted for. He was tried in the circuit court at Adrian and convicted of embezzlement. It was with great reluctance that Judge Lane announced the verdict of the jury and his lawyers asked for and secured a new trial. No doubt this money was used by the old lawyer, if at all, for daily expenses, little by little. The strange part of the story is yet to come. Old "Jeff" Hiller is father of three sons all ministers of the gospel and preaching to larger congregations. It might be possible they could not keep the father out of his trouble, but I doubt it. Shame on such beings who call themselves men.

KELLOGG'S AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS.

The successful employment of mixed paints for residences, buildings, etc., is at last made possible by the use of an honestly made article. The Kellogg Paint Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., have built a world wide reputation on their AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS. They are honestly made of the purest pigments and are mixed in Calcutta or India Flax Seed Oil, aged and settled, which imparts a beautiful varnish-like gloss which is permanent and lasting. Thousands of hotels, residences and public buildings throughout the United States have been painted with these mixed paints with the best of satisfaction to their owners. Their enormous works at Buffalo are kept running night and day to supply the demand their excellent products merit. Having distributing points conveniently located throughout the country, the agencies are supplied on short notice, and parties who are interested in the subject of house painting, would do well to consider the matter and not buy paints of uncertain quality, and often inferior grades. If your local dealer does not handle Kellogg's BEST MIXED PAINTS, insist on his getting them for you or send direct to their distributing agents, where convenient cards with the shades displayed in great varieties are kept in quantities, together with complete information and full directions for the selection of proper shades and combinations. All orders and inquiries receive the most prompt and careful attention.

The state convention of the National Party has been called to meet in the rink, at Lansing, at 2 p. m. Friday, July 3 and continue July 4. This is a mass convention and all favoring the platform of the National Party, regardless of past political affiliations, are invited to participate. One fare for the round trip. Mrs. Helen M. Gougar and other able orators will speak.

The Commercial Telegraph company is almost in a state of "innocuous disuetude." Some weeks since Gurdon Garlinghouse resigned the office of general manager and since then the things have been running themselves. It is said that many poles are in a dangerous condition and if any accidents happen the directors and company would be legally responsible. The treasury contains no money and truly matters are in a bad way. It is simply another case of giving too much for the money; if every subscriber had been obliged to pay a small rental for the use of the wire, beside subscribing for the stock, he would have thought more of the service and no knowing where the usefulness of the line would have stopped. It is hoped the company will be reorganized on a different and better footing.

The Bicycle Derby, Tecumseh, Thursday, July 23.

No wonder Frank J. Temple walks with such elastic step, a bouncing baby girl was presented him Tuesday morning. Frank says his happiness is now complete.

Are the timers ready? Are the starters ready? Go! And if you aren't there to see them go you will repent it for years to come. $1,000 in prizes at the Bicycle Derby, July 23.

General James E. Pittman, of Detroit has rented the Knapp residence on Pottawatamie street for the summer and will make this his summer residence, arriving in a week or so.

Helen's Babies were the first real bicycle enthusiasts and though they are grown folks now, they "want to see the wheels go wound" and will be in Tecamseh, Thursday, July 23.

Mrs. Horatio Keyser is attending commencement exercises at Adrian this week. Miss Mary, daughter of M. P. Brown, who formerly lived here, and a namesake of Mrs. K., being one of the graduates.

Buy the infant prodigy a red tin bank. Give him a penny a day until the day of the races and if he comes to Tecumseh he will have more fun with the contents of that bank than Noah had with the ark.

The force at the L. S. M. S. station has been reduced by laying off the baggageman, Chas. Orr. Charley has been a faithful employee for a number of years and it is to be hoped the "lay off" will be only temporary.

Married, at the Baptist parsonage, by Rev. B. S. Hudson, Wednesday evening, June 24, Mr. George Rendel, of Milan, and Miss Mabel Allen, of Macon. Their future home will be at Macon, Mr. Rendel being a teacher at that place.

Mrs. Alva Waring will sell Rev. W. G. Puddefoot's new book, "The Minute Man on the Frontier." Every one in in Tecumseh remembers Mr. Puddefoot and many will be interested in his book which is spoken of very highly by pulpit and press.

Rob Moore has one show window in his store which looks just like Fourth of July. Not only do the boys look into this window with much pleasure but all the old men seem to be interested. Call and see how cheap he sells these Fourth necessities.

"Wolf" Marsh is getting to be an expert in the line of having runaways. Last Friday his mule team got a good start and played tag all around the soldiers' monument in the square. Wednesday his other team got even by smashing the butcher wagon into a thousand pieces. All now mended up ready for another start.

A noticable improvement has been made in the electric street lights and the management of the company informs the Herald that nearly every lamp has been taken down, cleaned and readjusted within the last few days, and the good work will not stop till every lamp is in the best working order. The company is also making special inducements to private customers in way of rates and wiring that all may make it a matter of economy to put incandesant lights in their residences and stores. Certainly electric lights are a great luxury and with the prices as low as in Tecumseh, are becoming a necessity.

The Bicycle Derby, Tecumseh, Thursday, July 23.

Mrs. Wm. Heck, of South Bend, is at John Heck's.

John Riley visited his uncle's family at Adrian Sunday.

Best material for your Fourth of July celebration can be found at Moir's.

E. E. Russell, of Jackson, visited Tecumseh friends yesterday and today.

Miss Mary Riley was a guest at Eb. Price's in Britton the last of the week.

John J. Orr, Fred B. Wood, James A. Boyd and Dr. R. B. House will attend commandery meeting at Adrian this evening.

C. F. Field, wife and Lizzie have gone to Manchester today. Fred will attend the alumni meeting this evening, he being a member.

Wanted—A reliable man to canvass Lenawee County. The work is light and desirable and will pay well. Must own horse and buggy. Address A. B., care Tecumseh Herald.

The promoters of the great National L. A. W. bicycle meet at Louisville have hung up a total of $2,500 in prizes for a three day's meet, an average of a trifle more than $800 per day. Tecumseh puts up $1,000 for one day's sport and provides many gratuitous attractions for her guests.

Thanks to Street Commissioner Hyde and assistants our streets are being put in elegant condition. It is doubtful if any town around can show anything like them. When all contemplated improvements are finished and grading done the principal streets will look like boulevards. Our citizens are vieing with each other in grading and seeding in front of their homes.

Orr & Temple have just received fine orders from Manchester and Kalamazoo for their white liniment which has become very popular, from the latter comes a request for prices in large quantities. As these orders come unsolicited it speaks volumes for the liniment. These enterprising druggists are manufacturing many preparations that have gained great popularity and are in great demand all over the country.

Henry Ives was born in Steuben county, New York, 80 years and six months ago, Dec. 29, 1815. When 19 years of age he came to Michigan and took up the land which has been his home since that time. When 35 years of age, he was married to Miss Samantha Ann Hall. To them were born two sons and two daughters, three of whom are living. The wife died 24 years ago. Mr. Ives has always been a careful, prudent man, very fond of his family and a good citizen. In a very true sense his life was a success. His last sickness was one of suffering, dropsy of the heart, but he died suddenly without a struggle, Friday, June 19. Funeral service Sunday afternoon, June 25, Rev. B. S. Hudson officiating.

The July number of Harper's Magazine will open with a paper on General Washington and the period of the Revolution, by Woodrow Wilson. Rarely has a historic personage been made so real and human as Washington appears (thanks to the art of this skillful writer) in camp and on the battle-field no less than in the Virginia House of Burgesses or at his Mount Vernon plantation. Mr. Pyle' illustrations of historic scenes worthily accompany Professor Wilson's admirable studies of colonial life and politics.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

THE CROPS.

Warm Weather Favorable to Products of the Field.

Lansing, June 24.—The usual report shows generally favorable weather for all crops. Wheat continues to improve and is beginning to turn. Corn has grown slowly, but looks good and healthy. Oats and rye continue finely, and rye is nearly ready to cut. Pastures are good. Weather has allowed much cultivation and given haying a good start.

Decatur, June 24.—The wheat harvest of southern Michigan commenced Tuesday, and most of the grain will be in the shock by July 4, the usual time of beginning cutting. The damage done to wheat by rust and Hessian fly is much less than at first estimated, although in some localities, especially on light soils, the insects caused considerable injury to the crop. In the southwestern counties the acreage planted to what is slightly less than last year, but the excellent yield in the largest grain growing districts will make an increased output this season. The oat crop is the heaviest for years.

CLASS DAY AT ANN ARBOR.

Three Hundred Members in the Law Graduating Class This Year.

Ann Arbor, June 23.—The law seniors, over 300 in number, awoke Monday morning, listened to their last regular lecture, which by a vote of the class was accorded to Prof. Floyd R. Mechem. At two o'clock, in university hall, the annual class exercises were held. A portrait of ex-Dean Jerome C. Knowlton was the memorial presented to the university by the law class of '96. The honor men were Fred L. Ingraham, of Michigan, president; Henry E. Nothomb, of Iowa, poet; Daniel R. Williams, of Missouri, historian; Earl D. Reynolds, of Michigan, orator; Albert A. Huzman, of Ohio, prophet; Edgar P. O'Leary, of Michigan, valedictorian; Daniel R. Hughes, of Missouri, class memorial orator. Regent Levi L. Barbour, of Detroit, accepted the memorial for the university.

BOTH DROP DEAD.

Two Farmers with Almost the Same Names and Same Disease.

Niles, June 21.—Two strange deaths occurred here Saturday morning, remarkable for their similarity. Two miles north of here resided Anson F. Miller, aged 65, a well-to-do farmer. About the same distance east of the city lived Anton Miller, aged 71, one of the oldest settlers in this part of Michigan. Saturday morning at nine o'clock both dropped dead at their respective homes from heart disease. The fact of the gentlemen having the same surname, almost the same given name, both farmers and the death of both at about the exact minute, makes a startling coincidence.

TURNED TO STONE.

Petrifaction of a Body Buried Near Elkhart Four Years Ago.

Niles, June 24.—The body of Christian Bartholomew, who died and was buried near Elkhart four years ago, was recently exhumed for removal to another cemetery, and upon bringing the remains to light it was discovered that the body had not turned to dust, but had become completely petrified. It had the same appearance as when placed in the grave four years before. The body when struck gave forth a ringing sound, like striking a stone. It weighed at least 400 pounds and five men were required to lift it from the grave.

Death of an Educator.

Hillsdale, June 23.—Prof. John S. Copp, of the theological department of Hillsdale college, is dead. For four years Prof. Copp had been unable to sit up, and had suffered intense agoines from a severe strain received while in the army. Prof. Copp was about 55 years old. He graduated with Will Carleton in 1869, and was a member of Kappa Chapter Delta Tau Delta. He was for years the alumni professor of Hillsdale college, and was given a year abroad, which he spent in study at Heidelberg university, and then was made professor of theology.

GARRET A. HOBART.

Sketch of the Life of the Republican Nominee for Vice President.

Paterson, N. J., June 22.—A sketch of the life of the republican nominee for vice president, Garret A. Hobart, may prove interesting at this time and a brief biography follows:

[Garret A. Hobart, nominated by the republican party for the vice presidency of the United States, was born at Long Branch, N. J., in 1844. He graduated from Rutger college before he was 20 years old, and studied law with Socrates Tuttle at Paterson, being admitted to the bar in 1865.

In 1872 he was elected a member of the New Jersey house, and was reelected and was chosen speaker. He declined an election in 1873 and in 1877 he was elected senator from Passaic county. He was reelected to this position, and served in the office from that time until the expiration of the year 1882, being president pro tem. of the body for the last two years of which he was a member.

In 1884 he was nominated by the republican caucus of the legislature for United States senator, but was not elected, as the legislature was democratic, and John R. McPherson was chosen. In 1884 he became a member of the republican national committee.

In business life he has been active and energetic. He is the president of the Passaic Water company, the Acquackanonk Water company, the Paterson Railroad company's consolidated lines, the Morris County railroad and the People's Gas company. He is a director in several national banks, including the First national bank of Paterson and the Paterson savings institutions. He is also on the directory boards of the New York, Susquehanna & Western railroad, the Lehigh & Hudson River railroad, the Barbour Flax Spinning company, the Pioneer Silk company, the Edison Electric Illuminating company, the American Cotton Oil company and some 40 or more additional corporations. With many of those concerns he holds the position of legal adviser.

Mr. Hobart is a resident of Paterson, where he has a beautiful home, which is the center of the social amenities of the city.]

COST THREE LIVES.

Sad Disaster to a Boating Party Near Zanesville, O.

Zanesville, O., June 22.—A sad drowning accident occurred at three o'clock Sunday afternoon on the Muskingum river, four miles below this city. Grant Harvey, aged 33; Emma Collins, aged 21; A. O. Williams, aged 21, and Lulu Evans, aged 16, were out in a skiff in the middle of the river when the boat began to fill with water. Young Williams sprang into the water and with his hands on the boat was swimming for shore, when within 50 feet of the shore the three occupants of the boat became panic stricken and jumped into the water. In their struggle the two young ladies seized Harvey and pulled him down with them, the three sinking immediately. Young Williams was picked up by another skiff in an exhausted condition.

THIRTY THOUSAND DEAD.

Terrific Result of the Late Earthquake in Northern Japan.

Yokohama, June 23.—It is now estimated that 30,000 people were drowned by the tidal wave on the island of Yesso, the northern part of Japan, which accompanied a succession of frightful earthquakes, lasting about 20 hours.

In allition to the town of Kumaishi, which was wholly destroyed, many other coast towns have been washed away entirely or in part.

FATAL CYCLONE.

Four Persons Killed by the Wind's Fury in Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, June 24.—Violent storms swept over portions of the state Tuesday and did much damage. In the vicinity of Clayton a cyclone demolished a number of dwellings and one man, name unknown, was killed. The cyclone also passed over Clear Lake, killing one man and destroying much property. The house of John Seaman at Neshkoro was torn down and his daughters, aged six and three years, who were playing on the porch, were killed. At La Crosse houses were torn down and a vast amount of property destroyed.

Bank Fails.

Salt Lake City, June 24.—The private bank known as the Bank of Salt Lake (not incorporated), with James H. Bacon as principal owner, failed to open its doors for business Tuesday, and is in the hands of F. W. Ross, as assignee. The liabilities are about $250,000, which, it is said, will be paid in full.

Still the King.

Sheepshead Bay, June 24.—Henry of Nevarre demonstrated once more his right to the title of king of the turf by winning the 13th Suburban handicap at Sheepshead Bay. Commoner was second, Clifford, third. Time, 2:07.

Big Mass Convention of Silverites.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 24.—A mass convention of the silverites of this state, without regard to party, has been called to meet in this city July 16 to elect delegates to the national bimetallic convention in St. Louis.

Are State Champions.

Lansing, May 30.—Ann Arbor won the state high school baseball championship Friday, defeating Lansing by a score of 16 to 9.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Many Matters of General Interest Noted Below.

President Bowen, of Kalamazoo college, has put the institution out of debt by presenting $5,000 in cash.

The postoffice department has established a new postoffice at Michilinda, Muskegon county, with Fred H. Mason as postmaster.

The Southwestern Michigan Spiritualist association will hold its annual meeting at Lake Cora, in Van Buren county, June 28.

A local statistician has figured out that Berrien county fruit-growers received over $250,000 for their shipments of strawberries this season.

Potatoes are now six cents per bushel in Lapeer county and farmers are hastening to unload their stock at that figure, which is expected to decline still further before long.

The shipment of huckleberries has begun at Muskegon. The crop this year is one of the largest for a long time, and many men, women and children are earning good wages.

The third annual conference of the health officers of Michigan will be held at Ann Arbor, July 16 and 17. Many valuable papers will be read and discussed, and a large attendance is expected.

Willie Dague, eight years old, of South Custer, Mason county, scuffled with an older boy for the possession of a gun. The gun was discharged and the top of young Dague's head was blown off.

An effort is to be made to organize an anti-saloon league at Muskegon this summer. This movement is a new one in Michigan, coming from Ohio, where considerable work has been done on such lines.

Union City prides herself upon lowering the rate of taxation for the ensuing year one-eighth of one per cent., the rate being one-half of one per cent. this year. The assessed valuation of the village is $668,480.

Along the Menominee river the grasshoppers, which are so numerous this year, are not stopping at grain and grass, but are eating the strawberry plants and causing much loss in that branch of farming.

Notwithstanding the generally favorable season, the hay crop of southwestern Michigan is far below the average, and farmers are sowing fields with millet to serve as a winter forage crop for horses and cattle.

Southwestern Michigan sportsmen claim that never since the passage of the laws for the protection of fish has there been such systematic and open violation of the law on the lakes of that region as at the present time.

The land owners in the western portion of Huron county have suddenly become silver men. The reason is the recent discovery near Bay Port of a vein of silver ore five feet thick, located 30 feet below the surface.

The supreme commandery of the United Friends of Michigan has decided that hereafter no death benefit shall be paid to the heirs of a member who shall commit suicide, unless he shall have been a member of the order for at least two years.

Jerry Boynton recently visited Burlington and assured the citizens that the Central Michigan railroad would be built through that place. Instead of passing through Coldwater the road will touch Quincy and Girard, covering 225 miles of the best territory in Michigan.

A. O. H. Convention.

Escanaba, June 19.—The seventh biennial convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Michigan came to a close here Thursday morning after one of the most successful gatherings ever held in the state. Resolutions were adopted eulogizing the clergymen of the different Protestant churches in Michigan for their action upon all occasions and places for suppressing the growth of un-American societies in the state. John McLaughlin, of Detroit, was elected state president.

The Foresters.

Port Huron, June 19.—The foresters Wednesday evening closed a very interesting and animated four days' convention of the grand court of Michigan. The session was one of the most harmonious since the organization. Total membership, 2,919; an increase of 840 since last session. Funds are in good condition. The next grand court meeting will be held at Hancock on the third Tuesday in June, 1898. John Doney, of Hancock, was elected grand chief ranger.

Lumber Plant Burned.

Saginaw, June 22.—J. H. Howrey & Sons, of this city, who own and operate a large lumber plant at Fenelon Falls, Ont., have received advices that a fire there Saturday destroyed 15,000,000 feet of lumber and a quantity of lath and shingles. The mills were not damaged. The loss on lumber was confined to one yard; 10,000,000 feet in another yard was saved. Loss, $200,000; insured for $196,000.

A Boy Drowned.

Bay City, June 20.—The fifth drowning in Saginaw river within ten days occurred at about eight o'clock Wednesday evening. The victim was Wilson Wells, the 14-year-old son of Mrs. James M. Wells. The boy was bathing and went to the bottom in sight of his companions. The body was not recovered. This is the second son that Mrs. Wells has lost by drowning in the same place.

Curfew Will Ring in Ludington.

Ludington, June 18.—The city council has decided to institute the curfew bell. An ordinance has been passed for the purpose of keeping girls and boys under 16 years of age off the streets after 8:30 in the evening, except when accompanied by parents or guardians.

Appointed by the Governor.

Lansing, June 20.—L. B. Desvoignes, of Marcellus, has been appointed judge of probate for Caro county by Gov. Rich.

WHEN A TELEGRAM ARRIVES.

Usual Routine Through Which Women Go on Such Occasions.

"What is it, Mary?"

"It's a boy, mum, with a telegraft."

"A telegram! Oh, ask him if James is killed!"

"He says he doesn't know, mum."

"Ask him what he does know about it."

"He says all he knows about it is that it's for you, mum."

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear! What shall I do? Oh, my poor James! I just knew something would happen to him before he went away this morning. Will they bring him home on a stretcher, Mary?"

"I s'pose so, mum. Maybe you'd better read the telegraft."

"I can't, I can't! Oh, it serves me right for not kissing him three times when he left. And we've been married such a short time, too."

"Why don't you read the telegraft, mum?"

"Well, I suppose I must; but, oh, I can't tell you how I dread it."

Reads telegram: "Will bring friend home to dinner.—James."

"Oh! the heartless wretch!"

Utilising Popular Airs.

The Boston Post tells a story of a young man who is forbidden to call on or write to the girl with whom he is deeply in love, and by whom he is loved. He manages to circumvent the vigilance of her parents by whistling popular airs, she answering on the piano. He walks by the house, for instance, piping "Alice, Where Art Thou?" In good time he hears "Home, Sweet Home" played within. After a turn around the block he starts on "Oh, Nannie, Wilt Thou Gang wi' Me?" Perhaps the return will be "Where Are You Going To?" A few bars of "Come Into the Garden, Maud," convey to her the tip and the opening of "All's Well" on the piano tells him everything is understood.

Accommodating.

The following is told of an old lady who had her hair cut off in a severe illness, and wore a wig in its place. She was staying in a continental hotel, and one day noticed a gentleman looking curiously at her hair. Soon after, on some excuse, he crossed the room to behind where she sat. She calmly got up, turned around, and, lifting her hair from her head, said: "Yes, sir; it is a wig."

How They Eat.

The following is the daily ration of the animals at the Jardin des Plantes in Paris: Ten pounds of flesh for each lion, tiger and bear; seven pounds for the panther, three pounds to six pounds for the hyena, one pound for the wild cat, and two pounds for the eagle

Agony

The wonderful cure related below is by no means unusual with Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has given health to suffering children, even when health seemed impossible. The secret of its success is that it purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood.

"I wish to tell of a wonderful cure effected by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Five years ago my little boy was suddenly seized with a severe lameness, apparently in his right knee, which some physicians said was rheumatism, while others said it was hip disease and that it was

Incurable

During the next winter and spring he became rapidly worse. We took Jimmie to a specialist, who said it was hip disease. At this time the affliction became so severe that we could not move him without causing screams of agony. He became reduced in weight to 30 pounds, and was but a shadow of his former self. We had about given up hope when we read of a cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla of a similar case. We resolved to try this medicine. Jimmie was decidedly improved after taking the first bottle. He was even after the second. We have since used over a dozen bottles of the medicine, and the change has exceeded our expectations. James is now able to walk without the aid of crutches and goes to school every day. He has been wonderfully cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla." J. O. RUNDELL, Oakley, Michigan.

Druggist C. C. Tubbs says he knows the Rundell boy has been wonderfully

Cured

by Hood's Sarsaparilla and that Mr. Rundell is thoroughly reliable. He has a good sale of Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills, both of which are giving perfect satisfaction. He says Hood's Pills seem to be the coming family cathartic.

ALEXANDER RICHARDS, Mortgagee.
SUMNER COLLINS, Attorney for Mortgagee.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Thursday the 28th day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of Aaron K. Waldron, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified of William J. Waldron, a son of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Lewis M., William J. and Charles A. Waldron, the executors in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 29th day of June next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is Further Ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee; for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

FARM & GARDEN.

WALDENSIAN FARMERS.

Quite a Colony of Them Is Located in Burke County, N. C.

In the summer of 1893 some 30 families came over from sunny Italy and settled in the western part of North Carolina. They were the advance guard of the colony which to-day numbers about 200 persons.

There would be little to attract attention to this settlement if it were not the only one of the kind in America. The colonists are Waldenses; that is to say, they are descendants of a religious sect that was driven by persecution into the Piedmont mountains of northern Italy. Here they were safe and secluded, and here they were free to follow their peculiar forms of worship. In their mountain retreat at home the Waldensians have followed the ordinary pursuits of agriculture. Living by themselves and shut off from the outside world, these people were content to farm after the fashion of their forefathers. The result was, their methods of farming were rather rude and primitive.

When the Waldensians came to this country they brought with them their old-fashioned ideas and methods. Many of the colonists had never seen a plow or a mower and reaper until they arrived in North Carolina. Of course, our modern methods of intensive farming and rotation of crops were beyond their knowledge. The colony is located in Burke county, N. C., about eight miles from Morgantown, the county seat. The village is called Valdese, and is laid out into streets and building lots. The first thing the colonists did was to build a church and schoolhouse. Recently they have showed considerable enterprise in starting a hosiery mill, in which most of the young people are employed. The property of the colonists consists of several thousand acres. This has been divided into small farms, each family receiving from 50 to 60 acres. At the same time each householder is obliged to assume his share of the debt which the colony still owes.

WALDENSIANS AT WORK.

Thus far, the colonists have been too busy at clearing the lands and building houses to make much of a showing. It will be several years before the results of their work and industry are fully seen. Already they have set out quite a number of fruit trees and vines. Many of them are familiar with grape growing in Italy, and they will soon learn the methods of successful viticulture in this country.

They are giving up using their old and clumsy implements, and to-day they handle the plow as skillfully as the native farmers. As our illustration shows, the women and children lend a hand and work in the fields. The majority of the people are young and in the prime of life; that is, they are under the age of 40. The women are strong, thrifty and make good wives. The men are active, vigorous, industrious and used to hard work. They should make good citizens.—American Agriculturist.

Fowls Running at Large.

There is no better place for a flock having full liberty than to allow them access to brush land, as they will then secure insects and be comparatively safe from hawks. Many waste track of such land could be used for poultry-raising, and if the soil is light and sandy it will be all the better as it will be dry. If fowls have free range they will partially support themselves, but more land will be required for them than when they are confined. It is not so much the confinement as the inactivity that often causes failure. If fowls in confinement are kept busily at work they will need no range, nor will they care for it.—Prairie Farmer.

How Manure Is Wasted.

To the question: "Does manure waste as ordinarily kept in open yards?" Prof. Roberts, before a Wisconsin institute, proceeded to show that each inch of rainfall was equal to 100 tons of water on an acre, the usual 32 inches of rainfall during a year making 3,200 tons of water to the acre. A barnyard with six 16-foot panels one way and seven the other to inclose it, he said, had almost exactly a quarter of an acre in it, and would therefore receive 800 tons of water in the usual rainfall of a year. He said he would as soon think of leaving hay out in the field all winter as of leaving manure in the barnyard all summer.

South Missouri Fruit Belt.

HANDY SWILL TRUCK.

One Can Be Made at Home at a Cost of Three Dollars.

I have a home-made swill truck which I like very much. I bought an oil barrel, knocked out one head and bored a hole opposite the bung hole and of the same size. Then, at a blacksmith's, I got two old buggy wheels with boxes in, and the iron part of a buggy axle, and had the blacksmith take a piece out of the axle and shorten it so that it measured two feet nine inches between the hubs. I had the axle for two inches back of each shoulder rounded, it being square, and shoved it through the holes in the barrel, until the ends were at equal distances from the barrel; then I wedged all around the axle with some soft wood, such as pine. Then I made a frame, see 2, two feet eight inches from outside to outside, in width, and which may be of any length desired. Two irons, 3, of the right length to bend around the axle, were bolted to the frame.

I next put on the wheels, and the thing was done. I can put in 11 pailfuls of swill, and if pains be taken to wedge water-tight, I can fill it three-fourths full or more. To empty, tip the barrel and pour out, as the axle turns in the wheels and frame.

Here is the cost:

One barrel at store	$ 70
Two wheels at 50 cents	1 00
One axle and work	50
Two axle irons and two braces	50
Bolts, etc.	30
Total cost	$3 00

I threw in the labor for a good cause. From our dooryard to the hogpen is 200 feet. For eight months of the year my wife was carrying out the swill, if we men folks were away. There was an average of 12 pails a day for somebody. Walking the 200 feet 12 times over, or 2,400 feet a day, in eight months, counting 26 days to a month, gives us 208 days, and 499,200 feet in a year. In 25 years this amounts to 12,481,000 feet, or 2,364 miles walking; at 30 miles a day, this would occupy nearly 79 days.

In 25 years one might have to expend $15 for trucks and repairs. Anyone who carried the swill would earn about 20 cents a day. Young married man, do you wish your wife to work for 20 cents a day and board herself, when if you have a truck standing by the door you can take it right along on your way to the barn without extra steps?—Rural New Yorker.

FARM WATER SUPPLY.

Why Every Good-Sized Farm Should Have a Deep Well.

Few farmers remember how much they appreciate a cool draught of water, fresh from the well or fountain in summer, when providing for the live stock. Too often the tank or trough is filled but once in 24 hours. The pigs too often have access to the drinking places of the larger stock. Positive detriment to the stock results when the water is not always of an inviting temperature.

As a rule, digestion is aided more by good water ever in the reach of the animals than any other one article. The quality is much better if possible to furnish it free from surface impurities.

The deep wells which are sunk now 100 feet or more below the solid rock strata will do much to abolish the evils attending the surface water. Where the expense is great on account of the depth of 500 feet or more, cooperation of small farms is advisable. A town of 200 or more people in some parts of the west is supplied by two or three deep wells, with no serious consequences. From two to four farms might be supplied by a partnership well, where brains governed the management. Double fences for a few rods, to keep the stock separated by a healthful distance, would be the chief consideration. Such reserve wells, too, would prove often very convenient every month in the summer, even when the surface wells are filled, avoiding the removing of some of the stock long distances from the pasture for watering.

Each 160-acre stock farm should have a deep well.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

The meannesses of human nature are a bar to cooperative effort. There is too much pig nature in the combinations.

Nothing pays better on the farm than to keep accurate accounts—to know what is raised at a loss and what yields profit.

Be sure to get the bulletins from the agricultural experiment stations. They are doing important work. Keep in touch with it.

Be careful in selection when buying trees. One variety will bring profit, another will cause you loss. Foresight is better than hindsight.

Don't waste the straw. It may not be as nutritious as good hay, but it contains enough food and fertilizing properties to be well worth husbanding.—Farmers' Voice.

Wash for Fences and Barns.

A wash for fences or barns is thus made and will last for five years: Half a bushel of fresh lime is slacked and strained and three pecks of hydraulic cement are added, with water sufficient to reduce it to a proper liquid condition. Ten pounds of burnt umber and one pound of Venetian red are well mixed dry; four ounces of lampblack killed with sufficient vinegar are then mixed with water and added to the other materials. The whole is diluted to make a barrel of 30 gallons. It must stand a few days and be frequently stirred before being used. A wash for inside work that will not rub off is made of one pailful of common lime wash, to which is added a thin paste made of half a pint of flour and boiling water.—Rural World.

"Some years ago, as a result of too close attention to business, my health failed. I became weak, nervous, was unable to look after my interests, and manifested all the symptoms of a decline. I took three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, began to improve at once, and gradually increased my weight from one hundred and twenty-five to two hundred pounds. Since then, I and my family have used this medicine when needed, and we are all in the best of health, a fact which we attribute to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. 'ROUND ABOUT US.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

It seems that a portion of Adrian will go up to Hudson to run their Fourth of July celebration. J. L. O'Mealey will speak, Walt Hulett will read, and the First Regiment band will play. But the good looking girls all belong to Hudson.

Col. Marsh, of the Hillsdale Leader, Stearns, of the Adrian Press, and B. J. Smith, of the Monroe Democrat, are having kind of a three-cornered "scrap" about wool. Ten to one the combined knowledge of the three could not tell a sheep from a goat.

After all "Curly" Walker, of Adrian, was touched for about $50 up at Hudson. Our sister town is right in it these days. Raised a $100,000 stock company, got McDowell to vow they were next to Adrian in population, and held up a poor Adrian cub for $50, all in one month.

On Thursday forenoon the Prohibition county committee met in Adrian and Chairman Cairns and all the members present except two tendered their resignation. A few members of the old party got together and decided to continue the organization. In the afternoon the National party for the county was formed with Editor Grandon as chairman.—Morenci Observer.

C. H. VanTyne, of Tecumseh, was married Friday to Miss Belle Joslyn, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Joslyn, of Chesaning. The young couple will sail for Antwerp next Wednesday, and will travel through the old country. Mr. VanTuyne will be remembered by The Times readers as the correspondent who sent bicycling notes from the far west a year ago.—Adrian Times.

David W. Palmer, for 36 years clerk of Bridgewater township, died last Friday at the home of his daughter, aged 89. Mr. Palmer was educated at Hamilton college, New York state, one of his classmates being Josh Billings. In 1836 he went to Clinton, where he taught school, among his pupils being Clinton B. Fisk, Senator Charles M. Felton, of California, and Wirt Dexter, of Chicago. He was well known all over Lenawee Washtenaw counties.

If you ever saw an excited man it was A. Brunt, when he went home to supper Wednesday evening, and found the front door to his house in the hands of a swarm of bees. As Mr. B. has such a peculiar disposition he could not make up with the other bees and trouble followed. But he finally gave them the go-by when he gained entrance to the house by a side door and was permitted to satisfy his hunger without being further molested. He has fully recovered the shock now, and can talk politics as loud as the best of them.—Deerfield Times-Journal.

A Tecumseh special says the joy with which the Tecumseh Republicans received the nomination of McKinley has been more than offset by the anger with which they read the editorials in Friday morning's Tribune, and as they pondered the matter they have been getting madder and madder. Most of them have stopped the paper or declared their intention of doing so at once. Dispatches of the same tenor have been sent out from Lansing and other points in the state.—Adrian Times. Even members of the G. O. P. cannot agree right there in this enlightened state of Michigan.

"No," we repeat, "Morenci will not indulge in one of those old-fashioned celebrations this year," but with varied attractions, there'll be plenty of good enjoyment here on the 4th of July. Not only should all our people stay at home that day, but persons of other places, where no celebrations are to be held, should come to Morenci if it is their desire to have some recreation on the great national holiday.—Morenci Observer. This is hardly fair. If Morenci does not choose to celebrate let the boys go to Adrian, Hudson or some other little town. Not forgetting Tecumseh's great Derby day, July 23.

The Lake Shore flower train passed over the branches last Monday leaving quantities of beautiful flowers to adorn the depot grounds, but nary a flower did Manchester get. The men in charge said that there was no place for them there. If that be true would it not be well to expend a few dollars in preparing a place for flowers. At this station passengers, who are transferring from one branch to the other spend hours waiting for trains and a neat flower garden might assist in diverting the mind from the unsightly and uncomfortable hovel in which they have to wait. —Manchester Enterprise. Poor old Manchester she always gets left, but the railroad man was all right. Manchester is no place for flowers.

Mrs. Lucy Smith the venerable mother of E. J. Smith, of the Monroe Democrat, observed the 81st anniversary of her birth, at Deerfield, June 9. She was surrounded by children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren and the occasion was one of rare enjoyment to the old lady, who looked upon her descendants with a considerable degree of pride, but she could not refrain, as she cast her eye upon several late copies of the Monroe Democrat from remarking that the slipper she used up when he was a kid, did not cure E. J. of the habit of violating one of the fundamental commandments, for the preservation of the truth.—Adrian Press. Right is Mrs. Smith. But then it is to be remembered that for about 15 years "Philander" learned to lie from Stearns.

To whom it may concern: Whereas it is reported that certain persons living in neighboring villages have circulated the story that the church at Cone had called their pastor, Rev. Ross to account for language used by him, charging him with using profane language. Therefore be it known, that the same is a false, malicious and wicked fabrication, not having a shread of truth in warp or woof, and further that perfect harmony exists between the Cone church and their pastor, and that peace reigns supreme in all our borders. And the prayer of thy servant is that this may continue until our neighbors shall have buried the hatchet and scalping knife and put on the girdle of peace, and shall learn war no more.—Dundee Reporter. And what is more it is hereby averred that the said parson did not even think of a cuss word.

AFTER TWELVE YEARS.

Wayward Daughter Once More Taken to Her Mother's Forgiving Heart.

It was under the trees of one of the uptown squares. The rain, which came up with the sudden swiftness of the May shower, had passed away with equal swiftness, and left the newly clothed trees shimmering in the brilliant sunshine which followed the cloud, says the Philadelphia Call. Every leafy fold of nature's spring dress seemed trimmed with a diamond as the sun rays fell across the pendent water drops. An old woman, in tattered dress, and with work-worn hands, moved wearily from under the shadow of a friendly tree whither the storm had driven her. As she stepped into view from the other side of the tree another woman, younger, but with the same toil-stained, weary look, moved to meet her. Their eyes met, and with a piercing scream the younger woman fell to the ground. A crowd gathered quickly, attracted by the screams. But there was no robbery, no assault, no arrests. The old woman, with a softened look in her face, said simply: "It's my gal, Mary. I hain't seen her for 12 years. She's goin' along o' me now." The crowd drifted silently away, and two sorry-looking figures, the penitent prodigal and the forgiving parent, moved out into the glare of the sunlit street and disappeared.

GIVEN NOTICE.

Maj. McKinley Officially Notified of His Nomination.

Senator Thurston the Spokesman—Reply of the Candidate in Which He Indorses the Platform and Defines the Issues of the Campaign.

Canton, O., June 30.—The committee, consisting of one member from each state and territory, which was selected at the St. Louis convention to convey to Maj. McKinley the official notification of his nomination, arrived in Canton on a special train from Cleveland at 11:30 o'clock Monday morning. The day was charming and the members of the committee enjoyed the ride from Cleveland. They were met at the station here by a reception committee, composed of some of the foremost citizens of Canton, and were driven in open carriages to Maj. McKinley's residence, accompanied by a mounted escort. The preparations at Maj. McKinley's were simple. Seventy-five chairs were placed on the front lawn under the trees and facing the house. On the rear lawn a large tent was erected, and in it was a long table on which covers were laid for a hundred guests.

Maj. McKinley received the members of the committee on the veranda. The streets about the house were filled with men, women and children. The crowd surged in at the gates and pressed close up to the chairs where they sat.

Senator Thurston's Speech.

Senator Thurston was in excellent voice. His tones were as clear and commanding and far-reaching as they were in the St. Louis convention hall. His speech was received with much enthusiasm and applause.

"Gov. McKinley: We are here to perform the pleasant duty assigned to us by the republican national convention recently assembled in St. Louis, that of formally notifying you of your nomination as the candidate of the republican party for president of the United States. We respectfully request your acceptance of this nomination and your approval of the declaration of the principles adopted by the convention.

"We assure you that you are the unanimous choice of a united party, and your candidacy will be immediately accepted by the country as an absolute guaranty of republican success.

"Your nomination has been made in obedience to a popular demand, whose universality and spontaneity attests the affection and confidence of the plain people of the United States. By common consent you are their champion. Their mighty uprising in your behalf emphasizes the sincerity of their conversion to the cardinal principles of protection and reciprocity as best exemplified in that splendid congressional act which justly bears your name.

"In 1892 your countrymen, unmindful of your solemn warnings, returned that party to power which reiterated its everlasting opposition to a protective tariff and demanded the repeal of the McKinley act. They sowed the wind. They reaped the whirlwind. The sufferings, losses and disasters to the American people from four years of democratic tariff are vastly greater than those which came to them from four years of civil war.

"But your nomination means more than the indorsement of a protective tariff, of reciprocity, of sound money and of honest finance, for all of which you have so steadfastly stood. It means an indorsement of your heroic youth; your fruitful years of arduous public service; your sterling patriotism; your stalwart Americanism, your Christian character and the purity, fidelity and simplicity of your private life. In all these things you are the typical American; for all these things you are the chosen leader of the people. God give you strength to so bear the honors and meet the duties of that great office for which you are nominated, and to which you will be elected, that your administration will enhance the dignity and power and glory of this republic, and secure the safety, welfare and happiness of its liberty-loving people."

When Mr. Thurston finished Gov. McKinley, who was standing a few feet from him and slightly in the rear, stepped forward, holding the manuscript of his speech in his left hand. Maj. McKinley read his speech in a clear, far-reaching voice. It was listened to intently and he was compelled to halt several times by reason of loud applause and cheers. He said:

Maj. McKinley's Response.

"Senator Thurston and Gentlemen of the Notification Committee of the Republican National Convention: To be selected as their presidential candidate by a great party convention, representing so vast a number of the people of the United States, is a most distinguished honor, for which I would not conceal my high appreciation, although deeply sensible of the great responsibilities of the trust and my inability to bear them without the generous and constant support of my fellow countrymen. Great as is the honor conferred, equally arduous and important is the duty imposed, and in accepting the one I assume the other, relying upon the patriotic devotion of the people to the best interests of our beloved country and the sustaining care and aid of Him without whose support all we do is empty and vain. Should the people ratify the choice of the great convention for which you speak, my only aim will be to promote the public good, which in America is always the good of the greatest number, the honor of our country and welfare of the people.

Great Issues Involved.

"Great are the issues involved in the coming election and eager and earnest the people for their right determination. Our domestic trade must be won back, and our idle working people employed in gainful occupations at American wages. Our home market must be restored to its proud rank of first in the world, and our foreign trade, so precipitately cut off by adverse national legislation, reopened on fair and equitable terms for our surplus agricultural and manufacturing products. Protection and reciprocity, the twin measures of a true American policy, are again the demand of the people of the country, and of the government at Washington. Public confidence must be restored, and the skill, the energy and the capital of our country find ample employment at home, sustained, encouraged and defended against the unequal competition and serious disadvantages with which they are now contending. The government of the United States must raise enough money to meet both its current expenses and increasing needs. Its revenues should be so raised as to protect the material interests of our people, with the lightest possible drain upon their resources, and maintain that high standard of civilization which has distinguished our country for more than a century of its existence.

Will Protect American Credit.

"The party that supplied, by legislation, the vast revenues for the conduct of our greatest war, that promptly restored the credit of the country at its close, that from its abundant revenues paid off a large share of the debt incurred in this war, and that resumed specie payments, and placed our paper currency upon a sound and enduring basis, can be safely trusted to preserve both our credit and currency with honor, stability and inviolability. The American people hold the financial honor of our government as sacred as our flag, and can be relied upon to guard it with the same sleepless vigilance. They hold its preservation above party fealty, and have often demonstrated that party ties avail nothing when the spotless credit of our country is threatened.

"The money of the United States, and every kind or form of it, whether of paper, silver or gold, must be as good as the best in the world. It must not only be current at its full face value at home, but it must be counted at par in any and every commercial center of the globe. The sagacious and farseeing policy of the great men who founded our government, the teachings and acts of the wisest financiers at every stage in our history, the steadfast faith and splendid achievements of the great party to which we belong, and the genius and integrity of our people, have always demanded this, and will ever maintain it. The dollar paid to the farmer, the wage-earner and the pensioner must continue forever equal in purchasing and debt-paying power to the dollar paid to any government creditor.

Indorses the Platform.

"The platform adopted by the national republican convention has received my careful consideration and has my unqualified approval. It is a matter of gratification to me, as I am sure it must be to you and republicans everywhere, and to all our people everywhere, that the expression of its declaration of principles are so direct, clear and emphatic. They are too plain and positive to leave any chance for doubt or question as to their purport and meaning. But you will not expect me to discuss its provisions at length or in any detail at this time. It will, however, be my duty and pleasure at some future day to make to you and through you to the great party you represent a more formal acceptance of the nomination tendered me.

Expresses His Gratitude.

"No one could be more profoundly grateful than I for the manifestation of public confidence of which you have so eloquently spoken. It shall be my aim to attest this appreciation by an unsparing devotion to what I esteem the best interests of the people, and in this work I ask the counsel and support of you, gentlemen, and of every other friend of the country. The generous expressions with which you, sir, convey the official notice of my nomination are highly appreciated, and as fully reciprocated, and I thank you and your associates of the notification committee and the great party and convention at whose instance you come, for the high and exceptional distinction bestowed upon me."

After McKinley's speech, H. H. Smith, of Michigan, presented to him the gavel used by Chairman Thurston at the St. Louis convention.

Before sitting down to luncheon, the members of the committee filed through the reception-room and were introduced to Mrs. McKinley and the governor's mother.

The notification committee sat down to luncheon shortly after the speech making. After lunch they were driven about the city for an hour or two and left for Cleveland about five o'clock.

THE GUEST OF HONOR.

John D. Rockefeller on a Visit to the Chicago University.

Chicago, July 1.—John D. Rockefeller, the founder of the University of Chicago and the annual giver of millions to its endowment fund, arrived in Chicago Tuesday morning from New York to pay his first visit to the great institution on the occasion of the quinquennial exercises and the convocation. There will be other events for his amusement—corner-stone laying, receptions, feasting and Fourth of July merrymaking. Mr. Rockefeller was met by President Harper, at whose urgent solicitation the founder decided to come, and after breakfast at the Union League club was taken to the Lake Forest residence of Cyrus H. McCormick. He will return to New York Friday.

BAPTISTS IN MILWAUKEE.

Young People's Union to Hold Their Sixth Convention There.

Milwaukee, June 29.—Fully 12,000 people are expected to attend the sixth international convention of the Baptist Young People's union, which will be held in Milwaukee July 16 to 19. One of the features of the convention will be the music. There will be a chorus of 600 voices lead by Prof. Daniel Protheroe, of this city. The chorus will be divided into three sections—250 sopranoes, 150 altos and bases and 200 tenors, the whole choir to be made up of members of Evangelical churches of Milwaukee. The convention will be held in the Exposition building, which has a seating capacity of 16,000.

Named for Congress.

The following congressional nominations were made on Tuesday:

Minnesota, First district, J. A. Tawney (rep.) renominated; Second, J. T. McCleary (rep.) renominated; Third, J. P. Heatwole (rep.) renominated. Ohio, Fifth district, D. Meekison (dem.); Eighth, M. Dunn (dem.). Illinois, Nineteenth district, A. J. Hunter (dem.); Twenty-first, T. E. Ford (dem.); Twenty-second, J. J. Hall (pop.). Kansas, Fifth district, W. A. Calderhead (rep.) renominated. California, First district, J. A. Barham (rep.) renominated.

Fatal Accident in a Mine.

Bessemer, May 25.—Andrew Smith was killed by a fall of ground in the Palma mine here.

FATE OF MINERS.

Disastrous Cave-in Occurs in a Colliery at Pittston, Pa.

Fully One Hundred Men and Boys Are Entombed in the Fatal Pit—All Have Probably Perished—May Take Several Days to Reach Them.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 29.—One hundred miners were caught Sunday morning under a fall of rock in the Twin Shaft mine at Pittston, nine miles north of here. It is believed that all perished instantly, but there is a possibility that some are imprisoned in the drift between two cave-ins. In that case they are confined in a small and almost air-tight space, so that even the powerful fans cannot supply air enough to sustain life until the searchers can cut through the walls of debris. If it prove that the men are dead 63 women will be left widows and 200 children be fatherless. This is the most terrible mine accident which has occurred in the anthracite region since the great disaster at Avondale, this county, in 1869, in which 120 lives were lost.

The Call for Rescuers.

Immediately after the accident occurred there was a call for volunteers. Two hundred men responded at once, and, despite the great dangers sure to be encountered, entered upon the work of rescue. The men were divided into relief gangs of 40 each, for the work is very tedious, as the roof has to be propped as fast as the men work their way through the debris.

The danger from fire and choke damps is incredibly great, as the Twin shaft is known to be subject to these gases except under favorable conditions of ventilation. Any minute may thrust the rescuers into a pocket of fire-damp and result in a terrible explosion.

The greatest excitement prevailed about the mouth of the shaft all day. The relatives of the imprisoned men gathered in large numbers and their grief was pitiable. "Oh, my poor papa," were the cries of anguish heard. Many of the women swooned and had to be carried away. Some knelt on the wet ground and prayed that their loved ones might be brought out alive.

The Situation Unchanged.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 1.—There is no change in the situation at the Twin Shaft mine. The rescuers continue to work hard in their endeavor to reach the entombed miners. Very little progress is being made, however, as there are frequent cavings of the earth about the mine.

Another Mine Disaster.

Fayette City, Pa., July 1.—Michael Barbaras and Louie Deristi, together with three or four other coal diggers, contrary to orders entered the Washington mine, belonging to Biggs & Flinn, to take out their tools. A terrific explosion of mine gas occurred and Barbaras and Deristi were instantly killed. The fate of their companions is not known, but they are also believed to be dead.

Many Will Be Idle.

Youngstown, O., July 1.—Every mill in the Mahoning valley, including Youngstown, Warren, Niles, Girard and Struthers, will close down pending a settlement of the rate per ton for boiling. The manufacturers offer to sign a scale at four dollars per ton, while the Amalgamated association is holding out for $4.50. Eight thousand five hundred mill workers will be out of employment until a settlement is reached. The conference committee will meet again in this city July 9.

Newspaper Syndicate Fails.

Youngstown, O., June 29.—The syndicate organized two years ago to purchase and operate a chain of newspapers from New York to San Francisco and which purchased the Boston Traveler and the Youngstown Telegram and started the Kansas City World has failed, the manager, Hal K. Taylor, who secured credit through wealthy hands, being bankrupt, with liabilities of over $100,000.

Confederate Veterans.

Richmond, Va., July 1.—Over 20,000 veterans who followed the fortunes of Lee, Longstreet and Jackson have gathered here, many of them accompanied by their wives and families, to participate in the sixth annual reunion and the exercises attending the laying of the corner-stone for the Jefferson Davis monument. The exercises will continue for three days.

Killed by His Neighbor.

Wellston, O., June 29.—James Robinson, a prominent politician, was hot and killed Saturday by Frank Harrison. Robinson was on a spree and abused his family. Among the neighbors who came to the rescue was Harrison. Robinson attacked the latter with a knife, when Harrison shot him. Harrison was arrested.

Deficit Will Be About $38,500,000.

Washington, July 1.—The indications are that the excess of government expenditures over receipts for the fiscal year ended Tuesday will be about $38,500,000, as compared with a deficit of about $43,000,000 for the fiscal year 1895. The receipts for the present month will exceed the expenditures by about $1,400,000.

Elgin's Population.

Elgin, Ill., July 1.—Elgin's population, just taken for school purposes, is almost 22,000, an increase of over five per cent. in a year.

You have probably noticed the mutilated condition of Charlie Ellis' countenance this week and wondered how it came about; to relieve him from the annoyance of explaining we will say it was not done in a scrap for he is too good natured to get into a row with any one Sunday evening he was riding Fred Koernig's bike and coming down Jackson street the pesky thing became unmanageable and ran him into the embankment near Mrs. Platte's, and when he extricated himself he was disfigured thusly.

Our base ball boys play at Manchester July 4th.

HISTORY.

Of the Big Prairie from 1815 to 1896, by B. L. Baxter.

The government survey of this prairie lying mostly in town 6, south of range 5 east, in Lenawee Co., Mich., but also partly in the town of Dundee, Monroe Co., Mich., was commenced the year I was born, 1815, and was finished and a final report of it made to the U. S. government August 9, 1819, by Maj. Joseph Fletcher, U. S. District Surveyor.

It was purchased from the United States government at the Land Office then at Monroe, Mich, for the most part, by Austin E. Wing, of Monroe, and Beverly Robinson, a banker of New York city, and mostly on the 14th day of July, 1835. But it seems that this purchase was really made in the interest of a Land Company, consisting, as their partition deed sets forth, of some 12 partners in unequal interests, of which, however, Beverly Robinson held one half, or 12-24ths.

The original purchase covered 6,800 acres; also some lands in Monroe Co. not purchased by us.

But the 6,800 acres were purchased by Perley Bills, of Tecumseh, Mich., as to the Beverly Robinson share; and by Benjamin L. Baxter, of Tecumseh, Mich., as to the Nathaniel Silsbee share consisting of 3-24 of the whole, in the interest of one Land Company, consisting of Perley Bills, of Tecumseh, and his law partner Benjamin L. Baxter and Witter J. Baxter, of Jonesville, Mich., as equal partners.

The Partition Deed of the old Land Company, executed July 15, 1835, and recorded July 31, 1835, in vol. C of deeds folio 604, shows the following persons to have been interested in these lands, as follows, to wit

Dan B. Miller	1-24
Henry Smith	1-24
Tunis VanBrunt	3-24
Nathaniel Silsbee	3-24
John P. Cushman	1-4 of 1-24
Jacob D. Lansing	" " "
Lewis Cass	" " "
George R. Davis	1-8 " "
William Porter	1-16 " "
Edwin Crosswell	1-32 " "
Thomas W. Olcott	1-32 " "
Beverly Robinson	12-24

As to the particular land assigned to each you can consult the Partition Deed recorded as above, in the office of the Register of Deeds for Lenawee Co.

Perley Bills purchased for the company the Beverly Robinson interest on the 7th day of August, 1865, in all the lands then belonging to him, consisting of 6,400 acres, for the sum of $25,000. And I purchased of the heirs of Nathaniel Silsbee 728 acres. I afterwards bought for the company, from various parties, enough to makeout for us to pay taxes on and drain, an even 10,000 acres.

The old Land Co., under the charge of Isaac P. Christiancy, of Monroe, had expended some $3,000 in ditching, but failed to make, thereby, any perceptible impression on the prairie, to wit:

The commencement of the Robinson drain at the N. E. corner of the prairie, and a part of the Deerfield ditch, down the center of sec. 25, south to the Swamp Raisin.

The most part of sections 12 and 13 fell to Tunis VanBrunt, and I purchased these 220 acres of him, but was not able to keep them.

Much of this land now belongs to D. W. Loree, some to Jesse Exelby, and the E 1-2 of the N W 1-4 to James Lavender, and the S 1-2 of the S E 1-4 to the heirs of James Fuller. His son, Chas. Fuller, built a log house on the same, and that with a log house at the extreme S W of the prairie and the log house of D. W. Austin built in the edge of the woods on the south side built by L. D. Austin, were the only houses on that prairie not built by me, or with our money up to 1884.

In 1864 before purchasing the prairie, at the request of Messrs. Murphy and Baxter, of Jonesville, agents for the old Land Co. or rather agents of Beverly Robison, who owned one-half of the company's lands, included in the original purchase, I took Joseph C. Satterthwaite, the surveyor, and we made a preliminary survey of these lands, going around every section of it, found the U. S. section corners, examined the character of the soil, and decided upon the feasibility of draining it, and upon my report, when given them through their agents, Mr. Robinson instructed his agents to effect a sale of his interest, if possible; saying that he was thoroughly tired of draining and paying his taxes upon it, and to no good purpose, so far as he could see.

Thence arose his sale, to Mr. Bills, of the whole 6,400 acres, at $25,000; 1-4 down and the balance in 1, 2 and 3 years with interest annually, it being a little over $4 per acre, but after we had purchased it, an old ditch tax, of some $2,000, which ought to have been levied and collected two years before, and which we supposed to be out of the way, and some other taxes, brought the average price up to some $4.50 per acre.

And very likely this tax about to be collected, known to Robinson, but not to us, was one strong motive for his selling as he did.

That whole prairie of over 7,500 acres extending north-east across La Plaisance Bay turnpike to the north end of the old George Price farm, and east into Monroe Co. for over a mile, was marked down by the government surveyors as an irredeemable swamp, and utterly worthless. In fact, it was a swamp when we bought it, in 1865, and for several years after we bought it I had to go down to within two miles of Dundee, by the Hough school house, where the Robinson ditch (then called the Little Raisin) crosses the turnpike on its way to the Macon, to get around on the south side of that prairie.

Female Loveliness

May be obtained by intelligent women. A well regulated system must of necessity show its fruits in the face. To regulate the system and keep it in perfect condition there is nothing so good as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin—Constipation and indigestion absolutely cured. 1p doses 10c. Large size 50c and $1, at Orr & Temple's. july

The Convention of Physicians and Surgeons at Buffalo, N. Y., has adjourned to meet next year in Indianapolis, Ind.

A True Saying.

It has been said that habitual constipation is the cause of fully one-half the diseases that flesh is heir to. Keep your bowels regulated by Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and your system will be in proper condition to keep off diseases of all kinds. Get a sample bottle (10 doses 10 cents) of Orr & Temple, and you will bless the day you did. july

"One of my sick headaches," you will hear one say, as if the complaint was hopelessly incurable. As a matter of fact, Ayer's Pills not only relieve sick headache but effectually remove the cause of this distressing complaint, and so bring about a permanent cure. 1w

A business man is not the most patient creature in the world. He cannot wait to hear any long-drawn-out story of the cause of his ailment. He does't care two straws about a fine spun theory of how he should treat himself. He may be predisposed to scrofula, or consumption. "That," he will tell you "has nothing to do with the case." He wants to be well. If he can be cured write out a prescription and send in your bill. So, here's the first part of the proposition. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a microbe hunter and killer. Many persons of scrofulous blood, encourage the breaking out of unsightly sores, to prevent the disease going to the lungs. There is no need of this state of dread and discomfort. Purify the blood. It can be done. Golden Medical Discovery will cure 98 per. cent of all consumptive cases, also of all lingering bronchial, throat and lung diseases. 1w

Joseph Beck, a tenement house dweller in Brooklyn, N. Y., was presented by Mrs. Beck with triplets.

Why is it,

if catarrh is a constitutional affection, as those claim who have a blood tonic to sell, that physicians, in extreme cases, frequently advise change of air to those suffering from it? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream balm, in all cases of catarrh, is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and a permanent cure after short continuance. 10

P-e-r-f-i-n-e. This is the way we spell it. It's necessary to mention it, because some women don't seem to know. We find so many who say they use Pearline, and then, upon examination, find that what they are using is only some imitation of it. See if your package is marked as above. There is only one Pearline. It makes white things whiter—bright things brighter—economical and saves at every point. For washing and cleaning, nothing under any other name can equal it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 414 JAMES PYLE, New York.

A GRAND TRIUMPH.

Baffled Many Times but Success Comes at Last.

(From the Grand Rapids Press.)

The following incident would be hard to believe if it had not occurred right here in Grand Rapids, and investigation by our representative has placed it beyond the reach of doubt. These are the facts in detail: Mr. J. H. White of No. 35 Hanley Place, has been an instructor in penmanship in different business colleges for the past fourteen years. He says: "Last October I was suddenly taken ill. I consulted a physician, who said the pain was from 'gravel' stones; gradually grew worse; the pain was in my back and side. My back swelled up in a great ridge, and I finally grew so bad that I was taken to bed, as helpless as a child. I passed blood, and when the pain was at its worst I was like one crazy. The doctor injected morphine to give me relief, but further than that he said he was powerless, and nothing would do me any good but a surgical operation. I believe my flesh was literally cooked in the attempts to relieve my agony, everything was used, mustard plasters, turpentine, hot cloths and all such things. I was in this condition, given up by the doctor, and almost out of my mind with suffering. I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and really I felt easier in 20 minutes. After about two hours I had a passage of urine, and passed blood and some 'gravel' stones which greatly relieved me. I rapidly improved. I took in all six boxes, and I feel to-day entirely well. Mine has been a wonderful case. I feel that I cannot say anything strong enough for Doan's Kidney Pills. My great wish is that they may become well known. They will prove a boon to mankind.

For sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

DR. J. H. WATTS.

Dr. J. H. Watts, druggist and physician, Humboldt, Neb., who suffered with heart disease for four years, trying every remedy and all treatments known to himself and fellow-practitioners; believes that heart disease is curable. He writes:

"I wish to tell what your valuable medicine has done for me. For four years I had heart disease of the very worst kind. Several physicians I consulted, said it was Rheumatism of the Heart. It was almost unendurable; with shortness of breath, palpitations, spasms, pains, unable to sleep, especially on the left side. No pen can describe my sufferings, particularly during the last months of these four weary years. I daily [illegible] and was surprised at the result. It put new life into and made a new man of me. I have not had a symptom of trouble since and I am satisfied your medicine has cured me for I have now enjoyed, since taking

What the Shakers of Mount Lebanon know more about than anybody else, is the use of herbs and how to be healthy. They have studied the power of food. They nearly all live to a ripe old age. The Shaker Digestive Cordial is prepared by the Shakers from herbs and plants with a special tonic power over the stomach. It helps the stomach digest its food, and digested food is the strength-maker. Strong muscles, strong body, strong brain, all come from properly digested food. A sick stomach can be cured and digestion made easy by Shaker Digestive Cordial. It cures the nausea, loss of appetite, pain in the stomach, headache, giddiness, weakness and all the other symptoms of indigestion, certainly and permanently. Sold by druggists. THE DOCTOR'S BILL

PARALYZING, but unnecessary. You don't have to run for a Doctor whenever you feel a little out of sorts. A few doses of Dr. F. FRENCH'S UNEQUALED BLOOD PURIFIER AND RHEUMATIC REMEDY, will make you feel all right and save you a lot of money. Some people have found this out, and this is what they say about it.

E. B. DOWNING, Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Was troubled with Rheumatism—tried several remedies with no effect. Had several doctors who did me no good—half a bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequalled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy cured me."

J. FREE SMITH, Lansing, Mich.

"Doctors called it Bright's Disease in its early stage. One bottle of Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy removed all symptoms of the disease—have felt nothing of it since."

Mrs. DIANA RIGGS, Hillsdale, Mich.

"Was sick for four years with enlargement of the Liver and Spleen, and General Prostration of the Nervous System; was attended by two of the best Doctors in the town and used no end of Patent Medicines, all who saw me thought there was no relief except by death, which seemed sure. A friend recommended Dr. F. French's Unequaled Blood Purifier and Rheumatic Remedy; in less than a week after I commenced taking it I was better. Six bottles cured me. You are welcome to use my name and this statement, and also refer anyone to me either personally or by mail, and I will tell them much more than I can write."

We have many more letters to the same effect.

This preparation is in no way to be classed among the many worthless Patent Medicines of the day, being simply a Prescription used by Dr. F. French, of Hillsdale, for many years in his practice. It is offered to the public with the full assurance of its being the Best Medicine on Earth for the cure of Rheumatism in all its various forms, Affections of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys, Scrofula-Eruptions, and Cutaneous Diseases, Female Weakness, and all complaints arising from an Impure Condition of the Blood.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 3, 1896.

A. W. Smith, of Adrian, is elected chairman of the executive committee, of the State central republican committee. Indeed "Doc" is getting to be a great politician.

It has been said, and truly, that the Herald printed the best and most complete account of the Republican National Convention of any paper in Lenawee county. This rule will hold good for the Democratic Convention which convenes in Chicago next Tuesday, July 7. In fact it is the aim of the Herald to print all the news each week and give information to its readers on a strictly independent basis.

The Republican Gubernatorial Convention will be held at Grand Rapids Aug. 5, when the following men will compete for the honor of the nomination. David D. Aitkin, of Flint. A. T. Bliss, of Saginaw, H. S. Pingree, of Detroit, and James O'Donnell, of Jackson. At present the situation is, Pingree against the field. The politicians and many of the better class of the republicans are against Pingree, but he has and is doing the work, and the forces of the others will have to be concentrated to beat him.

The meeting of the two great political parties of these United States in convention to nominate candidates for the struggle in November, should set the voters of this country to thinking as they never thought before. In looking over the situation a glance at the work of the last Congress will satisfy every thinking person that it is neither Free Silver, or Gold Standard that this country needs as much as a little honest painstaking legislation; by legislation we mean measures passed for the good of the people without regard to the policy of party or selfish greed of the politician. Such a measure was absolutely unknown to the last Congress, and republicans, democrats and populists all seem to have been to blame. The populists and silver men held the balance of the power in the senate and during the entire session no legislation of any kind was allowed to pass, for the simple reason that no measure for the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 could pass both houses, and these men with theories and "fads" and sectional interests at stake would allow the whole country to go to the dogs, unless this handful of minority could control everything its own way. No revenue measure could pass Congress, the treasury could get no relief simply for the selfish interests of this man, Teller, and his associates; and yet good men ask us to support such men to watch the interests of the whole country at Washington. And now for the other side, John Sherman, the old rascal, put foot on the bill to tax beer $1 per barrel simply through fear of losing the German vote at the coming election and this man has been a candidate for nomination at several national republican conventions. Very few people have looked into the wonders of this gigantic River and Harbor bill passed by this the most extravagant of American Congresses. It provides for an ultimate expenditure of 75 millions of dollars. and its authors were so wasteful that they included in its appropriations 10 millions of dollars for projects of which the engineer had not approved, and one million and one-half on which the engineer had actually reported adversely. Whatever may be said in defence of the remainder of the bill, this 12 millions will be of no benefit to the country or commerce, but will simply be abstracted from the public treasury and wasted in behalf of the political gain of favored congressmen. Whatever else were President Cleveland's faults he had the courage to veto this bill and it was passed over his head with a crazy howl from all parties. It is no wonder that the people were glad when such a Congress adjourned, it should be a lesson to every honest voter to see to it that Congressmen are selected this summer and elected this fall who will at least keep up the appearance of being honest. The Detroit Tribune and Adrian Press may howl about Free Silver, and the Free Press about gold, but never was there a time when there should be the pains taken in selecting public servants as this fall. Commence with the poundmaster and pick out the best man for every office without regard to his political attachments. In the heat of the national campaign let us not forget that there are county officers to elect and a little touching up will do none of them any harm.

Things Which I have Seen

Which seem to me worth noticing, while swinging around a circle of mingled duty and pleasure through Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti and Toledo, between June 15th and July 1st, 1896.

At Ex-Gov. Felch's funeral on Friday afternoon I saw, I think, the longest funeral procession, consisting not only of celebrities from abroad, church and college societies, drawn by a procession of carriages more than half a mile long, such was the high esteem and even veneration in which he was held by all who know him, that it was ever my fortune to look upon.

I saw at Ypsilanti the Normal school exercises and, walking around evenings, saw, perhaps, the most startling evidence of the trend of this co-educational business re-inforced by promiscuous bicycle riding that it ever was the lot of an old fogy like myself to look upon and, if I must say it, blush to behold.

At Ann Arbor on the 25th I saw the graduation of 754, which it took nearly a cord of sheepskins to launch forth into the world, 331 of them lawyers—"The Lord have mercy on their souls"—and 115 doctors of one kind or another—"God save the weak."

I saw on my way to Toledo, June 26th, at or near Milan the first field of ripe wheat and fields of wheat already harvested and meadows of Timothy hay already mown and the hay drawn away to the barns, and I have seen since here men all along the streets walking the telegraph wires, 25 or 30 feet up in the air (and they are welcome to the job for all of me) putting up cable tubes of lead, enclosing, I am told, sometimes as many as 185 copper telephone wires, to keep them the more removed and secure from outside disturbances; so that telephoning is now reduced to a fine art which almost nothing can disturb or interfere with. And while looking upon this, it has seemed to me that this ought to solve the question as to the feasibility of putting telegraph and telephone wires under the ground instead of upon dangerous and unattractive poles as is now the style and custom. But this is a question for scientists and not for me to answer.

Hoping to have completed my circle of duty and of visiting and to return again to my Tecumseh home by next Monday afternoon, I am as ever,

Most respectfully yours,
B. L. BAXTER.

A THRILLING FEAT.

Worked for Nearly an Hour at a Height of One Hundred and Seventy Feet.

In the course of an account of the progress of the preparations for the celebration of the czar's coronation at Moscow, the London Standard's correspondent devotes a paragraph to the feat of one of the Russian sailors whose services had been enlisted in the performance of the more difficult parts of the electric installation for the illumination of the Kremlin:

"I watched this afternoon a cool-headed sailor climbing about the Russian eagle which surmounts, at a height of 170 feet, the handsome tower of the Saviour's Gate. Every now and then the electric current would be turned on and a few lamps fail to light up. The sailor had then to climb, wholly unaided and carrying the tools with him, round and about the huge eagle—it measures about 20 feet across the wings—stepping on and holding by the outspread wing feathers, for the most part, until he succeeded in reaching and putting to rights the defaulting lamps. The risk in the cold, raw weather of to-day at such a height was immense, and it was a relief when, after nearly an hour's labor, he reached comparative safety a few yards below the peak on which the eagle stands. The moment his hands were at liberty the man devotedly crossed himself three times, turning toward the sacred places within the fortress, an action which indicated pretty surely his own opinion of the feat just accomplished, and sent a thrill through the spectators just below."

A Tight Lock.

At Timaru, New South Wales, two women quarreled about a bucket of water, and from words came to blows. After a few minutes both women fell to the ground with their hands twisted in each other's hair. They lay thus grappling together for about a quarter of an hour, watched by screaming women and children. A man then came up and tried to separate them, but without result, until he brought a claw-hammer, by using the claws of which he unlocked the women's hands and made them let go. The weaker woman had to be assisted home.

Joan of Arc.

Joan of Arc's armor, given to the maid by Charles VII. at Bourges, is said to be hanging on the walls of the castle La Tour de Pinon in the department of the Aisne, forming part of the collection of arms of the marquis de Couval. The armor is of the fifteenth century, bears the arms that Charles VII. granted to the Maid of Orleans, and would fit a person five feet three inches tall, while the breast plate must have been intended for a woman.

The Tecumseh Bicycle Association—$1,000 on their Third Annual Derby Day.

Tecumseh is unlike her sister villages. She is radically different in many ways, but in one feature she excels them all. That feature is the unanimity of action among her citizens. We all "pull together," and once a plan of action is approved by the majority, even though its adoption may have been seriously opposed, the hatchet is instantly buried by the faction in the minority and they pull in unison with those whose opinions have prevailed.

In 1894 the Tecumseh Bicycle Association was organized among our more enthusiastic young sportsman. On the 6th of October they hung up a $500.00 prize list for which a large field of speedy riders contested. Encouraged by the succes of 1894, these same young men determined to eclipse there previous effort by giving a still larger meet in 1895. The merchants and business men of the village responded with unusual generosity, the manufacturers came to our assistance most liberally, and the Association was thus enabled to offer a prize list amounting to $750, which was subsequently increased to $825. The day selected for the meet was perfect and the largest crowd Tecumseh had seen in many a year assembled to witness a day of splendid sport.

This year, Tecumseh's third annual Derby Day, to be given on Thursday, July 23, will cast in the shadow the brilliancy of its predecessors. One thousand dollars in gold, diamonds and valuable sundries constitute an unexcelled prize list. Every article on the list is one of guaranteed value and the guarantee of the Association means all that the word implies. Many of the most noted professional riders known to the sport, as well as the most speedy amateurs will contest at this meet.

The extremely successful ten mile road race of 1895 will be repeated, and in order that this great attraction may be more fully enjoyed, the race will be conducted in such a manner that a portion of the contestants will be within sight of the spectators from start to finish. The justly famous Sid Black will also give an exhibition of his sensational and difficult trick and fancy riding. And best of all, these features will be presented to Tecumseh's guests absolutely free of any charge.

The track events will be pulled off in the afternoon at the Association's unusually fast half mile track. This track has recently been rendered absolutely safe by the banking of the turns and the widening of the stretches. The tandem races will be an unique feature of the afternoon's sport and Mr. Black will again appear, giving an entirely different exhibition of fancy riding, concluding his performance by riding a half mile backwards against his best previous effort, which, by the way, is a world's record.

An excellent band will discourse music throughout the day, the railroads have reduced their rates of fare to this point and there seems to be absolutely nothing left undone to insure the greatest day that Tecumseh has ever seen. The admission at the track is only twenty-five cents and that is the only charge made during the entire day unless you wish to luxuriate in the purchase of a grand stand ticket. Don't miss this meet on any account and if you don't secure full value for your money the Association will gladly reimburse you.

For information, entry blanks or tickets address the Association or John L. Anderson, the acting Secretary.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Pheobe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result every thing else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Baker & Hall's drug store. Some 16 of our society young people all girls, knowing that Ed and Edith Corey were expected home Tuesday evening from Providence, R. I., where they have been attending school, decided to have a little picnic for themselves and at the same time give a surprise. They boarded the afternoon train, laden with lunch baskets, hammock, etc., and left the train at Suttons where they repaired to a grove and had a pleasant time till the night train arrived, when they walked in upon the unsuspecting returning ones, taking them completely by surprise. It was a jolly crew. Charlie Bidwell acted as chaperon, and was the envy of all the other men in town.

Sheriff Wilson was investigating matters Monday, but thus far little or no clue has been discovered.

Some 25 or 30 of our base ball enthusiasts attended the game of ball at Adrian Wednesday between the Page Fence Giants and Grand Rapid's league team. It was so loosely played, particularly by the Giants who were not in it at any stage of the game, that most of them were disgusted and yesterday the attendance from here was small. Ben Garlinghouse, Dolph Heesen, Jim Jones and a few others, however, could not stay away and now are glad they did not, as it was a fine game of ball, and though the Giants lost by a score of 6 to 5 yet they put up a gilt edged game.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

EVACUATION DAY.

Proclamation of Gov. Rich with Reference to Detroit's Big Event.

Lansing, June 25.—The following proclamation was issued by Gov. Rich:

"To the people of the state of Michigan: For many years after the cessation of active hostilities between Great Britain and the United States in the revolutionary war the British refused to carry out the terms of the peace and surrender to the Americans the territory they had won, and it was not until the 11th of July, 1796, at Detroit, that the British flag finally ceased to float over any part of the country whose independence had been acknowledged 13 years before.

"It is proposed to recognize the centennial of the evacuation of Detroit by the British, by a celebration at Detroit on the 11th day of next July. The importance of this event to the nation, and especially to the great middle and western states, demands fitting recognition from the executive of the state, and every citizen who can do so is earnestly urged to attend the celebration of the anniversary of this memorable event.

"The definite and final yielding up of this western region gave the federal government the control not only of the great lakes, but eventually of the Mississippi as well, and indeed, in its finality, of all our western territory clear to the Pacific coast.

"On that date the American flag with its 17 stars was first raised over our soil, and its raising meant the speedy founding of the states of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

"With the raising of the flag on July 11, 1796, British domination over any part of our country ceased, the 'rebels' then living here breathed freely, and the way was opened for all the blessings we now enjoy as a part of the United States of America.

"In historic interest and importance no other date in connection with the west is of equal value, for the surrender of Detroit marked the close of the war of the revolution and the final accomplishment of the results fought for by our fathers during so many years, and the date of that event should excite patriotic loyalty in the breast of every member of the commonwealth and be treasured in the memory of every citizen.

"Given under my hand and the great seal of the state, at the capitol, in Lansing, this 24th day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twentieth.

"JOHN T. RICH.

"By the Governor,
"WASHINGTON GARDNER,
"Secretary of State."

TALKS FOR SILVER AND GOLD.

Republican Candidate for Nomination as Governor Speaks at Jackson.

Jackson, June 30.—At the Jackson county republican meeting Monday night ex-Congressman James O'Donnell, one of the leading candidates for the gubernatorial position on the republican ticket, a delegate to St. Louis and publisher of the republican organ in the county, created a genuine surprise by declaring in his speech that he was a bimetallist. He said the currency plank of the republican national convention did not propose to reduce the amount of silver money a single dime, but that it pledged the party to secure an international agreement by which gold and silver would be used as money on some basis yet to be decided. His speech was half free silver and half gold.

War on Saloons.

St. Joseph, June 27.—Charles Smith, Albert Aukli, Gotfried Kolb, Richard Waters, John Kiblin and Frank Seavers were arrested Friday afternoon upon warrants sworn out by women members of the Law and Order league, charging them with having their curtains drawn tight and the blinds of their respective places of business closed Sunday. Some of them have been arrested four times within a month.

Heavily Mortgaged.

Jackson, June 25.—Chattel mortgages aggregating $390,000 have been filed by the Collins Manufacturing company to secure creditors. The Collins company manufacture carts, buggies, etc. Assets are in excess of liabilities, though the amount is not given. The $160,000 of the amount covered by the mortgage is discounted paper with the company's indorsement.

Blaze at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, June 25.—The plant of the Grand Rapids Mattress company burned early Wednesday morning. Loss, $20,000; insurance, $4,000. The fire started from spontaneous combustion.

SOME POSTAL CHANGES.

Salaries of a Number of Postmasters Are Reduced.

Washington, D. C., July 1.—The post office department has made public the change in the classification and salaries of the presidential post offices for the fiscal year beginning to-day. The changes in Michigan are as follows:

Battle Creek advanced from second to first-class; Ironwood and Mount Clemens from third to second-class, and Bangor, Durand and Milan from fourth to third-class; St. Johns relegated from second to third-class and Ewen from third to fourth-class. MOTHER AND SONS ARRESTED.

Charged with Attempting to Poison a Family in West Bay City.

West Bay City, June 30.—Mrs. Victoria Gregg and her two sons, John, aged 17, and Carl, aged 10, are under arrest, charged with conspiring to poison the family of John A. Gregg, from whom Mrs. Gregg is divorced. Little Carl was arrested Monday, and on his testimony the mother and elder brother were apprehended Tuesday. Carl lives with his father and stepmother. The little boy, it is alleged, has been putting poison in the food of the family for two months. First he put sulphur matches in the bread, and on several occasions lately has put tablets in coffee, milk and water used by the family. The divorced wife of the complainant denies the charge. She says it is trumped up to get her out of the way and put the boy in the reform school.

FRANCHISE EXTENDED.

City of Detroit Takes Action Favorable to Street Railway.

Detroit, June 30.—The common council has granted a 30-years' franchise (which is a 16-year extension of its present franchise) to the Fort Wayne & Belle Isle street railway company. The provisions of the franchise are much the same as that under which the Detroit railway is operating. It provides that the company shall sell eight tickets for 25 cents, good from five a. m. until eight p. m., and six tickets for 25 cents from the latter hour until five a. m. The franchise is saddled with some objectionable provisions, one of which requires the company to pay $25,000 towards the expense of opening a new street, and it is believed that the company will not accept it.

SILVER PARTY IS HOPEFUL.

Members in Michigan Working fo the Nomination of Teller.

Lansing, June 27. — Members of the state committee of the independent silver party are confident from the canvass already made that the mass convention to be held in this city July 16 will astonish even the most sanguine of the silver men. They also say that if Teller is nominated at Chicago the delegation to be sent to St. Louis by the Michigan convention will be instructed to favor his indorsement. Otherwise they will be instructed to insist on the nomination of Teller at St. Louis.

AN AERONAUT KILLED.

Disaster to a Balloonist at Grand Rapids, Mich., Proves Fatal.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 29.—Andrew Cole, an aeronaut who has been giving a series of ascensions at North park, fell from his balloon Sunday afternoon and died from the effects of his injuries. The wind was blowing quite hard from the west and hurled his balloon against the corner of a building, dragging him from his trapez. He fell 30 feet, striking on his head and shoulders, breaking his neck.

Will Take a Course in Chicago.

Ann Arbor, June 30.—The two Chinese girl graduates, Ida Kahn and Mary Stone, do not expect to return immediately to their native country, but will do another year of college work, probably at the University of Chicago. In China they will be made part of the staff of one of the hospitals managed by the missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal church. Both speak English with surprising accuracy and fluency.

Crack Shots at Holland.

Holland, June 27.—The tournament of the Michigan trap shooters opened here Friday with a fair attendance. In the state team shoot diamond trophies were given to the winners. The Grand Rapids team won the state championship. Among those from the outside who made good scores were Bush, of Kalamazoo; Schrigley, of Traverse City; Schelling, of Lansing; Walton, of Grand Rapids, and Vaneyck and Karsten, of Zeeland.

Soldiers Testing a New Rifle.

Mount Clemens, July 1.—Preliminary firing began at the encampment of the Nineteenth United States infantry near this city Tuesday. Companies H and I were given five rounds to a man, the distance being 200, 400 and 800 yards. Record firing begins Friday, each man having 20 rounds. The Krag-Jorgensen rifle is the arm used.

May Have Been.

Buchanan, June 27.—The city aldermen by a vote of 6 to 2, granted a license to have a saloon in this city. The pastors of the different churches made a gallant fight, but uphill, against this ordinance. Twice has it passed the board of aldermen, only to be vetoed by the mayor.

PRESIDENT ANGELL HONORED.

Completion of the Twenty-Fifth Year of His Presidency.

Ann Arbor, June 25.—Few men have the good fortune to receive an ovation such as was being tendered Wednesday to President James B. Angell, of the University of Michigan, by the students, faculty and alumni of the institution and prominent educators from all parts of the country, in recognition of the completion of the 25th year of his presidency. In the morning formal exercises were held in University hall. An illuminated parchment, containing an address from the university faculty, was presented to President Angell. Congratulatory speeches were delivered by Dean Murray, of Princeton, Justin Winsor, librarian of Harvard, and Dr. W. T. Harris, United States commissioner of education and president of the University of Illinois. An ode written for the occasion by Charles Mill Gayley, of the University of California, was rendered by the Choral union. In the afternoon a banquet was tendered to President Angell, among the speakers responding to toasts being Presidents Harper, of Chicago university, Rogers, of Northwestern, Speery, of Olivet, and Adams, of Wisconsin, and ex-President Andrew D. White, of Cornell.

TAKEN TO COURT.

Suit Involving $1,000,000 Brought Against a Defunct Gas Company.

Detriot, June 29.—Suit involving $1,000,000 has been brought against the defunct Gas Light company by the Guaranty Trust company, of New York. In an answer filed in the Wayne circuit court the Guaranty company asks that the purchase of the Detroit Gas Light company by the Detroit Gas company be held as fraudulent and void and that a mortgage of $1,000,000 given in payment by the company be declared worthless. The holders of this mortgage are nearly all non-residents of Detroit. They claim that the representations made by the Detroit Gas Light company that it possessed a grant by virtue of the franchise of 1851 were false and fraudulent, because there was a later franchise dated 1861. The Detroit Gas company was forced, by the discovery of the 1861 franchise, to accept terms of compromise by which it sustained great loss and damage.

RUMOR CAUSES A BANK RUN.

Depositors in Jackson Alarmed by a False Report.

Jackson, June 30.—An absurd rumor in connection with the Collins Manufacturing company's filing of mortgages for $390,000 Saturday started a flurry of the savings depositors on the Union bank Monday, and probably $25,000 in small sums was drawn out. The bank is the strongest in the city, and paid out up to eight o'clock in the evening, four hours later than usual. Business men and large depositors put in more than the small ones drew out. The officers say all can have their money as fast as they want it.

CARL WENDEL NOT GUILTY.

The Jury Says He Did Not Murder Little Eva La Frienere.

Menominee, June 30.—Carl Wendel, who has been on trial here for the murder of five-year-old Eva La Frienere at Ishpeming, this state, a year ago, was on Monday afternoon found not guilty, the jury being out less than an hour. Fifty-five witnesses testified in the case, and the expenses of the trial will be very large. Young Wendel is walking around town with his attorney and is the lion of the hour.

Peach Crop Immense.

Niles, June 25.—The first peaches of the year were brought in Wednesday from a large orchard near Fairland. They were fully ripened and above average size. This is the first time in the history of the Michigan peach belt that peaches ever ripened so early. They were fully four weeks ahead of time. The crops also will be the largest ever known. Many thousands of bushels of half-ripened peaches have been taken from the trees to keep the limbs from being broken off.

Died of Lockjaw.

Detroit, June 29.—Eva McDougall, aged seven years, died of lockjaw in the Children's free hospital Sunday morning. The child received two slight cuts a week ago while playing with a wringer. The wounds healed in two days. Last Monday her jaws became set and she had spasms. Anti-tetanic serum was utilized and the disease was seemingly stayed, but Saturday night she had 17 spasms, and Sunday morning at seven o'clock another of five minutes' duration ended her life.

New Silver Organ.

Lansing, June 29.—The projectors of the independent free silver party in Michigan will have an organ in the Lansing Daily Leader, the publication of which will begin this week. It will be an afternoon paper. The capital for the enterprise comes from outside the state. L. C. Stockton, late of Sidney, Neb., will be the editor and D. A. Reynolds, of Lansing, business manager.

Observe Midsummer's Day.

Menominee, June 29.—The Scandinavian societies of Menominee and Marinette celebrated Midsummer's day with a festival at Riverside park. Over 1,500 people took part in the parade. Three bands were in attendance. An interesting programme was given at the park, where at least 7,000 people gathered and took part in the festivities.

Students Stay for Summer School.

Ann Arbor, June 30.—More students than ever before are staying over for the summer session of the university. Nearly 200 are registered so far, all but 30 who are laws being registered in the literary department. The total enrollment is expected to approximate 300.

St. Joseph, June 27.—W. F. Plumsteel, steward of the steamer City of Milwaukee, died Friday of apoplexy. The deceased was 64 years of age and for 14 years had been steward of the northern Michigan line boats.

EAGLES AS GAME DRIVERS.

Sometimes They Enable Gunners to Get Shots at Wild Ducks.

Eagles are sometimes of considerable service to a hunter, and this is especially true of the eagles of the Potomac river at Wide Water, where President Cleveland shoots. According to an American Field writer, eagles on a calm day often give the hunters shots which they would not otherwise get.

The eagle goes flying up and down the stream, and on seeing a flock of ducks goes toward them, hoping to get a cripple, being unable to capture ducks as the peregrine falcon does. When the ducks see the eagle coming they jump into the air and go looking for a safer locality, and this is where the gunner comes in. The gunner's place of concealment in a blind is not nearly so safe as the eagle's vicinity, but the ducks think it is safer till the shot goes through their feathers.

Three or four eagles will keep all the ducks on the move, and the gunners get good sport where they otherwise would not have dirtied their gun barrels. The eagles sometimes steal cripples from the gunner, but the knowing man does not hurt the birds, getting his pay back on calm days.

Bond Proposition Successful.

Benton Harbor, June 25.—A special election was held here to bond the city in the sum of $30,000 for a public park and to aid the proposed tunnel railway. The proposition carried by 600 majority.

Young Patriot Loses an Eye.

Coldwater, June 27.—Friday afternoon Storrs Smith, a boy of ten years, had his right eye blown out with torpedoes while at play.

Mangled by the Cars.

Coldwater, June 27.—Roy Youngs, of this city, fell under the cars at Howard City Friday, cutting off one foot at the ankle.

Killed by Lightning.

Galesburg, June 25.—Edward T. McGolrich, aged 22, was killed by lightning on a farm two miles south of this place.

Dickinson as Counsel.

Detroit, June 30.—News has been received from Washington that Don M. Dickinson had been asked to act as chief counsel for the United States in the arbitration with Great Britain on the Behring sea awards. Mr. Dickinson refused to talk about the matter, but it is believed the report is authentic.

Awarded Heavy Damages.

Marshall, June 26.—In the circuit court Charles Hardigan has recovered a verdict of $10,000 damages against the Michigan Central railroad. Hardigan was stealing a ride at home on a freight train and was forced off the train while it was running at a high rate of speed, run over and lost both legs.

Itching

If there is one thing more than another which gratifies us, it is the great volume of hearty thanks which come from grateful parents for the cures Hood's Sarsaparilla has effected upon their children. The agony of despair turns to unspeakable joy as mothers and fathers see dreadful sores and eruptions gradually yield to the potent purifying power of this great medicine, and bright boys and girls given perfect health. Read this:

"When my baby was four weeks old, scrofulous eczema broke out on his body. He became literally covered with

Sores

When six months old the breaking out healed on his body, but his head, face and arms were a terrible sight. I passed many sleepless nights holding his little hands to keep him from scratching his face. I cannot tell what he suffered with the sores. One doctor attended him a year without avail. No one thought he would ever get well. He was almost a year old when I commenced to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. He soon grew so much better that

I was able to rest at night. Gradually the sores on his head and arms healed, the burning and itching ceased, and he slept better. In 2 months he looked like another child, gained strength, was cured. I recommend all persons afflicted with eczema or any skin disease to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I feel assured that it will do wonders for others. I cannot praise it too highly for what it has done for my

As well as good taste, judgment and the assistance of an artistic tailor may elect. He may take his "tubs" as regularly as the most conscientious water-cure doctor may dictate; but if his digestive organs are out of order, he will have an unwholesome appearance. His complexion and the white of his eyes will have a yellowish cast. His tongue will be coated, appetite poor, his teeth rusty, his breath abominable. He is one big, unmistakable sign of constipation.

Worst of all, his temper is as ugly and unwholesome to deal with as is his person. A man who has least appreciation of what he owes his own friends, to say nothing of himself, will make an effort for health. The quickest, surest, easiest way is to take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are concentrated vegetable purgatives, nothing in the least harmful in their composition. They hunt out all impurities, and "make them go." They are the product of many years' study and practice. Dr. Pierce can afford to put forth a worthless or a spurious article. Send for a free sample, and would know yourself and the Doctor better, send 21 cents in one-cent stamps, to cover wrapping and postage only, and get the Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages profusely illustrated.

Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

"For sometime I had used Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets for constipation with most satisfactory results. The winters have always been very hard on my husband. He too tried the 'Pellets,' and they have made a new man of him. We have used in all, six bottles." Yours truly,

HORTICULTURE

FOR BERRY GROWERS.

Hints on the Propagation of Strawberries and Black Raspberries.

It is not always best to invest too much money in new things. Nowadays, hundreds of new varieties of fruits are being propagated and introduced through the catalogues, describing the characteristics and good qualities of each in such a way that would excite one's curiosity and tempt them to invest. No doubt, though, some of the newer varieties are better than the old ones. But if you desire to try something new, don't "go in too steep;" buy just a few and try them, and if they prove satisfactory, you can make more of the same by propagating them yourself, just the same as the nurserymen.

It is possible to produce 500 to 1,000 strawberry plants from one healthy plant in one season. The plant is put in a very rich bed, deeply trenched and enriched the year previously with all the manure that can be mixed thereon. The plant then set, work the soil about it frequently, but not deep. Remove all the runners that appear at first. As the plant gains strength, permit the runners to remain, and draw them out in all directions from the parent plant, laying a small stone over each where the leaves appear. (See Fig. 1.) When rooted, separate them, set them from four to six feet apart each way, and treat them in the same manner as just described above for the parent plant. Continue this course, watering in time of drought with diluted liquid manure. Soil so rich as that is not desirable for producing fruit, but is just the thing for growing more plants.

Propagating the black raspberry is also easy to perform. If we observe closely the plants in the woods and learn the nature of self-propagation we would be more benefited therefrom. We observe the blackcap, with its long canes drooping the tips to the rich loose ground, where they coil and assume a snakish appearance and send out rootlets into the rich soil, thus forming a new plant. The natural mode of self-propagation is almost unknown in a great many places nowadays, since the woods are being cleared out, as the winds have full sway, swinging the plants to and fro, forbidding them fixing their tips in the ground. Natural conditions have been changed to some extent, and now nature has to be assisted somewhat to fill the deficiency. Just after the fruit has been gathered is the time to commence "layering" your plants. Cultivate the soil very finely and dig little holes two to three inches deep, and bend the tip ends of the canes into them perpendicularly, not slantingly, and cover with dirt to hold them in place. (See Fig. 2.) By following this method attentively it is possible to make above a hundred plants from a vigorous plant in a season.

The red raspberry and blackberry are propagated from the roots sprouting up. It is quite an item to the farmer and fruit grower to understand propagation; they may just have only one plant of a rare variety and increase it to many the same season, thus getting a start very cheaply, even if they do pay a big price for the first one.—S. C. Vaughn, in Farm and Fireside.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

All fruit for market should be handled carefully.

Keep up planting of sweet corn for roasting ears.

The nicer the appearance of fruit the better the price.

The first year after the tree is planted is the time to prune and shape the trees.

For grapes to be of much benefit spraying should be done at least three times.

The best results with liquid manure can be secured by applying it weak but often.

The best results from thinning are secured by doing the work early in the spring.

Coal ashes can be used to good advantage as a mulch around the currant bushes.

When there is a crop of fruit send only the best to market, and have it in good condition.

While no variety of plums is free from curculio, keeping the trees healthy will help materially.

Peach trees suffer most and pear and cherry least from standing in a thick growth of grass.

If pruning is neglected for the first few years the removal of large limbs may be necessary.

If a piece of land is to be planted to small fruits this fall grow some hard crop on it this summer.—St. Louis Republic.

THE CURRANT WORM.

Information Supplied by the Indiana Experiment Station.

A bulletin from the Indiana experiment station says: The currant worm, or, more properly, the gooseberry saw fly, was introduced into this country from Europe about the year 1857, coming, as did the imported cabbage butterfly, by way of Canada. It is probable, however, that it was landed at other points along our eastern coast. Like most of our imported insects, it spread very rapidly, and now it covers the greater portion of the United States.

This fly belongs to the order Hymenopters, which includes the bees, wasps and ants. It is known to entomologists as a kind of connecting link between this order and the Lepidoptera, to which belong the moths and butterflies. The adults make their appearance soon after the leaves of the currant and gooseberry bushes come forth. The female lays her eggs along the principal veins on the under side of the leaf. These hatch in about ten days, and the young larvae may be detected by the minute holes which they have eaten through the leaves. As they approach maturity they become ravenous eaters, soon stripping the bushes of their foliage. They then seek for a secluded place in which to pupate, and in about four or five weeks the second brood makes its appearance and the same process is gone through as before.

Remedy.—The most successful remedy yet discovered for this insect is white hellebore. Dust a little of the powder over the infested bushes while they are damp, either early in the morning or just after a shower. If this is done promptly, before the worms have spread all over the bushes, one or two applications will usually be sufficient.

LARGER PEACHES.

Thinning Out by Hand Is the Best Way to Produce Them.

Mr. J. H. Hale, one of the greatest peach growers in the United States, in speaking of the manner in which he makes a success of the business, is reported as saying that one must thin by hand. He puts stepladders under the trees and puts boys on them whose bump of destructiveness is large and tells them to go ahead. He begins when the peaches are three-quarters of an inch in diameter and takes everything that is curculio-stung and diseased. These he carts away and burns. The rest that are taken off are dropped on the ground and left there.

In future, he says, three or four-year-old peach trees shall not bear over 250 peaches; four or five-year-old trees not over 300, and full-grown trees not over 500. That means six inches apart; 500 peaches on a tree will make six or eight baskets of fancy fruit. Three thousand peaches to a tree won't make more or sell for more money, and the trees are ruined.

Peach trees are planted on a good ordinary corn or wheat land in a fair state of fertility. The holes for the trees are dug about twice as large as necessary to receive the roots and a big handful of fine ground bone is scattered at the bottom of the hole and two or three more on the dirt, and that is worked in around the roots at the time the tree is planted. Then is put on muriate of potash. The next year is broadcasted from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds per acre of fine ground bone and from 400 to 800 pounds of muriate of potash or its equivalent, and this is kept up every year whether the trees bear or not. "It is pretty liberal feeding, but it pays to be liberal with trees," says Mr. Hale. —Western Rural.

butter, eggs and other small articles can be placed on these shelves, and reached instantly without disturbing other articles, which is not at all the case when the package opens at the top.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Thinning Out Garden Crops.

Few practices are more profitable than thinning out garden crops. If the knowledge of the proper sowing of seeds was more widely prevalent no thinning would be needed, but so many persons sow the seeds fearing that numbers will fail to grow, and therefore many more seeds are used than is necessary. But sometimes all these superfluous seeds grow, in which case it is desirable that they should be thinned. Not only do the vegetable plants grow larger under these circumstances, but in many cases they come earlier into use.—Rural World.

Irrigation in Horticulture.

Irrigation as applied to horticulture was discussed at great length before the late meeting of the Kansas State Horticultural society. Delegates from the western part of the state as well as others dwelt at length upon the possibilities of garden and orchard irrigation from wells. The underflow is very strong and almost inexhaustible. Orchards of ten to 100 acres are quite common, and the owners are prosperous and contented. Young men are urged to acquire such homes. This season more farms are being equipped with irrigation outfits than ever before.—American Agriculturist.

TURNING GRAY AND THREATENED WITH BALDNESS

The Danger is Averted by Using

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

The editor of the Petersburg Sun took a vacation last Saturday. Fished, viewed the crops, and returned full of gratitude that Petersburg had survived his absence.

From the cartoons and editorials of the Detroit Tribune it looks very much as if it was not for McKinley, nor for Teller, nor for Boies, but for Sale.—Monroe Democrat.

The Morenci Observer says that J. L. O'Meeley, of Adrian, will relate how the Irish discovered America, at the celebration at Hudson on the Fourth. Like was an eye witness, and with his native eloquence he will make a speech worth hearing.—Adrian Times.

Prof. and Mrs. E. D. Walker, of Dubuque, Ia., are here to spend a portion of their vacation with their parents Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Crittenden.—Saline Observer. Prof. Walker is a nephew of S. J. Walker, of Tecumseh, and spent most of his school-boy days here.

This morning Sheriff Wilson received word by telephone that a burglary had been committed near Tecumseh. While the people were at church yesterday, the house was entered and two watches and some other jewelry taken. He went out to investigate.—Adrian Telegram.

In speaking of the other candidates the Morenci Observer has the following to say about H. W. Stevens: "Hank" Stevens would like to. The Tecumseh man has a soldier record behind him, is one of Wilson's deputies, is an individual of military appearance, and is well thought of in his home town.

The Gazette cannot agree with the Detroit Tribune on the money question, but we do admire its courage in coming out boldly, without fear or favor, for a principal they conscientiously believe to be right. People have very little regard for a newspaper that is afraid to express its candid opinion on an important question.—Hudson Gazette.

The Addison Courier comes to the Herald table this week with a beautifully engraved cover, and looking in "all at home" clothes, as neat as a new pin. The meaning of all this is a celebration of its 12th birthday. Hereafter the paper will be a five column quarto, printed all at home and certainly is one of the best papers printed in this section. Much more success to our neighbor is the wish of the Herald.

Edward DePuy was quite seriously cut and bruised while working in a binder Tuesday morning. Some straw had become tangled, and as he was endeavoring to pull them out the machine started a little and his left hand was caught in the machinery, and the left arm and wrist badly cut and torn. Dr. Sheeder, with some difficulty, replaced the parts together as best he could and Mr. D. is now doing as well as can be expected.—Saline Observer.

The Detroit Tribune has, in fact, deserted the republican party. It is no longer, in name even, the organ of that party in Michigan. Owned by a man who also publishes the free trade whacking News, it has never been under the Scripps management the recipient of confidence of the Wolverine republics and its present attitude is no surprise. The Detroit Journal is a good enough paper for the average advocate of McKinley and republican ideas.—Detroit Observer.

Last week Wednesday, a stranger went to Knapp & Jones' shop and rented a Lady's "Record" bicycle, saying he wished to go to the lake. On returning at the proper time they sent enquiries to the lake to ascertain if the fellow had been there and found that he had checked the wheel to Van Wert, Ohio. Thursday morning Mr. Knapp and Mort Kane, who were the only ones who could identify the thief, went to Van Wert to try and get a trace of him, but finding that he had shipped the wheel to Cincinnati, they returned to Hudson without making any further attempts to capture the thief.—Hudson Gazette.

We were permitted to read a letter from R. J. W. Bowen to C. Tuttle who he assumed wrote the item in last week's issue relative to the present condition of the C. T. Line. Mr. Bowen's attempt to explain his motive or justify his haste in taking down poles, cutting the line and making other changes which lessen the general usefulness of the line fails to satisfy the familiar with the facts. As Mr. Bowen's present relation to the line is simply that of one of five directors, his aim to have the right to cut the line and his declared intention to take down such poles as he thinks unsafe will be watched with interest, especially as everything he has done on the Clinton loop the past month has lessened its usefulness, caused trouble and expense and seemed prompted by haste so unnecessary as to appear malicious. If the court does not happen to agree with Mr. Bowen, he may think it advisable to repair the line where his zeal for a general good (?) prompted him to tear down.—Clinton Local.

The sad news was received here Saturday evening of the death at Petoskey, at 4 o'clock that afternoon, of Miss Mabel Critchell, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour P. Critchell. At the suggestion of the family physician, coupled with the invalid's earnest desire, Miss Critchell was taken north by her mother two weeks ago, in the hope of arresting the progress of the dread disease, consumption, which developed from a decline that became apparent nearly eight years ago. The patient was greatly fatigued by the journey, but she rallied somewhat after a few day's rest, and bid fair to be benefitted by the change of air and scene. On Wednesday, however, the frail invalid experienced a relapse, since which time she failed rapidly. The father, accompanied by Mr. A. A. Wooten, left for Petoskey Saturday night, returning Monday morning with the remains and the bereaved mother. The funeral was held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the home of Wm. Critchell, 27 College avenue.—Adrian Times.

Some of our exchanges are publishing an item which merely states that Hudson has 100 widows. We object to the matter being treated in such a cold manner. It would be much nicer, and would also be true, if the papers would say that Hudson has nearly two hundred as nice widows as there are in Dixie. That they are good looking, smart, accomplished, and splendid cooks and housekeepers. That most of them are willing to build fires in the morning, and that they always mind their own business. Write it something in the style brother editors, and possibly in a short time there will be lots of widows in Hudson.—Hudson Post.

H. E. Buckley, a Chicago capitalist, will build a railroad to connect Elkhart and Jackson, Mich. He has associated Michigan and Indiana capitalists with him in the project. The road, which is to be built as far as Adamsville, Cass Co., will be completed at once, the survey having been made and a part of the right of way secured. The road will be operated in connection with the Elkhart & Western, which runs from Elkhart to Jackson, and has accumulated a large surplus fund, and pays [illegible] per cent. Buckley is president of the [illegible] Indiana system.

DOGS AS CHURCH GOERS.

[illegible] Wrote Concerning Dogs in Colonial Days.

The principal disturbers of the peace in the colonial meeting-house were dogs, says William Root Bliss in "Glimpses from the Colonial Meeting-House." They seem to have been regular attendants at the Sunday services and of necessity were placed under discipline.

At New London (1662) one of the duties of the sexton was "to order youth in the meeting-house and beat out dogs." At Charlestown (1666) a man was hired at four pounds a year "to ring the bell to meetings and to keep out dogs in meeting time." At Dedham (1674) a man was paid eight shillings a year "for keeping dogs out in meeting time and shutting the door."

Andover did not object to dogs, but made them pay for the privilege of coming to meeting. The law of this town (1672) said: "Whatsoever dogs shall be in the meeting-house on the Sabbath day the owner thereof shall pay sixpence for every time."

The dog law of Redding (1662) was peculiar. It runs thus: "Every dog that comes to the meeting, either of Lord's day or lecture day, except it be their dogs that pays for a dog-whipper, the owner of those dogs shall pay sixpence for every time they come to the meeting that doth not pay the dog-whipper."

Twenty-six men wrote their names, or made their marks, in the Redding records, agreeing to "pay the dog-whipper" to whip other people's dogs out of meeting, while their dogs remained and were recognized as members of the congregation in regular standing.

DOG AND COW.

A Remarkable Instance of Affection Between Animals.

A remarkable instance of affection between a dog and a cow is related by a by a well-known suburbanite. His little black Scotch terrier became infatuated with a small Jersey cow in his neighborhood, and every morning he would run off to the pasture where his bovine sweetheart was kept. He would slip out the side way and walk along with the cow. He often missed his breakfast and often did not taste a mouthful all day. When she munched grass by the roadside, he patiently sat on his haunches until she moved along. Sometimes he was confined at home to break up the habit, but as soon as he was released, off he would go at a full run for the pasture, singling out his love from the herd of cattle and following close at her heels. He would jump up and kiss her in the mouth, lick her feet, and show signs of greatest joy when he came to her. While the cow on her part did not appear to appreciate his attentions, she did not hook him away. Finally, the family grew tired of keeping a dog that remained away during the day and only came home for his supper and to spend the night, and gave him to persons living some distance in the country. The cow, who had never seemed to notice any of his demonstrations of affection, missed his companionship when he was gone. For she would come to his former home at evening, put her head over the palings and low. She did this at intervals for several months.

A Great Increase.

Washington, June 29.—According to official statistics just issued by the director of the geological survey the total value of the mineral products of the United States for 1895 increased over $50,000,000 beyond the value for 1894, or from $527,368,594 to $617,795,290. This increase is considered a long step towards recovery from the depression to which the mineral industry like all others has been subjected.

Values Adjusted.

Washington, July 1.—Mr. Preston, the director of the mint, has adjusted the values at which foreign coins are to be received by United States customs officers during the next quarter. The values are increased on a basis of $0.68769 per ounce of silver, as against $0.68207 on April 1, 1896.

Joliet's Growth.

Joliet, Ill., July 1.—The new city directory gives a great increase in population in this city. It has 15,572 names, 1,289 more names than any previous directory, and placing the population at 40,000. There are 7,000 houses, of which 93 are vacant.

His hands are tied up in a bag containing fire ants for two hours. If he bears unmoved the torture of their stings he is considered qualified to cope with the nagging and daily jar and fret of married life. Such a man would make an admirable husband. He would not be upset by the thoughts of a spring bonnet, or grow irritable every time the steak was undone. The idea of having a patience trial for those about to marry is a good idea that civilized people might adopt.

CAVE DWELLERS.

The Haunt of the Rat on the Colorado River.

A party of hunters have just returned to civilization after a trip along the Colorado river. One of them, Capt Hurd, tells of an interesting discovery they made. One morning they rose about daylight to take advantage of a long day in which to make a desired excursion. As they passed among the timber on the steep and rocky side of a canyon, they suddenly came upon a big dead tree, every limb of which was literally covered with bats of varying sizes. There were hundreds and thousands hanging to the wood.

But as the hunters watched a curious sight was revealed. There was a hole in the trunk of the tree, and one after another the bats released their hold on the limbs and disappeared in it. They moved in with great regularity and speed, but more than an hour was consumed before all had disappeared. It was evident to the interested watchers that there was not room within the tree trunk for one-tenth of all the bats which had entered, so they determined to cut the tree down and discover the secret. When the tree was felled a cave was found underneath, and in this the thousands of bats found refuge by day. A match dropped in the mouth of the cave brought the inmates out in great numbers.—Philadelphia Press.

COULD NOT PAY HIS FARE.

Rothschild Was Once Placed at the Mercy of an Omnibus Driver.

Baron Rothschild was once caught in a predicament that many people experience daily, and that is getting into a conveyance of some kind and then not having the money to pay the fare. The driver of the omnibus into which Rothschild entered, says Harper's Round Table, demanded his fare, and the baron, feeling in his pockets, discovered that he had no change. The driver was very angry. "What did you get in it for if you had no money?" "I am Baron Rothschild," exclaimed the great capitalist, "and here is my card." The driver scornfully tossed the card away. "Never heard of you before," said he, "and don't want to hear of you again. What I want is your fare." The banker was in great haste. "Look here, I've an order for a million," he said; "give me the change." And he proffered a coupon for that amount. The driver stared and the passengers laughed. Fortunately a friend of the baron entered the omnibus at the moment, and, taking in the situation, immediately paid the fare. The driver, realizing his mistake and feeling remorseful, said to the baron: "If you want ten francs, sir, I don't mind lending them to you on my own account."

The Dewfall in Britain.

Wells estimates the total annual deposit of dew on the British isles as being in the neighborhood of five inches, or about one-seventh of the total amount of moisture received from the atmosphere. This means 22,161,337,365 tons of dew a year, reckoning the ton at 252 imperial gallons.

WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

Ruins of the House Inhabited by the Virgin Mary.

The pope and the cardinals are much interested in the discovery made by Father Esbrasch, superior of the French seminary in Rome, during his recent journey in the east with Father Paulinus, superior of the Lazarist community at Symrna. The reported discovery, says the London Standard, is that of the ruins of the house inhabited by the Blessed Virgin and St. John, after the ascension of Christ.

This house, it appears, was not situated at Jerusalem, as has hitherto been generally believed, but at a place three miles from Ephesus, where the site is located in the book containing the revelations of Anne Catherine of Emmerich, a German nun, the account of whose visions of the various scenes of Christ's Passion has been published in most European languages.

Fathers Esbrasch and Paulinus found that the site indicated by Anne Catherine of Emmerich is known to the peasants as Peneghia Capouli, signifying "Place of the Virgin," and that the locality exactly corresponds with the description given in the nun's book.

They Wear Paste Gems.

A curious fact concerning the festivities over the coronation of the czar is the enormous impetus it has given to the manufacture of paste gems. Russians, it appears, even of rank and status, are prone to the weakness known as kleptomania, and wise women prepared for possible loss by substituting sham jewels for real. A pageant and display such as has been described must inevitably call for the wearing of such gems as are seldom seen. It is rather amusing to learn that much of the splendor is pretense, and that, too, because the grand dames do not dare trust their treasures in a crush, even though the crowd is composed of their own kind. Among the Muscovites, however, the sin is said to be held a trifling one, and the story is told that one lady of high rank was caught appropriating her cousin's emeralds, and that victim declined to prosecute, merely saying: "Poor Sophie! It is a very painful and nervous disorder."

KELLOGG'S AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS.

The successful employment of mixed paints for residences, buildings, etc., is at last made possible by the use of an honestly made article, The Kellogg Paint Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., have built a world wide reputation on their AGED LINSEED OIL PAINTS. They are honestly made of the purest pigments and are mixed in Calcutta or India Flax Seed Oil, aged and settled, which imparts a beautiful varnish-like gloss which is permanent and lasting. Thousands of hotels, residences, and public buildings throughout the United States have been painted with these mixed paints with the best of satisfaction to their owners. Their enormous works at Buffalo are kept running night and day to supply the demand their excellent products merit. Having distributing points conveniently located throughout the country, the agencies are supplied on short notice, and parties who are interested in the subject of house painting, would do well to consider the matter and not buy paints of uncertain quality, and often inferior grades. If your local dealer does not handle Kellogg's BEST MIXED PAINTS, insist on his getting them for you or send direct to their distributing agents, where convenient cards with the shades displayed in great varieties are kept in quantities, together with complete information and full directions for the selection of proper shades and combinations. Open Letter.

My Friend—

Like others I need money to do a cash business with, and if you owe me I will consider it a great favor if you will come in and pay me now without my being to the expense of mailing to you statement or spending my time to come and see you.

It costs considerable to see each one when you have a large number on your books, and you ought not to expect me to do it. I give credit as a favor, and hope you will bring me the cash now.

If you can not pay all cash now, bring what you can and settle by note till you are able to meet it.

You certainly can do this and expecting you will, I thank you in advance. Yours truly,

A STEAMER SINKS.

The Arago Is Wrecked in a Fog Off the Oregon Coast.

Four Passengers and Nine of the Crew Lose Their Lives—A Brief Story of a Terrible Battle with the Waves.

Marshfield, Ore., Oct. 21.—The Oregon Coal & Navigation company's steamship Arago, Capt. Reed, was wrecked Tuesday morning on the Coos bay bar and four passengers and nine members of the crew were drowned. The vessel was endeavoring to enter the harbor at Empire City and the engines were slowed down while the bar was being crossed. A strong tide-rip carried the vessel on the submerged rocks of the partially-constructed government jetty. She struck so hard that a hole was knocked in her bottom directly under the engine room, and a few seconds later the vessel sank in eight fathoms of water. The deckhouses and upper works were carried away, as were also the life rafts and boats. In the midst of the confusion the passengers and crew clung to whatever debris they could reach. Two boats were captured, and into these 18 persons climbed, leaving the captain and five of the crew clinging to the rigging, which was still above water. For two hours the boats endeavored to make land through the breakers. A huge wave capsized one of them and all of its nine occupants were drowned. The other boat was finally piloted safely into the bay and the life-saving crew notified. With much difficulty the captain and remaining seamen were removed from the rigging, which was rapidly being submerged. Three seamen afterward floated ashore in safety on life rafts, and all the passengers and crew are now accounted for.

SATOLLI SAYS ADIEU.

Large Delegation of Distinguished Persons See the Cardinal Off.

New York, Oct. 19.—After a long sojourn in this country as apostolic delegate from the see of Rome, Cardinal Satolli bade adieu to America Saturday. He was a passenger, sailing for Genoa, on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II. A large party of eminent churchmen and laymen, distinguished in every walk of life, including Archbishop Corrigan and the Suffargan bishops of the province; 100 Catholic clergymen of the city and vicinity; Rev. Brother Justin, president of Manhattan college; the college faculty, and over 1,000 of the leading Catholic citizens of New York accompanied his eminence down the bay as far as the Narrows on the steamer Valley Girl.

RAMBUSCH KILLS HIMSELF.

Absconding Wisconsin Banker Commits Suicide in Virginia.

Juneau, Wis., Oct., 21.—A dispatch was received here Tuesday night from the coroner of Fredericksburg, Va., stating that W. T. Rambusch, the absconding banker of this city, had committed suicide there. The dispatch asked what disposition should be made of the body. Instructions were at once sent to forward the body to this place for burial. Rambusch was engaged in banking and the abstract business. He disappeared on October 10, and forgeries amounting to between $300,000 and $500,000 have come to light. The total amount of his irregularities is not known.

Found Guilty.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 19.—William Harris was found guilty of murder in the second degree, the jury returning the verdict at 11 o'clock Saturday night. Harris, on the evening of September 7, killed George Frank, stabbing him seven times in the abdomen. The murder was committed on a leading business corner and Harris was so drunk at the time that he had no recollection of the act afterwards. The trial lasted a week. The penalty is anywhere from ten years to life imprisonment.

B. F. Foster Dead.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 20. — B. F. Foster, grand secretary of the grand lodge of odd fellows, died at his home in this city Monday morning. Benjamin J. Foster, was born January 28, 1820, and had held the office of grand secretary for 25 years. He was state librarian during Gov. Morton's term and was a warm personal friend of the war governor. Dropsy of the heart was the cause of death.

Death of a Pioneer Minister.

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 19, — Rev. George Stevens, former presiding elder of the Jacksonville and Bloomington districts of the Methodist church, died Saturday, aged 82. He was a brother-in-law of Gen. John M. Palmer and was one of the few remaining pioneers of Methodism in the west.

Fate of a Somnambulist.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Benjamin A. Crisler, 81 years old, while walking in his sleep Sunday morning fell from a third-story window. He died a few hours later. Frequently during 20 years he had walked in his sleep, but had never before met with an accident.

Havana, Oct. 21.—Arcano Sanaoria, a prisoner of war who had been convicted of incendiarism, was shot Tuesday at Matanzas.

There is no mistaking Hanna's position on the labor question. He stands with his foot firmly planted on labor's throat.

SCHNAUBELT DEAD.

Haymarket Bomb-Thrower Expires at San Bernardino, Cal.

San Bernardino, Cal., Oct. 20.—Rudolph Schnaubelt, the fierce visaged anarchist who threw the Haymarket bomb in Chicago and for whose apprehension the police machinery of the world has been in motion ever since, is dead. The end of his long flight and years of hiding ended Monday in this little town in southern California. Consumption, a better trailer and worse foe than the authorities for law and order, found him out.

[Schnaubelt was one of the first men arrested with Lingg, Spies and Schwab, May 5, 1886, after the great riot in Chicago. For ten hours the police kept him in the sweat box, but his nerves stood the test and they let him go. He took immediate advantage of this, for he disappeared as completely as if he had dropped into the lake. In ten hours more the police wanted him badly, but could not trace him. He was reported in Central America and all over the world, but was never captured. There never has been any doubt in Chicago police circles that it was Schnaubelt who threw the bomb. All the evidence pointed to him as the chief tool of the leading conspirators, and it has never been controverted or strongly denied. The testimony on the trial, summed up, went to show that Lingg made the bomb, that Spies lighted the fuse with a match while standing in the alley opening on the Haymarket square, and that Schnaubelt threw the bomb into the ranks of the police.]

WHEAT SOARING.

Prices Continue to Advance with Great Rapidity.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—In the midst of a scene of wild excitement, such as veteran traders recall in war times, December wheat opened on the Chicago board of trade Monday anywhere from 78½ to 79½ cents, after closing officially Saturday at 75⅞ cents. It was an average three-cent jump to begin the furore with, and in its startling suddenness and effect it came like a bomb in the pit. Eighty-cent wheat was missed by a quarter of a cent only, the top notch of this sensational session being 79¾ cents. But the market was not all upwards. It oscillated between Saturday's closing price and the top, reacted to 78⅛ cents, then went to 79¾ cents and flashed all around this point with a bewildering assortment of changes. The December future broke towards the close, the last official price being 77½ cents, but that was 1½ cents above Saturday's closing.

HOTEL BURNED.

Its Owner Arrested for Setting Fire to the Place.

St. Louis, Oct. 20.—The Farmyard Hotel, a roadhouse halting place between the city and country, at Geyer avenue and Broadway, was burned Monday morning, together with five horses, a lot of wagons and buggies and a large amount of feed. Premises adjoining were damaged to the sum of $5,000. The total loss is $17,000. Three servants were injured by jumping from windows. A wagon once owned by Gen. Grant and lately used for advertising purposes, was burned. Frank Schwab, owner of the hotel, has been arrested on a charge of firing the place.

Death of a Millionaire.

New London, Conn., Oct. 19.—Hon. Jonathan Newton Harris, aged 81 and one of the best-known men in New England, died Sunday of heart disease. Mr. Harris was a millionaire, having made a fortune by a patent medicine. In 1851 he formed a copartnership with J. L. Harris & Co., of Cincinnati, O., controlling the sale of certain patent medicines west of the Allegheny mountains. Mr. Harris has given large sums to churches and for educational purposes, including $100,000 to found a school of science at Kioto, Japan.

Heavy Registration in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—The second and last day of registration in Chicago showed, according to a conservative estimate, that at least 85,000 names had been placed upon the books when the polls closed at nine o'clock Tuesday night. Over 293,000 registered on the first day—the 13th of this month—making a total number of voters registered about 380,000.

Illinois Mine on Fire.

Gillespie, Ill., Oct. 19. — Fire broke out near the airshaft in the Consolidated Coal company's mine at this place Friday night and is doing great damage. An attempt is being made to smother it by sealing the mine. The men all escaped, but 12 mules perished. The top works are probably safe, but a long shut-down will be necessary.

Quits the Field.

St. Louis, Oct. 20.—Mr. O. D. Jones, populist candidate for governor of Missouri, handed his resignation as a candidate to the populist state committee and it was accepted, and Lon Stevens, the democratic candidate, was indorsed.

Twenty Drown in a Wreck.

Lisbon, Oct. 19.—The Portuguese bark Venus, Capt. Pino, hailing from this port, which sailed from Cardiff on October 1 for Lisboa, foundered in a gale on October 9 off Skomer island. Twenty persons were drowned.

New York's Registration.

New York, Oct. 21.—According to the official figures of the election bureau, which were made public Tuesday, the total registration in this city for the four days is 330,976.

The Record Still Stands.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 21.—John R. Gentry failed to beat the world's record and made the mile in 2:04½. The wind was strong and it was cold. The first half was in one minute.

HELD UP A TOWN.

Six Bandits Plunder the Village of Carney, O. T.

Store, Hotel, Post Office and Shops Robbed of Their Valuables—Telephone Wires All Cut to Prevent Interference.

Guthrie, O. T., Oct. 19. — Saturday night at ten o'clock the town of Carney, 30 miles west of here, was attacked by bandits, all heavily armed, masked and well mounted. The robbers entered with a flourish of arms and oaths and at once attacked the store of J. H. Fouts, the largest merchant in the city. Before entering the town the bandits cut the telephone wires between Carney and Chandler in order to prevent interference with their evidently prearranged plans. Carney is a town of 300 people and contains a general merchandise store, hotel, post office, blacksmith shop, stables and dwelling houses. Only Fouts and his son were in the store when the robbers rushed in and threw their guns on them. The chief of the outlaws commanded Fouts to open his safe. He quickly complied and handed over $800 in cash to the bandits. Two of the robbers then bound and gagged Fouts and his son and carried them two miles out of town. Meanwhile the other robbers attacked the hotel and post office, but got nothing in the latter place. In the hotel three drummers and two citizens were relieved in all of $500 in money, watches and jewelry. At the United States marshal's office the opinion prevails that the gang is headed by "Dynamite Dick," pal of the late Dalton and Doolin.

TRAGEDY IN ST. LOUIS.

A Peddler Kills His Divorced Wife and Himself.

St. Louis, Oct. 20.—William Huttinger, a peddler, shot and killed Mrs. Mary Kerstinger Monday night and then shot and killed himself. The double tragedy occurred at 1803 Arsenal street, where Mrs. Kerstinger was visiting. Fourteen years ago the two were married and lived together but a short time when the woman got a divorce. She has been married twice since then. Kerstinger, her present husband, is part owner in an omnibus line in Peoria, Ill., and is there now. Ever since the couple separated, Huttinger has followed the woman and persecuted her. They met by accident when their old quarrel was renewed. The shooting occurred on the veranda of the boarding-house.

REMOVED.

Political Activity Causes the Dismissal of a United States Official.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Henry D. Clayton, United States district attorney for the middle district of Alabama, has been summarily removed from office by the president. Mr. Clayton was a delegate to the Chicago convention, and is now a candidate for congress from the Second district of Alabama. Early this month Attorney-General Harmon informed Clayton that his candidacy was interfering with his official duties. In reply, Mr. Clayton declined to admit his running for congress was inconsistent with his office. The correspondence was laid before the president. Saturday Attorney-General Harmon telegraphed Clayton notice of his removal from office by the president.

Accidentally Killed.

Cresco, Ia., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Grace Dunoon Farnsworth was accidentally killed by a bullet from a rifle in the hands of her husband Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Farnsworth had been changing cartridges and in snapping the barrel to place the rifle was discharged, the bullet entering his wife's forehead between the eyes. Death was almost instantaneous.

Three Sailors Drowned.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 20.—The sealing schooner St. Lawrence, which arrived Monday after a nine months' cruise off the coast of Japan, in which she secured 8,000 sealskins, reports that on August 5 three members of the crew, John Juan, of Seattle; James McNutt, of Juneau, and Fred Williams, of Sitka, Alaska, were washed overboard and drowned.

Bankers Assign.

West Point, Ga., Oct. 21.—W. C. and L. Lanier, bankers, assigned Tuesday morning. Failure to realize on securities, depreciation in the value of assets and the general business depression are said to be the causes of the failure. Liabilities and assets unknown.

Struck by a Fast Train.

Elgin, Ill., Oct. 20.—Charles Hill, an old engineer on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, while oiling his engine at Spalding Monday morning, was struck by a fast train and instantly killed. The body was thrown 100 feet and terribly mangled.

Aged Journalist Dead.

Superior, Wis., Oct. 17.—Silas G. Sherburne, one of the oldest newspaper men in the northwest, died here of heart failure Friday. Mr. Sherburne was at one time connected with the Chicago Times under the Storey regime.

Colby, Kan., Oct. 21. — Charles F. Flickenger, a farmer living near here, shot his wife and then hanged himself. Brooding over financial losses unbalanced his mind.

A Centenarian Registers.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Abraham Sanford, aged 100 years and 8 months, was among the voters who registered in this city.

Minnie Glasgow, of Tecumseh, was the guest of Mrs. Frank Anglemeyer the latter part of the week.

Robert Woodard left for Lacon, Ill., Thursday of last week, having promise of work in the woolen mill at that place.

The McKinley club have opened club rooms over the Clinton Provision Company's market and have very pleasant quarters.

Frank D. Lancaster recently purchased, at Jackson, a fine standard bred pacer. Individually he is a fine model and very speedy.

Mrs. E. VanDeMark returned home last Friday, after a six weeks' visit at Chicago, Hammond, Ind., and Paw Paw, this state. She reports a grand time.

Mrs. E. M. English has moved into the upper rooms of what is known as the Belding house, on West Chicago street, but which is now owned by herself.

Mrs. Fred Schoen, of Bridgewater station, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tagg, last week. Amelia kept house for her while she was here.

E. S. Tate made a trip into Ohio on his wheel last week. While gone he visited Canton, Ohio, and called on Wm. McKinley. The interview was very pleasant. Bert reached home the last of the week.

John J. White made a business trip to Norvell Monday. Mr. White is receiving many orders for suits and overcoats from the surrounding towns. He carries a fine line of samples and his work is of the best quality.

Ed Clark and Henry Lancaster have dissolved there business relations so far as the livery business is concerned. Last Friday Henry rembved his part of the stock to his own barn and henceforth will conduct his own livery.

Will and James Eagan, of Grand Rapids, came the last of the week and several days were spent among their old friends. Will is studying law and teaching German in Grand Rapids and Jim is selling cash registers for the Dayton Company in Wisconsin. The boys are always welcome.

Saturday afternoon the silverites raised as fine a hickory pole, 98 feet high, as can be found anywhere. The weather was raw and disagreeable, still there was a large crowd present and everything passed off pleasantly and successfully. The pole bears 16 silver bands and 1 gold one and a fine Bryan and Sewall banner waves in the breeze. Quite a number of the county nominees were present and some strong and stirring speeches were made in the hall. J. W. Helme and Clem Bramble, both of whom are thoroughly posted on the currency question presented the subject in an eloquent, impressive and argumentative manner. They are both pleasing speakers and make staunch friends wherever they go. The occasion was one to be remembered.

D. St. John and wife visited Tecumseh Monday.

Mrs. J. L. Barker arrived here Wednesday from Bridgeport, Vermont, expecting to spend the winter with her sister, Mrs. A. C. Huntington.

Rev. and Mrs. D. H. Ramsdell, Mrs. Will Wood and Mrs. Thos. VanGieson went to Morenci Thursday to attend a foreign missionary convention.

D. H. Davis is gaining great reputation as a cartoonist. He has recently produced some original cartoons of great merit. He made a fine crayon of Wm. J. Bryan, which he gave to C. D. Keyes, that is a masterpiece.

The 26 tickets sold at this point for the Bryan special Friday does not fully represent Clinton's delegation to that general outpouring of all classes to see and hear the people's candidate, Wm. J. Bryan, at Jackson, Friday. Several used their mileage on the special, some drove, others wheeled, and eight took the noon train, swelling the number to about 50. They feel well repaid for all sacrifices made.

Saturday, while the silverites were raising their pole on the corner of Jackson and East Chicago streets, the republicans ran out on a rope stretched across the street from Hause's store to Freese's, a large American flag with pictures of McKinley & Hobart attached. It was done as a slur to the silver men. It was not a courteous thing to do and was denounced as such by many republicans. Such things will do their cause no good.

FRANKLIN.

One of our farmers is sowing wheat this week.

The republican rally at Tipton was a success and well attended.

Mr. Hunt of Adrian, sent a fine piano out to G. W. Allen's Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Deming, of Adrian, visited at Aunt Anna Allen's Saturday.

Several of our young men rode over to Clinton Saturday to help raise the free silver pole.

Mrs. Lorenzo Billington and Miss Ella Munger drove to Ypsilanti Saturday, returning Monday.

Come out to the Lyceum at Seth Simmon's tomorrow night and take part in the free silver debate.

The mutual benefit association will meet at Frank Bradley's, October 30th, Mr. Crowel Eddy is president of the society.

A load of people from the free silver club of Tipton drove to Jackson Friday to hear Bryan speak. They were more or less fortunate—generally less—in getting a glimpse of him through the immense crowds that thronged the streets. One lucky lady succeeded in getting a fine view of the back of the great man's hat. Those that heard him speak are enthusiastic in his praise.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

GOLD DEPARTMENT.

FALL OF PRICES.

NOT DUE TO APPRECIATION OF GOLD, BUT TO CHEAPER COST OF PRODUCTION.

David A. Wells Discusses Cause of Fall In Prices—Compares Jasper's "Sun Do Move" Theory With Silverites' Gold Has Appreciated Theory—Measured by Price of Labor, Gold Is Depreciating.

The Hon. David A. Wells, author of "Recent Economic Changes," and the greatest American authority on the cause of falling prices, has a full page article on this subject in the New York Tribune of Sept. 7. He finds that there has been a universal fall in prices, averaging 30 or 40 per cent. since 1873, but that it is only in this country that the fall is attributed to the demonetization of silver. Continuing, he says in part:

Granting, as every intelligent person must, that the recent universal decline in prices cannot be due to any local agency, but must be attributed to some universal influence, it is claimed that such an influence is to be found in an appreciation in the value or purchasing power of gold, owing to its limited and insufficient supply, and also that this decline in prices followed the so called demonetization of silver in some countries, and the closing of the mints in other countries to its coinage.

The appreciation of gold, helped by an alleged enforced scarcity of silver, and a decline in price seem, therefore, to stand to each other in the relation of cause and effect, and the cause of the advocates of silver has accordingly at the outset much of plausibility. But plausibility is not proof, nor assumption truth, as is strikingly illustrated by the claim of the Rev. Jasper, pastor of the First colored church in Richmond, Va., that "the sun do move," and the earth "do stand still," and who has more of seeming facts in support of his faith than can be adduced by the advocates of the gold appreciation theory—for cannot everybody with eyes see the sun move up every morning in the east and move down every evening in the west? And if the earth moves 19 miles every second, as the astronomer bugs tell us, would not every movable thing fly off its surface as mud does from a revolving carriage wheel? And as nothing does fly off, is it not certain that the earth stands still?

Investigation in the case of the Rev. Jasper and the advocates of the gold appreciation theory will, however, lead to different conclusions. It is to be noted, in the first place, that the advocates of the latter theory, in stating what they assert to be the truth, never express themselves other than generally, in all that has been written or spoken in support of the gold theory on either side of the Atlantic.

No one has ever been able to name a single commodity that has notably declined in price within the last 30 years and satisfactorily proved, or even attempted to prove, that such decline was due to the appreciation of gold. And the reason for such default is that it cannot be done.

On the other hand, not a single commodity that has notably declined in price within this time can be named in respect to which clear, abundant and specific evidence cannot be adduced in proof that this decline has been due to decreased cost of production or distribution or to changes in supply and demand occasioned by wholly fortuitous circumstances.

Nobody, furthermore, has ever risen to explain the motive which has impelled the honest sellers of merchandise all over the world during the last 25 years to take lower prices for their goods in the face of an unexampled abundance of capital and remarkably low rates of interest, except for one or both of two reasons—excess of supply or diminished demand. Has any one ever attempted to explain how it has happened that during the recent period of the fall of prices the world's stock of money, and especially of silver, has been constantly increasing?

Is it not plain that a phenomenal decline of prices in two parts of the world, with entirely different monetary conditions, must have had other causes than a demonetization of silver in the United States, which took place, if it ever did, a comparatively short time ago (repeal of the Sherman act in 1893), and which has not prevented nearly $600,000,000 of silver credit money from circulating in the the country at its full nominal value?

That the price of labor measured in gold has not declined, but increased in a marked degree everywhere in the civilized world during the last quarter of a century, has been already commented on; hence if the purchasing power of gold has increased during this period a given amount of it would have purchased more labor and not less, or, what is the same thing, wages would have fallen, which they have not done.

Measured by the price of labor, gold has unquestionably depreciated, and recent careful examinations indicate that the ratio of its decline has been from 100 in 1873 to 83 in 1893. Measured also by the decline in the rate of interest on such established gold paying securities as British consols, the ratio has been from 100 in 1870 to 75 in 1896. Can anybody suggest a better measure for testing this issue?

Has any one ever endeavored to explain how an appreciation of gold has reduced the cost of railroad and water transportation to the extent of more than 75 per cent within the last 20 years, although the wages of employees have advanced during the same period?

If, on the other hand, these reductions were caused by the suppression of the free coinage of silver, will not a reversion of policy enable the railroads to advance their freight rates and rob the people, as will be claimed, by restoring 50 per cent more than at present? And will not some supplementary provisions to the free coinage act be necessary to prevent their so doing?

SIMPLE SUMS FOR SILVERITES

Problems Which Can Easily Be Figured Out by Voters.

A farmer raises 1,000 bushels of wheat, for which he now gets $500. With that money he buys various kinds of manufactured goods at low prices. With free coinage at 16 to 1 he might get $1,000 for his wheat, but would certainly have to pay nearly twice as much for the goods he would buy. How much would the farmer gain from a cheap money scheme which doubled the price of the things he gets in exchange for his wheat?

The Sherman silver law of 1890 provided for the purchase by government of 54,000,000 ounces of silver per year. Under the operation of that law the price of silver, after a short speculative rise, fell steadily from $1.16 to 78 cents per ounce. If the purchase and storage of practically the entire American production of silver could not prevent its price from falling, what reasons are there for believing that the mere act of coining silver into dollars and returning them to the owners of the bullion will double the price of all the silver in the world?

A workingman who depends for his livelihood on the sale of his labor to an employer is now paid $2 per day in currency based on the gold standard and kept on a parity with gold by our laws. This $2 will buy a relatively large quantity of necessities. If this country adopts free coinage and goes on to a silver basis, $2 will buy only one-half as much of the goods the workingman needs. Show how labor would be benefited by a policy which would cut the purchasing power of wages in two.

An investor having money to lend was approached by a farmer who wanted a loan for the purpose of buying new implements, additional stock and some fertilizers. "If you will let me have $800 on the security of my land and buildings," said the farmer, "I will vote for a free silver law which will enable me to pay you back next year in dollars worth just half of those you lend me." State how much money that investor loaned the farmer, also the rate of interest paid.

A large number of persons who complained that they were poor decided to enact laws which would make them all rich. As their poverty consisted in the lack of food, clothes, furniture, houses and other forms of wealth, they agreed that instead of producing the things they needed they would set men to work digging silver, which they did not need, out of the Rocky mountains. By so doing they expected that the supply of other labor products would in some mysterious way be increased. How much is twice nothing, and how will the changing of silver bullion into coins make more houses, machinery or beef?

If the sound money vote in Vermont increases the Republican majority from 21,000 in 1892 to 38,000 this year, how long will it take the 16 to 1 issue to wipe out the entire Democratic vote in that state? WHIDDEN GRAHAM.

The Tempting "More Money" Scheme.

There would be a scramble to pick up the promise did they not see the string to it.

There Has Been No Reduction.

When a silverite urges you to vote for free coinage on the ground that "the crime of '73" reduced the money in the country, just show him these figures:

The money in this country in circulation, not counting the money in the treasury, at two dates 20 years apart was as follows:

	July 1, 1876.	July 1, 1896.
State bank notes	$1,047,335	.....
Subsidiary silver	21,055,128	$59,999,805
Fractional currency	82,988,845	.....
United States notes	331,447,078	225,451,358
National banl notes	316,120,702	215,331,927
Specie on Pacific coast	25,000,000	.....
Gold coin	.....	456,128,483
Silver dollars	.....	52,175,998
Gold certificates	.....	42,330,759
Silver certificates	.....	331,259,509
Sherman notes	.....	95,217,361
Currency certificates	.....	31,840,000
Total	$727,600,888	$1,509,726,200
Per capita circulation	$16.12	$21.15

Besides the money in circulation there was in the treasury $111,803,340 of gold to cover the certificates and maintain the redemption of legal tender notes, 378,614,043 silver dollars, which are in the treasury mainly because people object to receiving them, and other moneys aggregating $684,519,981. The whole amount of money in the country in 1876 was $765,683,284; in 1896, including gold and silver bullion in the treasury, the amount is $2,346,897,955.

As long as gold, either from its intrinsic superiority as a metal, from its rarity or from the prejudices of mankind, retains so considerable a pre-eminence in value over silver as it has hitherto had, a natural consequence of this seems to be that its condition will be more stationary. The revolutions, therefore, which may take place in the comparative value of gold and silver will be changes in the state of the latter rather than in that of the former.—Alexander Hamilton.

Britton is now a full fledged business town. Monday he opened a commercial parlor in the office of the Exelby house. Besides attending to business he has found time to shave the ground in front of the hotel.

The death of John Bechtold, Sunday noon, was no doubt one of the saddest that has ever occurred here. Uncle John, as he was familiarly called, had lived in Britton twelve years. He was a quiet citizen whom everyone respected. He came from Germany, his native country, when a young man and later became a citizen of the United States. He served his country faithfully through the civil war. At the close of the war he went to Petersburg and resided until he came to Britton. He was a member of Eaton post and was a pensioner. Recently he had an increase but it was of no benefit to him as the papers never filled out. Not having relatives in this country he never told his age and as he never told his age no one knew how old he was, though they must have been not far from 70. His illness was not protracted nor one of pain. Kind friends ministered to his every wants and nothing was left undone. His funeral was held at the church Tuesday morning and was largely attended by sorrowing friends. The remains were placed in the vault at Ridgeway. Uncle John will be greatly missed in this community.

C. H. Bramble, democratic nominee for Register of Deeds, will address the citizens of Ridgeway and vicinity on the financial issues of the day from a silver standpoint, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 27, at the building formerly used for a wagon shop by W. H. Arner.

At the home of the bride, Thursday at eleven o'clock, occurred the wedding of Miss Florence Allet and A. R Arner, of Ionia, in the presence of a small company of relatives. Rev. A. H. Bailey performed the ceremony. Harry Deyer, the bride's brother, was best man and Miss Miss Mary Stevens was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Arner left on the evening train for Grand Rapids, and will be "at home," 706 West Main street, Ionia, where Mr. Arner has a position as conductor at the state house of correction.—Allegan Gazette.

For oil-cloths, stove boards and zincs go to Ed Smith's.

The exercises prepared for the raising of the flag staff, at the school building, Friday afternoon, were very fine, and successfully presented. The exercise, "Columbia's Daughters," by sixteen young ladies and two young men, was very interesting, each winning praise and honor. The part of the red man's plea at the hands of the white man was given by Miss Ina Wilson in a manner that held all spell bound as she rendered the part with reality both in word and sentiment. P. S. McKinnon, of Tecumseh, gave the address in his usual pleasing way, with words of advice and encouragement to the pupils of the school.

Wednesday evening A. J. Sutton's pleasant home on North street was the scene of one of the grandest wedding events ever given in this village. The interior of the house was decorated with smilax, potted plants and ferns. At 7-30, as Miss Kate M. Clark played Mendelsshon's wedding march, the bridal party took their place in the alcove of the south parlor beneath a bow of white ribbon and smilax when Rev. H. Cansfield performed the marriage vows that united Miss Leora Francina Sutton and Mr. Fred L. Cook, of Lansing, as husband and wife. Miss Gertrude Cook, of Big Rapids, a sister of the groom, and Mr. Frank Cowley, of Lansing, acted as bridesmaid and best man. The bride was attired in cream silk with lace and pearl garniture and carried pink roses. The groom wore the conventional black. Little Hazel Stearnes was the first to congratulate the bride and presented her with a beautiful basket of flowers. After congratulations, the guests were ushered into the dining room where they partook of an elaborate wedding repast served by the young ladies of the bride's Sunday school class. The groom is one of the capitol city's hustling real estate and insurance agents and is located with Roswell Mott; also president of the Epworth League, one of the largest in the state, and is very highly esteemed by his many friends in Lansing. The bride is well known here, having spent the most of her life among us. As pipe organist and music teacher she ranks among the first in southern Michigan, and to say that she will be missed in our society, church and Sunday school work is expressing the fact in a mild manner. During the evening DeMuth's orchestra from Toledo furnished excellent music which was highly appreciated by the guests. The members of the orchestra are personal friends of the bride. Guests were present from Lansing, Big Rapids, Howell and Toledo. An account of the happy event would not be complete without mention of the large number of handsome and costly presents bestowed upon the young couple bearing evidence of the high esteem in which they are held by their many friends. The newly wedded couple will spend a few days at the home of the bride's parents, after which they will leave for their future home, 312 Logan street, Lansing, and will begin housekeeping in their new and finely furnished residence.

Hard times are over! Confidence prevails. All because of the conviction that our next president will be that safe, broad minded statesman, William ?

Darius Hendershot and wife moved to Tecumseh this week, where Mrs. Hendershot has entered the employ of Seaton Anderson. Tecumseh's gain. Macon's loss.

The many friends of Dr. E. E. Hendershot regret that he prefers Britton to Macon, but feel sure that he will have his share of the patronage in the town where he formerly lived.

Still more evidence that hard times are over—Will Collins, of Macon, and Miss Florence Swinnock, of Detroit, were married at Ann Arbor, Thursday, Oct. 15. "Wish you much joy!"

B. F. DePuy has a handsome new marble clock for his private library. Probably he thought that politics in Lenawee had arrived at the stage where you call "time" on the county committee.

Mr. Bardwell, of Tecumseh, was canvassing Macon last week with fresh peanuts. He reported good sales and also met with genial hospitality at J. W. Baker's where he was entertained over night.

With equal pleasure record is made of the marriage of Hon. Bryan and Miss Daisy Burgess, Tuesday, Oct. 13. Both are Macon residents. Our people extend their warmest wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Bryan.

Men in this vicinity, who have been working for Mr. Reatore, on his celery farm, say that the celery is badly affected with rust. Mr. Reatore has been a heavy loser on his celery this year, one car load having been spoiled on account of the extreme hot weather when the consignment was shipped.

A tramp, who had beaten his way from Chicago to this place last week, gave some very comical accounts of his political experiences along the way, especially in Coldwater and Adrian. The fellow pretended to be for Bryan but he was too shrewd for one of your every day, on-the-ragged-edge tramps, and it is the general belief that he was a "worker" for one political party or the other.

Scores of men, who have visited the headquarters of the McKinley club at Tecumseh, have remarked upon the comfort and convenience of having such a room in town every day in the year, where farmers and young men from the adjacent towns could go in to warm and chat for half an hour. It would keep men out of the saloons and also induce those who now stand on the street corners to go into the reading room and look over the papers and magazines of the day and thus acquire a habit of reading instead of gossiping. It is proposed by several persons to get the farmers to "chip in" and pay for the rent of this store and thus establish a permanent reading room. All that is required is some one to start the movement. With such a large territory to assess the yearly dues would not be more than fifty cents, which, paid quarterly, would never be missed by any one. By all means let the proposition materialize.

Now that the estate of the late Mary Ann Norcross has been divided, there is a prospect of opening the road on the town line between "Kelley's Corners" and Thomas Boyce's, a distance of less than a mile. Miss Norcross owned 40 acres of land bordering on this line, which, in the division, fell to Will, J. H., and Aaron Norcross. The young men wish to improve the property and will petition the commissioners to open the road. This line in question leads directly north to Abner Ellis' farm, passing through the farms of Asel Kelley, P. S. DePuy and Mrs Kate Hendershot. It is hoped by all residents in the north part of the town that the petition will cover the length of the line, thus opening the road between Asel Kelley's corner and Abner Ellis' farm on the Clinton road. This much needed improvement should have been given the public years ago. We trust the Norcross boys will get enough signers to their petition to cover the entire distance of the line.

A stomachful of undigested food is about as unhealthy a mass as one can well imagine.

What can be done with it?

There it stays. It won't digest. It churns up, ferments and decays; becomes poisonous (as all putrid matter does) and causes pain and deep-seated disorders.

In order to change all this, take Shaker Digestive Cordial.

It stops fermentation and decay at once, so that no more poisons are created.

It clears the stomach of poisons already there. It helps it to turn the food that remains, into healthful nourishment. It strengthens the stomach for the next meal.

Here is the whole philosophy and cure of indigestion in a few words. And what's more, its all true. Try it.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is for sale by druggists, price 10 cents to $1.00 a bottle.

The premature discharge of a blast of giant powder near Mena, Ark., killed six men and badly injured another.

Mrs. Geo. S. Beck, eastern manager of Farm, News and Womankind, 193 World Building, New York, writes: "I had a bunion on my left foot that, as a pain producer, was on a par at least with the boils, sores, rheumatics and colics that made poor old Job's life so miserable. I do not have the bunion now, for Lightning Hot Drops reduced the swelling, killed the pain, rotted the callous, enlivened the skin, and—there is no doubt about it—annihilated the bunion."

Massey & Son, of Lipscomb, Maury Co., Tenn., writes as follows: "Lightning Hot Drops is the greatest medicine for the mumps I ever saw; gives instant relief."

Mr. Edward W. Smith, Proprietor of the Lake View Marble Works, Youngstown, O., says: "I used Lightning Hot Drops for a badly sprained ankle, and its action as a liniment was both soothing and effectual. It is indeed a good remedy."

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 23, 1896.

The three Adrian newspapers are in about as disgraceful a row as one could find in any decent community. Such a state of affairs may be pleasant for the editors but is certainly disgusting to their readers. It may be that votes are captured over in Lenawee's county seat by calling each other liars and horse thieves and a few other common names but such a policy would hardly be considered politic in any other community.

Following is a communication from J. W. Helme, Jr., of Adrian, relating to to the position of Mr. Camburn on the oleomargarine question. There is no sum of money too large for such meh as Armour and Swift and Morris to spend to stop the passage of laws in any state which will make it possible for consumers of butterine and oleomargarine to at all times tell whether they are eating this adulterated food or butter. On account of the large expenditure of money by these manufacturers it has been impossible to pass these laws in but few states. Representative Camburn has the reputation of being unwilling to assist the farmer in this legislation and if such is the case he should not be returned to Lansing. The selling of oleomargarine has reduced the price of dairy butter in this state until there is, at the present time, little or no profit in this most important branch of farming industry and unless laws are passed to prevent the using of hog fat for butter, the Michigan farmer might as well give away his cows and close up his dairy. If Mr. Camburn has any defense to Mr Helme's communication, the columns of the HERALD are open to his use over his signature.

EDITOR HERALD:—

My attention has been called to an article in the Adrian Times headed "willful misstatements." The article states that false reports have been circulated through the county respecting the votes of Rep. Edgar and Camburn against the bill pertaining to the coloring of oleomargarine. The times article is calculated to deceive as it mentions the vote of Edgar and Camburn on the pure food bill which contained an oleomargarine clause, but the bill the dairymen wanted was the Redfern bill which related to dairy products alone. Now I wish to say right here that Camburn and Edgar have never denied that they opposed the bill. Before the Lenawee county institute last winter, Hon. Geo. B. Horton publicly stated that he personally went to both members and both refused to help the bill. Early in September the democratic convention denounced both members for their vote and neither has ever objected. In a conversation with me last winter, John I. Breck, of Jackson, a republican and now deputy food commissioner said that "Camburn and Edgar opposed the bill from start to finish." I will now publicly ask Messrs. Edgar and Camburn to answer this question over their own signatures: Did you vote and work in every manner with your voice and influence for all clauses in all bills providing against the coloring of oleomargarine in semblance of butter? Another question: Did you not, at Lansing during the session, in conversation with Hon. G. B. Horton and John I. Breck, refuse to use your influence and voice and votes in favor of the bills against coloring oleomargarine which the dairymen asked? The peculiar method adopted by the oleomargarine people to save their friends in the legislature from being put on record, is thus described by deputy food commissioner John I. Breck, of Jackson, who represented the State Dairymen's association, at Lansing during the session. This extract is from the 12th annual report of the association, page 131:—

"The only way to prevent the sale of oleomargarine is to prohibit its being colored yellow. You can pass all the regulating acts you have a mind to, and you cannot control it so long as it is allowed to mask under the form of butter no more than you can prevent the passage of counterfeit money if you allow it to be made. We have not got the members of the house and senate on record in this matter but it was utterly impossible. At a certain stage of every bill, which is called the general order, the bill is open to amendment, and these amendments are offered, made, and voted upon by viva voce vote. The roll is not called and the members are not put on record. We simply could not put them on record and many of our members avoid putting themselves on record. We had petitions containing 8,000 names asking for the passage of the Redfern bill. On the day when this bill came up on general order, a motion was made to strike out the section prohibiting the coloring of oleomargarine. There was present in the house, just one man who was interested in the manufacture of oleomargarine and that man is high up in the councils of one of the parties of this state. His private secretary was here and a lobbyist from Detroit and another from Chicago and those three people were as busy as boys killing snakes. This manufacturer of oleomargarine sat in his seat and never opened his mouth but kept his eyes on those three men and when that motion was made it was carried without any effort at all."

In conclusion I would state that in the Times last August its Franklin correspondent, in answer to a speech I made at Tipton on this subject, defended Mr. Camburn's action in the matter instead of denying it as the Times has. Any voter can get the exact facts from John I. Breck, of Jackson, Mich., or of Geo. B. Horton, of Fruit Ridge, Mich.

J. W. HELME, Jr.

EDITOR HERALD:

Inasmuch as my neck is threatened to be wrung by Dr. Loree, I suppose what he feels ought to be done under certain circumstances it would be his duty to do the first chance he had. However, I do not fear the doctor and hope to meet him most cordially as I often have done before.

I have had it in my mind to say something about the different phases of money and now, as the doctor has intimated something on that line, will endeavor to give my ideas thereon, which are, it appears to me, founded upon statute laws relative to the matter. And here, in passing, I wish to state that any utterance in any political platform or anywhere else contravening statutes should not be accepted. Everyone has a right to construe laws, under logical rules, according to his own judgment. "Standard" money, as will be found, relates only to the kind, quality and quantity of the material of which it is made as found in the latest laws enacted and by which we are governed at this time, without reverting to antique history, not pertinent to the present discussion. The law of 1837, "enacted that the standard for both gold and silver coins of the United States shall hereafter be such that of 1000 parts by weight, 900 parts shall be of pure metal and 100 parts of alloy. The alloy of the silver coins shall be of copper and the alloy of the gold coins shall be of copper and silver, provided that the silver does not exceed one-half of the whole alloy." This was and is called standard silver. Section 9, "enacted that of the silver coins the dollar shall be of the weight of 412 1-2 grains of this standard silver, the half dollar of 206 1-4 grains, and smaller coins in the same proportion." But it was found that silver at about that time so raised in commercial, intrinsic value that no silver dollars of that weight could be kept in circulation, being worth, as bullion, about $1 04, so that the coinage of them was stopped. And the law of 1853 enacted that the weight of the half dollar should be 192 grains and the smaller coins in the same proportion, so you see that two half dollars only contained 384 grains of standard silver instead of 412 1-2 grains as in the dollar coin, being 28 1-2 grains less, so the minor coins were kept in circulation. But none, or scarcely any dollars were coined and such continued to be the case up to and including 1873, when the trade dollar was provided for and the 412 1-2 grain dollar was left out of the law. This is called the "crime of 1873" when silver is said by some to have been demonetized. Notwithstanding, the minor coins and what dollars there were in the country were legal tenders to $5.00. The law of 1837 enacted, section 16, "That of the gold coins the weight of the eagle shall be 258 grains and of the half and quarter eagles in the same proportion, that is, 258 grains standard gold to the dollar. Thus we have the statutes on which silver and gold were coined into money up to 1873 from "bullion from any owner of silver bullion to be coined into bars or into dollars of the weight of 420 grains troy, designated as trade dollars, and no deposit of silver for other coinage shall be received. But silver bullion contained in gold deposits and separated therefrom may be paid for in silver coin." So here we see how standard money came to be. Now what was this money for, what was to be its vocation, bringing us to another phase of the questioner. The law of 1874 enacted section 3, 584, "No foreign gold or silver coins shall be a legal tender in payment of debts;" section 3, 585, "The gold coins of the United States shall be a legal tender in all payments at their nominal value when not below their standard weight;" section 3, 586, "The silver coins shall be a legal tender for any amount not exceeding $5.00 in any one payment." Thus we see that gold was standard money and also legal tender money at its nominal value to any amount. Silver was standard money also but not legal tender money to any amount above $5.00. The doctor says, "Gold coin is our only standard money. So many units of gold is our unit of value." By the above laws, was not silver a unit of value just as certain as gold to a limited extent? And since the laws of 1878 and 1890 it is a unit of value not only to the extent of $5.00 but to any amount a legal tender. The doctor says, "Silver coin was at one time standard money but is not at this time. Sometime, somewhere and somehow it has been divested of the character of that kind of money." Truly a great enigma; surely we ought to be able to solve it. We will admit, to please the now silverites and save contention, that silver was demonetized in 1873 but it amounted to nothing as there was no silver to be demonetized. But as there came to be some it was remonetized by the law of 1878 and more fully by the law of 1890 and is not now demonetized. Now let us call to mind another phase of the money question, A civil war was upon us with scarcely any money in the treasury. March 2, 1861, there began to be issued treasury notes followed from time to time by other issues and greenbacks of 1862 and '63 to the amount of $449,338,903 on January 3, 1864 together with treasury notes of several millions more a large proportion of all entering into currency as full legal tender money. But in answer to Dr. Loree's question, I am not "counting them as standard money" they not coming under that class as defined above, but were mere flat money founded only upon the credit of the government. I felt impelled to produce what evidence I could to prove my assertion true, that silver is not now demonetized, leaving our readers to render the verdict as to whether my neck should be wrung or not,

See the new and beautiful feather boas at Mrs. M. A. Freeman's.

Although the house was not packed at the opening of the lecture course Saturday evening as upon some former occasions, yet it was a refined audience that greeted the Redpath Concert Company and one that recognized and appreciated the artistic work done by the talented artists which comprise the company. Every selection secured a hearty encore and was generously responded to. The pianist, Mr. Sonnaholb won the hearts of all by his fine execution and delicate touch. Mr. Dunseath has a sweet and pleasing tenor voice. Miss Desvignes has a contralto voice of fine quality and great power and her selections were with fine expression. Madame Urso has been before the people so long and the position she has attained in her profession, that criticisms unnecessary. She is a musical artist with the violin. The committee used rare judgment in presenting their course for 1896-7 by placing the company first, thereby assuring the people that the entire course will be the best ever presented here. They should be royally supported by this community in their endeavors to furnish entertainments. And here we would say that it will require the sale of more tickets to cover the expense of the course and the committee have placed the price of tickets for the reserved five at $1.25, and it is earnestly hoped the people will respond at once. Election will soon be over and the accompanying excitement subsided and we feel confident our citizens will support the assistance of these public spirited men who have arranged and are responsible for this expense for the special benefit.

Mrs. C. A. Wright was an Adrian visitor Monday.

Mrs. A. W. Slayton is spending the week with Detroit friends.

D. H. Davis, of Clinton, is becoming quite celebrated as a caricaturist. He has produced some original sketches appropriate to the present political campaign that are not only unique but works of art. Dan is fast forging to the front.

Mr. Sonnakolb, the pianist with the Redpath Concert Co., filled his part in the program under the most trying circumstances. During the day he received a telegram from his home saying his 7 year old son was very ill, and a few hours later another saying he was dead. He left on the night train for New York, via Jackson.

The opera house was nearly filled last evening to hear Congressman Geo. Spalding. While by no means an orator Mr. Spalding did the best he could and the audience was satisfied, the republicans that he did so well and the silverites that he did their cause no harm.

Query—Why didn't Mr. Wightman like a man take issue with Barkworth when he was here and invited criticism instead of waiting till he was gone to attack him.

The marriage of Mr. Ernest Welch, of Clinton, and Miss Eva Welling occurred at Adrian Saturday forenoon. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the M. E. church, at the parsonage, in the presence of the bride's brother, Harvey, and wife and the groom's sister, Clara, and Claude Larzelere, of Clinton. A wedding dinner was served at 2 p. m., at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Welling, besides the bridal party, Miss Nellie Clark and Frank Gieske, of Manchester, and Miss Florence Montgomery were present. Owing to the physical condition of both Mr. Welling and Mr. Terry, the contemplated home wedding was abandoned. The many friends of the fair bride, who was born and reared here, have the heartiest congratulations to offer.

The Lenawee County Union Sunday-school convention convened at the Presbyterian church in Adrian at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday and continued all day Wednesday, when it adjourned to meet at the call of the executive committee another year. This was the 10th annual meeting and it was ably presided over by its president, A. L. VanAuken, of Adrian assisted by its active and efficient secretary, Rev. B. I. Laing, of Raisin. The music was led by Mr. Swift, of Adrian, and the "question drawer" was conducted by S. Milo Dole, of Adrian. The attendance was large, delegates coming from nearly all the schools and Christian denominations of the county, well supported by the citizens of Adrian. The influence of so successful and enthusiastic a convention must be long and extensively felt throughout the whole county for good.

Don't forget the ladies' social at the Universalist church next Friday.

Will Getty, of Kalkaska, is the guest of Mrs. James Glasgow this week.

Come to the Universalist supper next Friday evenilg from 5:30 to 7 o'clock.

Mrs. G. W. Jackson was called to St. Joseph the last of the week by the death of an uncle.

Last Saturday evening, Matthew Boyd and Miss Emma Barber were married. Rev. J. P. Varner tied the knot at Mr. Boyd's home.

The Standard Cabinet Co. have a new and very neat sign in front of their building on Railroad street.

At the Methodist church next Sunnad night, Rev. J. P. Varner will have for his subject, Corrupt Literature.

New comers and those having moved from one precinct to the other should register at once. The board will be in session tomorrow for that purpose.

Yesterday was Mrs. George Teachout's 61st birthday. The event was appropriately celebrated at the Central house last evening when fifteen of her lady friends walked in upon her. It was a surprise which was planned and executed by her daughter, Mrs. Fred Aldrich, who demonstrated herself an adept. The supper served was elegant.

Died, at his late residence in Clinton township of heart disease, John McIntyre aged 73 years. Mr. McIntye was a man well known and respected in the community in which he lived and will be mourned by many relatives and friends. The funeral was conducted by Rev. C. M. Brown at the residence yesterday at 2 p. m. Interred in Tecumseh cemetery.

Union street will soon be open for traffic as the arch or bridge spanning Evans' Creek at the cemetery is nearly completed. It will be a substantial improvement as the work is being well done. But few people know that all the material used in its construction is purely American—steel, stone, and even cement. It is the first of the kind in this part of the country.

A very pretty home wedding took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, 2334 3rd Avenue, Toledo, October 14th. The contracting parties, Miss Metta E. Miller, and Mr. Harry M. Bailey both are well known here, the bride having spent the girlhood in Macon until two years ago when she went to Ypsilanti and took a course at Cleary's business college. The groom holds a position as postal clerk on the Lake Shore railroad and is an estimable young man. The ceremony was performee at noon by the Rev. Mr. McCaulley of the Presbyterian church, Auburndale, Toledo. After a bountiful dinner, the couple left for Cleveland, their future home, carrying with them the best wishes of all.

Scovel J. Walker.

Wednesday evening about 9 o'clock Scovel J. Walker sat by his fireside, his family around him, and breatbed his last earthly breath. The summons came so quietly and peacefully, without a pain or struggle, that the friends hardly knew when the end came. The shock to his relatives and friends is difficult to bear yet calmer thoughts tell them, "What a peaceful ending of peaceful life."

Scovel J. Walker was born in Madison county, N. Y., 69 years ago. In 1866 he with his family came to Tecumseh, remained here two years, then purchased a farm in the township of Norvell, Jackson county, on which he lived until last spring, at which time, on account of failing strength and declining years, the farm was sold and the family moved to Tecumseh.

He leaves a widow, four children, S. S. Walker, of Tecumseh, W. J. Walker, of Elgin, Ill., Mrs. F. P. Coder, of Norvell, Mich., and Mrs. J. L. Bearsley, of Elgin, Ill., one brother, J. D. Walker, of Brooklyn, Mich., and three sisters, Mrs. C. A. Stacy and Miss Clarinda Walker, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. Sidney Houghton, of Humbird, Wis., and a number of grandchildren, nephews and nieces.

"Uncle Scove" was the favorite uncle. He was always good natured, always happy, always interested in the pleasures and work of others, always ready with an encouraging word and the loved one with all the children. His life of constant care and devotion to his family is in the minds of all who knew him the greatest monument man can build for himself, and in such a life there are no intentional faults. His place in the home to the devoted wife and aged sister cannot be filled and that it must always remain vacant is the only sad thing about so peaceful an ending.

"Who does the best
His circumstance allows
Does well—acts nobly.
Angels could no more."

The funeral will be conducted at the family residence in "Brownsville" Saturday at 11 a. m. by the Rev. W. R. Blachford.

Bro. Stacy:—

It may be of interest to many of your readers to know that a little over a month ago the home of Mrs. Julia A. Wood in Sauk Rapids, in Minnesota, who in her early days was a teacher in our Tecumseh female high school or seminary, was burned to the ground with nearly all of its contents. Also that on the 5th inst. the home of her brother-in-law, the Hon. J. Q. A. Wood, of Sauk Rapids—also in his earlier days a resident of Tecumseh—was in like manner burned to the ground with all its contents, the gathered mementos and literary treasures of a lifetime, he himself only escaping by crawling through a window and jumping from the upper story, slightly but not severely injured thereby. Mrs. Geo. N. Stacy and Miss Loana Stacy assisted by Mrs. C. F. Patterson and Misses Harriet Whittier, Lizzie Beamish and May DeWolf entertained about sixty friends at the Stacy home Wednesday evening.

A great guessing scheme the Standard Cabinet Co. have on hand and everyone should take advantage of it before election. No one is barred from guessing and anyone is likely to get a $12.50 cabinet free.

As was expected, the opera house was far too small to accommodate the crowd Wednesday evening to hear Hon. Thos. E. Barkworth, the fusion candidate for congress in this district. Mr. B. is an able lawyer and an eloquent platform orator. His speech was clean, terse and logical and won the admiration of the entire audience irrespective of party. The Tipton Glee Club rendered some fine music.

Syrup of Figs

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

NASAL CATARRH is a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of colds and sudden climatic changes. It can be cured by a pleasant remedy which is applied directly into the nostrils.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Opens and cleans the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation, Heals the Sores. Protects the Membrane from Colds. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROS. 56 Warren St. New York.

THE JACKSON PRISON.

Some Statistics from the Biennial Report of the Board of Control.

Jackson, Oct. 15.—The biennial report of the board of control and warden of the state prison for the two years ending June 30, 1896, is completed, and has been placed in the hands of the state printers at Lansing. The report of the board says in substance that the warden's administration has been efficient. The employes generally have entitled themselves to appreciation by their ability and intelligent discharge of their duties. The business of the prison has, within a few months past, become quite satisfactory. All available convicts are now employed in productive industry and their earnings have increased to nearly the normal amount, although it has not been possible to obtain as good wages for the men working on contracts or as good prices for products made for the state by convicts who work on state account as were formerly obtained.

The total earnings from July 1, 1894, to June 30, 1896, were as follows: On contracts, $130,799.24; on state account, $25,198.44; total, $155,997.68.

The board also refers to the recently enacted parole law and speaks in highly complimentary language of its workings. It also refers to the fact that an undue proportion of discharged convicts remain in the city of Jackson, but sees nothing that the prison authorities can do to remedy the evil, as all control over the man ends when his term ends.

The warden's report deals more largely with figures. The population of the prison for the two years is as follows: Number of inmates July 1, 1894, 856; since received, 484; returned from asylum for insane, 9; returned from parole, 1. Total, 1,350. Number discharged at expiration of sentence, 383; transferred to Ionia, 51; transferred to Marquette, 25; sent to asylum for insane, 21; to Detroit house of correction, 2 (females); discharged for new trial, 6; escaped, 1; pardoned, 8; died, 12; released on parole, 17; remaining in custody, June 30, 1896, 834; net loss in population, 32.

Under the new parole law 17 men have been paroled from the prison. Of these one has been returned for not complying with the provisions of his parole, three have been discharged on expiration of sentence and the law has thus far worked very successfully.

The number under contract during the past two years was 418, representing 260,820½ days, for which the state received a trifle over 50 cents per day per man. There are now five contracts in force: Withington & Cooley, 175 men; Derby Cycle Co., 100; Bronk Shirt Co., 300, not full; Austin, Tomlinson & Webster Co., 25; C. W. Hill's granite works, 30, not full. Total, 630 men.

The expense of the prisoners per capita per day for two years has been 60 3-10 cents, the earnings per capita per day for two years have been 38 4-10 cents. The daily expense for food per capita has been 8 6-10 cents, for clothing 2 7-10 cents, amusement and industrial training nearly 9 cents per day and salaries and wages 14 1-10 cents.

CLIMAX, Oct. 20.—The village of Climax, Kalamazoo county, has been selected in this state to again try the system of rural delivery, which will be inaugurated in about a week. Mr. Ralph Bird, United States post office inspector from Milwaukee, is here making arrangements and looking up carriers. W. C. Pond is postmaster. The daily route traveled by the carriers will be about 22 miles.

WHY WHEAT HAS ADVANCED.

Its Value Is Gauged Solely by the Laws of Supply and Demand.

HIGH GOLD; LOW WHEAT

Enormous Exportation Caused by Short Crops in India, Russia, Argentina and the United States.

Average Prices Gradually Declined Since Silver Was Demonetized—India Buying Rupee Paper and Wheat—Speculation Has Only Followed Natural Tendency of Higher Prices—What Mr. John Cudahy Says.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—(Special.)—The recent advance of 17 cents a bushel in the price of wheat has given rise to considerable discussion as to what extent the republican managers have participated in the advance. Many erroneous statements are made, among which being one attributing the advance to McKinley's probable election and the probable defeat of silver in November. One republican paper gives credence to the statement that inasmuch as the value of wheat to the farmers in this country has increased in the neighborhood of $100,000,000, there can be no possible doubt but that the gold sentiment has done it.

The value of wheat is gauged absolutely by the unalterable laws of supply and demand, aided temporarily at times by speculative influences. Speculators occasionally advance or break the price of wheat according to the opportunities offered in the exercise of the business. There are evidences at the present time which show clearly that either the republican national committee or a syndicate in close touch with it has recently been participating in a speculative syndicate which has for its purpose the making of campaign capital in addition to a few dollars.

It is often asserted that during the almost continual decline in the price of silver bullion since the demonetization of silver in '73, the price of wheat has advanced, and the differences of relative worth have been gradually widened. That this is not true is shown in the report of the United States department of agriculture showing the average price of wheat for the years 1865 to 1895, inclusive. Before silver was demonetized it sold at $1.29 per ounce. From 1866 to 1869 the average price of wheat was $1.18 a bushel. From 1870 to 1873, $1.04; from 1874 to 1880, 95 cents; from 1881 to 1885, 88 cents; from 1886 to 1890, 77 cents, and from 1891 to 1895, 60 cents. With the appreciation in the price of gold the tendency is for higher prices for wheat, as it is recorded that in so far as money can have any influence on the price of wheat, high prices for silver have always brought high prices for wheat. Such advance however, would not be uniform with the advance of both silver and wheat. Under a bimetallic system the premium would be removed from gold, and silver, of course, would advance. This would in a measure equalize the advance in the price of wheat. According to the estimate made by one of the most prominent grain dealers in Chicago, the advance from 70-cent wheat would be about one dollar, while silver would at once go to $1.29.

The Wall Street Journal gives the following explanation of the weakness in silver, so far as it is considered as a commodity:

"The explanation given by dealers of the weakness in silver is absence of demand for India. This is considered confirmatory of the reported shipments of wheat from here to India and makes the silver situation interesting. Heretofore India had wheat for export and silver was in demand in London to pay for India wheat. Having no wheat now to export the demand for silver has lessened, and India in buying wheat is buying it on a gold basis and paying practically $1.30 a bushel in silver for what costs about 70 cents a bushel in gold in Chicago.

dia rupee paper. It seems that London operators during the summer, in anticipation of the sweeping victory in the United States for free silver, bought rupee paper as a speculative venture. These operators made a profit in this paper, sold it, and India being the natural home for it has been buying. Another factor has been the very dull trade of East Indian countries and China and Japan for raw materials, such as teas, silks, etc."

Aside from the speculative influences which have been at work in silver, the laws of supply and demand have undoubtedly governed present prices of wheat. Extraordinary causes are at work this year to advance the price of wheat, and were it not for the depression which is due to the rise of the price of gold, wheat prices would now be very high. The wheat crop in the United States is very short this year, being 56,000,000 bushels less than the average crop for 20 years. The last government crop report placed the crop at 411,000,000 bushels. Add to this the available supply of 52,000,000, the official estimated reports, makes the total crop 463,000,000. The exportation of wheat has been phenomenal this year, and if kept up at the present rate will reach fully 150,000,000 bushels, leaving but 313,000,000 bushels for consumption and seed purposes in this country, which is not enough for the actual needs.

Probably one of the greatest influences that have ever appeared in the history of the wheat trade has been Argentina's production of enormous quantities of wheat, which began a few years ago, and ever since that country has been a factor of the first importance. Last year she shipped enormous quantities of wheat and this year nothing, nor will she, as her crop is practically ruined. The crop of Australia is only 30 per cent. of last year, and the most conservative of the estimates of the damage to the Russian crop give a decrease under last year of 150,000,000 bushels. The almost complete failure of the crop of India has brought about a condition of things which has never existed in the history of the grain trade before. Add to these features the failure in the potato crop in Germany and Ireland.

The exportation of wheat, in quantity, has been astonishing, in the last two weeks over 8,000,000 bushels having been shipped. A number of cargoes were sent to India, being the first shipments ever made to that country.

Big operators in wheat like John Cudahy, W. T. Baker, W. R. Linn, August Brosseau and Armour have had men out for months to estimate this year's crop. The reports received by them have caused them to give expression to the belief that the United States would this year raise less than 400,000,000 bushels of wheat. Upon these estimates, and the enormous exporting demand, they have built their hopes for higher prices. That they do not take any stock in the assertions so often made by the republicans that the advance in the price of wheat is due to the belief in the minds of the people that McKinley will be elected is shown in the statement made by Mr. John Cudahy, who said it made no difference who was elected president of this country, wheat this year would go up just the same.

In corn, oats and provisions, there is no shortage in this country, and such minor advances as have been made from the lowest prices that have been ever recorded in either of these commodities are only in sympathy with the advance in the price of wheat.

Should this country remain upon a gold standard basis, gold would certainly go to a higher premium. A leading bullion firm in Wall street has recently been selling calls on gold, dated beyond election day, at 1½ per cent premium. This shows clearly the belief of Wall street in higher prices for gold should McKinley be elected. On the other hand, should this country go to a bimetallic basis by the election of Mr. Bryan, the price of silver would at once go to $1.29 per ounce. In consequence the price of wheat would also advance at once, as payment would then be made in gold as now, purchased according to its parity with silver in the exchange market.

Prince Bismarck says, in his letter to Gov. Culberson, that the surest and quickest way to secure an international settlement of the currency question is for the United States to adopt the independent coinage of silver.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

Could Not Weaken Such Testimony As This.

(From the Kalamazoo Telegraph.)

The following statement is one of great interest to many a citizen of Kalamazoo, and a man as well known as Mr. Wallace should carry more than ordinary weight with our readers. Here it is as taken down by our representative:

My name is John A. Wallace. I am a member of the firm of J. A. Wallace & Co., doing business as tinners, etc., at 106 Eleanor Street, Kalamazoo, in which city I also reside. For the past nine or ten months I have been having attacks of kidney complaint, the pain in my back over my hips was very severe at times; my urinary system was also in a bad state of derangement, sometimes the urine was scanty and then again the amount would be excessive, and a difficulty of passage always existed. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills at a time when I felt that I was going to be sick, but their use warded off an attack, and I am now feeling very much better; the urinary organism has regained a normal condition, and the terrific pain in my back is much reduced in severity, while it is now fast going away altogether. I am continuing the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, with positive feeling that they will effect on me a permanent and speedy cure. I have unbounded confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills as a remedy for all kidney ailments; have good reason to be, as they have done so much for me."

Can you ask any more than this? Doan's Kidney Pills are relieving more backs of the burdens they have been forced to bear through the kidneys than all other means devised, and, better still, they are doing this right here in Michigan. Ask any one who has ever taken them and see what they will say.

THOMAS W. FERRY.

The Ex-Senator Dies at Grand Haven of Apoplexy—His Career.

Grand Haven, Oct. 15. — Ex-United States Senator Thomas W. Ferry died here very suddenly Wednesday morning of paralysis. He had been in splendid health, excepting attacks of sudden dizziness, until three days ago, when he took to his bed. Tuesday evening he was given a hypodermic injection. The family sat up with him a short time, when he seemed to be asleep. Wednesday morning he was found dead in bed.

Grand Haven, Oct. 19.—The funeral of Ex-Senator Thomas W. Ferry took place Sunday afternoon with simple but impressive services. Special trains from all parts of the state brought many prominent men and long-time friends to pay their last tribute of respect to the distinguished statesman. The services were held in the Presbyterian church and were conducted by Rev. David Cooper, of Detroit, the early pastor of the deceased, assisted by Rev. J. A. Kennedy, pastor of the church. Rev. Cooper's funeral address was a eulogy on the life of the deceased. The remains were interred in the Lake Forest cemetery.

[Thomas White Ferry was born in Mackinaw, June 1, 1827, and received his education in the public schools. In the Michigan legislature he was a representative in 1850, and a senator in 1857-8, was one of the vice presidents of the Chicago national convention in 1860; was appointed a member of the board of managers of the Gettysburg national cemetery in 1864, and reappointed in 1867; was a representative of the Thirty-ninth, Fortieth and Forty-first congresses and was reelected to the Forty-second, but was afterward elected United States senator, to succeed Jacob M. Howard. While in the house he was chairman of the subcommittee on the New York post office building and the erection of that magnificent structure is largely due to his exertions. He took his seat in the senate March 4, 1871; was elected president pro tem. March 9 and 10, and December, 1875; became acting vice president upon the death of Vice President Wilson, serving as such until March 4, 1877. In the absence of the president he presided and delivered an address at the centennial exposition, July 4, 1876. Reelected senator January 17, 1877, he was also reelected president pro tem., March 5, 1877, February 26, 1878, April 17, and March 3, 1879, so that but two of the 51 presidents pro tem. of the senate have served longer than he. In the senate he was for many years chairman of the committee on rules and post offices and post roads and a member of the committee on finance. His ability as presiding officer was tested in the impeachment trial of Secretary of War Belknap, and at the joint convention on the electoral count of 1877.

In 1883 Mr. Ferry was a candidate for reelection, but after a long and heated contest his name was withdrawn. This was the memorable battle which resulted in a victory for Thomas W. Palmer and sent him to the senate in Mr. Ferry's place.

The last honor conferred upon ex-Senator Ferry was his appointment as a member of the state park commission having charge of Mackinac island, of which board he was unanimously elected president.

Mr. Ferry was president of the United States for a little more than one hour. It occurred in 1877 owing to the memorable contest between Hayes and Tilden which was settled by means of an electoral commission. A short interval occurred between the expiration of President Grant's term and the swearing in of Hayes, and it was said that for that interval Mr. Ferry, benig the presiding officer of the senate, became legally president.]

MR. BRYAN'S VISIT.

The Democratic Candidate Makes a Four Day's Tour of the State.

Detroit, Oct. 19.—William J. Bryan, democratic candidate for president of the United States, ended a four days' tour of Michigan by making three speeches in this city Saturday night. During that time he traveled nearly 1,400 miles through the state and made about 70 speeches. He was greeted by big audiences everywhere, ranging in size from 500 to 20,000. His addresses were devoid of any new features, following closely the lines of those made all through the campaign.

Entering the state Wednesday morning early he begun his speechmaking at Ironwood. During the day he made speeches at Bessemer, Watersmeet, Iron River, Iron Mountain, Norway, Powers, Escanaba, Ishpeming, Negaunee and Marquette, and his train made brief stops at a few other smaller places.

Thursday morning he began his day's labor just after breakfast with a speech at St. Ignace. Crossing the Straits of Mackinaw, he spoke in succession at Mackinaw City, Petoskey, Charlevoix, Bellaire, Traverse City, Cadillac, Reed City, Big Rapids, Howard City, Greenville, Belding, Ionia, Walton, Manton and Lowell. He finished the day with three addresses to enormous audiences at Grand Rapids.

Friday's journey included addresses at Muskegon, Holland, Fennville, Bangor, Hartford, Ann Arbor, Niles, Dowagiac, Decatur, Lawton, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Marshall, Albion, Jackson (two), River Junction, Leslie, Mason and Lansing. In the latter city three addresses were delivered. At Jackson the crowds were so large that Mr. Bryan could not force his way through them to the stands prepared for him and was forced to speak from his carriage.

Saturday was devoted to the eastern part of the state, along Lake Huron, between St. John's, a town near Lansing, to this city. He made 15 speeches and had big audiences everywhere. Among the towns in which he spoke were Saginaw, Owosso, Ovid, Bay City, Port Huron, Flint, Durand, Vassar, La Pere, Imlay City, and Mount Clemens, winding up with three speeches in this city.

Factory Resumes Operations.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 21.—The Berkey & Gay furniture factory, the largest in the world, resumed operations Tuesday, after a period of enforced idleness during the business depression. The factory employs more workmen than any of the other institutions in this city, and, although all the men are not taken back at once, they will be put on gradually.

Detroit, Oct. 17.—Edwin Henderson, a young lawyer, has been chosen by the silver democrats to contest with John R. Corliss, republican, for the seat in congress from the First district.

The largest log jam ever seen in the Manistee river extends for 13 miles up from the sorting gap. It is estimated that there are 30,000,000 feet of logs waiting to be sorted. The mills will have plenty of material to begin work on in the spring.

Reports presented to the annual meeting of the grand chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, at Adrian showed 39 new lodges instituted during the past year with an increase of 921 in membership. The next meeting will be held in Detroit.

Furniture Factory Burns.

Holland, Oct. 17.—The West Michigan Furniture company's factory, owned principally by George P. Hummer, democrat-union silver candidate for congress in the Fifth district, was burned to the ground Friday night and is a total loss. The loss, which is total, will amount to about $125,000, with $100,000 insurance. The factory was one of the largest in western Michigan and gave employment to about 400 men and had been running full time. Many of the men lost their tools.

Must Be Given a Place.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 21.—The supreme court has granted a mandamus requiring the Wayne county electoral commission to give the prohibition state ticket the second place on the official ballot. The court declares the gold democratic ticket is entitled to a place on the ballot and to the use of the word "Democratic," and that the fusion ticket must take the place assigned to it by the committee, which is the last on the ballot.

Buried Alive.

Negaunee, Oct. 17.—About three tons of earth fell upon Joseph Rowe while he was employed in the Jackson mine Friday morning, inflicting injuries from which he died about three hours later. It was fully 20 minutes before he was extricated from beneath the mass of earth, his body being terribly mangled. He was 28 years of age and leaves a young widow and child.

Lumber Firm Fails.

Houghton, Oct. 17.—The Sturgeon River Lumber company, the largest and oldest lumbering concern in the copper district, has been placed in charge of E. L. Wright, as trustee for the mortgagees. The difficulties of the company are due exclusively to the depression in the lumber trade and inability to collect outstanding accounts.

Willow, Oct. 17.—Mrs. A. Chamn, an old lady and resident of Sumpter township, was burned to death. While near the stove flames set her dress on fire and she was unable to extinguish them. The poor woman was burned to a crisp and died a short time after.

DOWN THE DANUBE

In an Open Boat—Twelfth Letter of this Interesting Voyage.

Heidelberg, Sept. 9, '96.

EDITOR HERALD:

We are told every day of some danger to which we are coming soon, and are warned with grave looks against trying to go farther. At Mohacs we were informed that there were many "gelsen" below. Not knowing what "gelsen" are, we are rather nervous about them. Sancho decides that they are thieves, and I suspect they are Turks, and we let the matter rest there.

It was in August, of 1526, that the Turks defeated the Hungarians in a great battle near Mohacs. Then Hungary came under the Turkish yoke and was only liberated in 1687 on the same battle-field by Charles of Lorraine. Such events as these constantly enhance the interest of these banks. We passed the mouth of the Drave and approached Dalja. Many amusing mills were anchored in mid-stream near here. The Hungarian names are always written with surname first and given name last. The effect is funny enough. Rank, George is the owner of a mill, on which is painted a saint and a mermaid. The mermaid's tail looks as if it had been done up in curl papers. Near this mill is one with an inscription in German, "God bless the trade of the miller," painted in great letters so that the sentiment covers one whole side of the mill. Beyond are several old arks, which, like Falstaff, are "blasted with antiquity." We were wandering about the city looking for provisions and were not able to find a market. A portly and well dressed old German inquired what we wanted, and when I told our quest, he said, "Kommen sie mit," and we went. He proceeded leisurely until we reached a fine garden surrounded by a high stone wall. There he summoned a workman and giving some orders began showing us the fine points of his garden. At last the servant returned laden with a bountiful supply of corn, cucumbers, tomatoes and a couple of muskmelons. These were sent down to our boat with the old gentleman's compliments. He shook hands with us at parting, wished us a happy journey and warned us solemnly against the "gelsen." We departed, pleased with the hospitality, but worried over the "gelsen." "Perhaps they are having a war down here in Servia or Bulgaria," suggested my wife. "Perhaps, we haven't seen a paper in weeks," I concede. Just then a chimney with a genuine stork's nest, and real storks sitting in it, took our attention and we went rashly on to our boat to drift madly down to the "gelsen."

We had not gone far before a storm with wind caught us in mid stream. To face it and row for an island was the only way to keep afloat. It was a hard struggle and the waves were very high before we reached the shelter of the island. I was so exhausted that I could barely drag the little boat on shore, and with my wife's aid, put up our tent, before the rain descended. The storm having ceased, we proceeded; passed a low muddy island, where long legged storks stood, awkwardly on one leg, and floated by a wharf where a large crowd of workmen were waiting for a ferry and looking as if they had turned out in their night gowns.

As night came on we came to Vukavar. We landed at the mouth of a black, ugly looking river. The mud was bad there and a man advised us to row up the little river to a grassy bank. I rowed up this modern styx, and camped in the very heart of the town, near the market place. The markets open at dawn and close before a respectable American would get up. We had been in much difficulty about getting our supplies. This time they got us up early enough by crowding about our closed tent and asking questions. Such a sight! The whole length of a long street was lined with round willow baskets, large white umbrellas, and every vegetable conceivable piled in heaps. Nor was this all. Upon wooden racks were hung shoes, circle combs, cloth brushes, ropes, hats, tin-ware, wooden spoons; while soaps, perfumery and jewelry, all suited to peasant buyers, were displayed on benches. Besides there were queer little booths, where they served soup and hot milk from large iron boilers. Everybody stared as we wended our way up this lane of curiosities. The shop keepers, who always find out what we are doing before they sell us anything, all warn us with grave faces to beware of the "gelsen." We finally embarked, and as I pulled slowly out of the Styx into the noble stream of the Danube, we speculated in vain as to what "gelsen" were.

Just below the town we met a tug towing a flour mill up stream. The banks grew higher and when Peterwardein was reached we had a superb mountain on our right, and the city of Neusatz, beautifully situated in a plain, on our left. Peterwardein is a grand fortress built upon a rock around which the proud Danube curves. Directly under the fortress runs a railroad tunnel. Upon the mountain side are many charming chateaus. The scene reminds one of the shore of Lake Geneva near Vevey. A bridge of boats connects Neusatz with the fortress. Our little boat asked no favors of the bridge tenders. We just glided between two boats composing the bridge. Upon the platform above stood several peasants with white gowns and red jackets. They hallooed to us, and made frantic gestures, which we construed into some warning against those terrible and mystic "gelsen." After landing to see the tomb of John Capistranus, the celebrated preacher of the Crusades, we resumed our pilgrimage, and as we neared Karlowitz, memorable for the great peace of 1699 between Austria and the Turks, we saw the most remarkable sight which our trip has afforded. The river was about 3-4 of a mile wide at this point. We were lying lazily in the boat with umbrellas up to shield us from the sun. Suddenly we heard the roaring of an animal. We roused ourselves, and, looking about saw not far from us a boat about 15 feet long and four feet wide. Two men were in it. One was paddling desperately, while the other held a rope by which they were compelling a cow to swim the Danube. All at once there rose from the boat another cow, whose feet were tied together. Such fun, we never expect to see again. Both animals roared furiously. The one in the water would try to pull back, and the paddler would cease paddling and club the poor brute into submission. Then the cow in the boat would kick and both men would pound her into a state of quietude. Finally the animal in the water nearly succumbed to fatigue, and the frantic efforts of the men to get ashore before it should drown, were enough to convulse us both with laughter. We could not help having sympathy for the poor animals and the whole thing may be termed piteously funny. We survived merely because we got too far away, finally, to see the exhibition.

In the cliffs at our right we could now see the caves, homes of the cliff dwelling fishermen. Across the wide plain on our left appeared the minarets and towers of Belgrade. But night compelled us to go ashore for a camp. A fisherman came along just as we had selected a nice spot, and began to tell us very excitedly about the "gelsen." I manufactured a sentence which approximated to "What in the deuce are 'gelsen'?" Our friend laconically caught one and showed it to us. "Gelsen" are mosquitoes. C. H. VANTYNE.

Universtty Notes.

Ann Arbor, Oct. 12, '96

EDITOR HERALD:

Work in the State University has begun in earnest, and a goodly number of young men and women from all over the nation have assembled here. The attendance, so far, is about the same as last year, with a slight falling off in the law department and an increase in the Homeopathic Medical College.

The Law Department, despite the lengthening of the course, shows but slight decrease in attendance. The efforts of the Michigan Law School to raise the standard of legal education, have met, seemingly, with the hearty approval of those seeking to enter the profession. What all the young lawyers will do is a question. They come from every part of the country, the West and South-west, next to Michigan, being most strongly represented. Kansas, notably, believes in sending her young seekers after legal honors to the U. of M. Law School.

As a feeler to the political situation, an expression of political preferences was requested from every member of the freshman law class. It was believed that the students, most of them voters, coming from every part of the country, might reasonably be expected to reflect the political sentiments of the sections from which they came. Out of 134 members of the class voting, the silver candidate received 22 votes while the "sound money" men received 112 votes.

The Hon. Chauncey M. DePuy, of New York, lectured before the Students' Lecture Association, Oct. 10. Mr. DePuy was so full of ardor for the cause of "sound money" that he could not forego the pleasure of "hitting the other fellow," even in a non-partisan lecture. He certainly did not enhance his reputation as an orator by his effort here. A stump speech on the political issues of the campaign with the usual accompaniments of personality and trite argument, before a mixed university audience, seemed to say the least, in bad taste. He experienced the, to him, novelty of being hissed.

Mr. DePuy is one of the two remaining members of that group of great American orators of which Blaine, Conklin, Ingersoll and Garfield were members. He is very graceful in gesture, perfectly at ease in every attitude, has a perfect command of language and perhaps combines more of the essentials of the great orator than any other living American, except Mr. Ingersoll.

The co-ed is very much in evidence here. She has invaded every department, and even the subtle mazes of the law has no terrors for her. The very newest "new woman," the latest edition, revised, annotated, and complete up-to-date, has taken possession of the university. She steers her bicycle on the sidewalk with a stoical indifference to the fate of the unlucky pedestrian, who has the temerity to venture on the walk. In the dark ages before bicycles and "new women" came on the stage, the idea prevailed that the sidewalk was designed exclusively for foot passengers but "all is changed."

The University Foot Ball team is preparing to go forth and battle for the honor of the state on the gridiron. The preliminary training is completed and the "Michigan men" are prepared to bruise, kick, and maim their opponents and be bruised, kicked and maimed in their turn in the most civilized and scientific manner. One wonders where all the young doctors the university turns out will practice, but we are relieved on that score when we reflect that foot ball is growing in popular favor. It is a mooted question whether the university team should take along two or three doctors to every man on the team, but the weight of authority seems to favor three. C. V. WISNER.

Special Train to Jackson Meeting

At Jackson will be run over the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Ry. Thursday, October 27th, carrying the Foraker party and all who wish to attend the great Republican rally and to hear him speak. Half fare for the round trip. Special train leaves Tecumseh at 10:57 a. m., leaving Jackson returning at 3:30 p. m.

The Fact that Doctors

frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from catarrh is proof that catarrh is a local and climatic disease. Therefore, unless you can leave home and business, you should use Ely's Cream Balm. Applied directly to the seat of the disease, it effects instant relief and a satisfactory cure after short continuance. No mercury nor injurious drug is contained in the Balm.

EDITOR HERALD:

In my last article the printer made me say, so many "units" of gold is our only unit of value; should have said, so many "grains" of gold is our only unit. This is true because the dollar is the unit in our monetary system. When 23.22 grains of gold with about 3 grains of alloy passes through the mint it becomes the "one" of our standard of money. And whatever its purchasing power may become by an increase or a diminution in quality the purchasing power of every other dollar of currency based upon it is likewise increased or diminished. Never in the history of nations was there an increase in the volume of money that was not an immediate source of blessing to mankind. This is true because increase in the volume of money increases prices of things, increases the need of things, and stimulates human energy to provide them. To increase the volume of money is to depreciate the value of money and appreciate the value of everything which is the real source of happiness and blessing to mankind. The true definition of "depreciated currency" is not "debased currency;" it is appreciated commodities, appreciated products of labor, appreciated bone, muscle and nerve of toil. Appreciated gold is debased humanity, exalted servant, debased master. Appreciated gold is wrong enthroned. About the 53-cent dollar,—the whole of anything is equal to the sum of all its parts and not to the sum of half of its parts, so it is absurd to say we shall have a 53-cent dollar. A dollar under free coinage will be of the same weight, of the same size, of the same appearance, and of the same color and will pass current for 100 cents. Should I be mistaken in this, there is one explanation and that is that all these people who are warning the rest of us in good time to beware, whenever they pay out silver after Mr. Bryan's election will always shove out 47 cents in change with each dollar, just for the satisfaction of having it to say, "I told you so." In answer to Mr. Wisner's presumption that I use the term "free coinage" as synonymous with bimetallism. I certainly do, because the free and unlimitted coinage of silver equally with gold can furnish the only true, scientific bymetallism. By the term "equally" I mean, at a ratio fixed by law. The vital point in a scientific bimetallism is that the debtor has an option to pay in either coin. The vitality of this fact is that the creditor is thereby compelled to exert himself equally with the debtor to maintain the parity fixed by law, and as a consequence we have then the nearest approach to stability in the purchasing power of money, which a gold standard can never supply. But the executive council of the American bankers' association, at St. Louis Sept. 22nd, in their declaration of principles, say that "gold commands all values because it is the most stable in value." That is not true, and this is the answer: Gold commands all values because it is the only standard of value. In the same declaration of principles they assert "mere money changers have always found more profit in a fluctuating than in a stable currency." Gold has been constantly appreciating in value during the last 16 years, i. is, therefore, not a stable currency. If space permits let me answer one other fallacy: Mr. Wisner says, "Not how much but how good," and says that is good, sound sense, whereas quality without regard to quantity is nonsense. A normal quantity is of just as much importance as is good quality. An appreciating quality is a bad quality when applied to money and is the direct result of a too limited quantity. The yellow metal is too limited in amount to answer as the money standard of the whole world. And all the ruin and disaster to the business interests of our country is the result of the experiment, just as Mr. Blain predicted it would be, in his famous speech of Feb. 1878. His words were, "I believe the struggle now going on in this and other countries for the single gold standard will, if successful, produce widespread disaster in and throughout the commercial world." The destruction of silver as (standard) money and the establishment of gold as the sole unit of value must have a ruinous effect on all forms of property except those invested which yield a fixed return in money." In the light of this truth, why do men sleep and slumber? With some it is, beyond a doubt, because of the spirit of avarice or self aggrandizement coupled with a fear of too hard work to keep their investments permanent. With some it is, no doubt, because of party prejudice or hatred, or bitterness and fear of the awful consequences should the party of their love and pride fail to carry the election. There is no fear or danger that any man will be read out of his party because he votes this year for the free and unlimitted coinage of silver. D. W. LOREE.

The Michigan Christian Conference

Was held at Britton, Lenawee county, October 14-17, 1896. The denomination, though not a large one, showed much push, animation and the broadest and most Christian charity.

It was marked throughout with great harmony and spirituality. In their discussion of religious topics the brothers, and sisters, as well, differed, as is not at all unusual in like conferences of other denominations, but always in the most friendly spirit and with the animation of an evident sincerity in their conviction. Christian unity and interdenominational affiliations and courtesy occupied a large place in the program.

It was ably presided over by Rev. J. A. Young, of Lexington, Mich., and the Rev. C. E. Hulbert, D. D., of Detroit, Prof. T. Holmes, D. D., and the young P. W. Reynolds, of Marshall, Mich., were marked men in the convention, as also its secretary, Rev. E. Mudge, of Maple Rapids.

The Christian ladies of Britton did themselves proud in providing for the temporal wants of the convention, furnishing dinners and supplies in the church parlor below and making the convention socially, as well as religiously, a pronounced success. B. L. B.

Have You a Cold?

If so, then, instead of taking so much quinine and other strong medicines, take a pleasant, and mild stomach and bowel remedy, which will cleanse the system, and you will be surprised how quickly the cold will leave you. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do this better than any other. Trial size 10c (10 doses 10c), larger sizes 50c and $1, at Orr & Temple's.

Local anti-saloon leagues are being organized in every town in Branch and Calhoun counties.

My Friend—

Like others I need money to do a cash business with, and if you owe me I will consider it a great favor if you will come in and pay me now without my being to the expense of mailing to you statement or spending my time to come and see you.

It costs considerable to see each one when you have a large number on your books, and you ought not to expect me to do it. I give credit as a favor, and hope you will bring me the cash now.

If you can not pay all cash now, bring what you can and settle by note till you are able to meet it.

You certainly can do this and expecting you will, I thank you in advance. Yours truly,

SUDDENLY CALLED.

Unexpected Death at Atlanta, Ga., of Ex-Speaker Crisp.

Ill for Some Time from Malaria—His Demise, However, Was Unlooked For—Death of Grant's Secretary of the Interior, Columbus Delano.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 24.—Hon. Charles Frederick Crisp, speaker of the Fifty-first and Fifty-second congresses, died at Holmes' sanitarium here at 1:45 o'clock Friday afternoon. A paroxysm of pain in the heart produced death, the paroxysm probably resulting from a rupture of the heart as the result of fatty degeneration.

Suffered from Malaria.

Judge Crisp came to Atlanta six weeks ago for treatment. He was then suffering from a typical case of malarial fever which had developed in his home at Americus. He spent June, July and a part of August in the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee. His return to middle Georgia during the very hottest period of the summer developed the fever. After a week's treatment by Drs. Holmes and Davis the fever disappeared and the judge improved slowly. Last week he was out driving several times and he was getting stronger until Sunday night, when he was attacked with symptoms of his old trouble, pneumonia. Dr. J. S. Todd was called in, and on Tuesday congestion of the lungs disappeared, but the patient was so weak that Mrs. Crisp telegraphed for her children, and all came next day. On Wednesday and Thursday Judge Crisp's condition improved, but he received no callers.

EX-SPEAKER CRISP.

His Death.

His family were hopeful until ten o'clock at night, when he had a paroxysm of pain near the heart. At midnight there was another paroxysm, and they continued at intervals all through the night and forenoon. He suffered intensely, but was conscious up to the very last. The last attack occurred at 1:40, Judge Crisp dying five minutes later, surrounded by his family.

His Career.

[Mr. Crisp was one of the best-liked men in congress. He commanded the respect of friends and opponents by his abilities and his generally unruffled judicial fairness, which was broken up only once or twice, during the bitter controversy with Speaker Reed over the Reed rules. He was born in Sheffield, England, where his parents had gone on a visit in 1845, and this fact took him out of the category of vice presidential possibilities when some years ago his name was suggested for that office. He was brought to the United States before he was a year old, was educated in Savannah and Macon, Ga., served in the confederate army and was made a prisoner, was admitted to the bar in 1866, became successively state solicitor-general, judge, congressman and speaker of the house of representatives in the Fifty-second and Fifty-third congresses. His congressional career in the lower house extended over 14 years, and he was the choice of his party for the United States senate when he died.]

COLUMBUS DELANO DEAD.

Ex-Secretary of the Interior Expires Suddenly at His Home.

Columbus, O., Oct. 24.—Hon. Columbus Delano, secretary of the interior under Grant, died suddenly at 11 a. m Friday at Lake Howe, his suburban home near Mount Vernon. He was 87 years old. Mr. Delano died suddenly and unexpectedly. There was no connection between his death and the accident to Mrs. Delano on Sunday. She is at the point of death.

Mr. Delano was a man of national reputation. He died while sitting in his chair.

[Mr. Delano was born in Shoreham, Vt., June 5, 1809, and came to Mount Vernon in 1831. The honorary degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him by Kenyon college, of which he was one of the trustees. In 1844 he came within two votes of receiving the nomination of the whigs for governor of Ohio. He was a delegate to the national convention at Chicago in 1860 which nominated Abraham Lincoln for president, and rendered yeoman service in behalf of the martyred president. In 1861 he was appointed commissary general of Ohio. In 1863 he was elected to the house of representatives of Ohio. He was elected to the Twenty-ninth congress. He served on the committee on invalid pensions in congress, and made a vigorous speech against the Mexican war. Mr. Delano was appointed by President Grant commissioner of internal revenue. In 1870 he received the appointment of the secretary of the interior, which he resigned in 1875.]

Another Record Broken.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Arthur E. Smith, of this city, reduced the 24-hour American bicycle road record, making 295¾ miles in that time, thereby breaking the former record of 277 miles.

Juneau, Ore., Oct. 27.—It has been discovered that Carleton F. Wells, who was supposed to have died here two years ago of heart disease, was buried alive.

A TRIPLE MURDER.

Woman and Her Two Children Slain in Missouri.

Horribly Mangled Bodies of the Victims Found by Neighbors—Perpetrators of the Crime and Its Cause Unknown.

St. Louis, Oct. 28.—A special from Richmond, Mo., says that a triple murder occurred eight miles northeast of that city Monday night. The victims were the wife and two little children of Jesse Winner. The children were aged three and one years, respectively. Winner is a miner and works in the mines at Richmond. The victims were evidently killed early Monday night, but their bodies were not discovered until Tuesday morning. When found by a neighbor, the body of Mrs. Winner, her head mashed out of all shape, was lying in the yard in a pool of blood. The body of the oldest girl was found on the bed and that of the baby on the floor, under the bed. The throats of the children were cut and the jugular veins were severed. All around the house and in the yard were evidences of a terrible struggle, and the poor girl did not give up until the assassin had struck her a deadly blow on the head, cleaving the skull and cutting the top of the head off. There is no clew to the assassin. A little deaf and dumb girl, the child of Mrs. Winner by a former marriage, was present when the murder was committed, but is unable to tell anything of the crime.

COST NINE LIVES.

Awful Result of a Collision Between Trains Near St. Louis.

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—A head-end collision occurred on the St. Louis & San Francisco railway near Meramec Highlands at ten o'clock Sunday morning, by which nine persons were killed and a score injured. The scene of the wreck is 13 miles west of this city. The Valley Park accommodation train, going east very fast on a down grade, came into collision with the second section of a west-bound excursion train going to St. James, Mo., and carrying 240 G. A. R. men and their families to assist in the dedication of a home for the aged widows of veterans.

Well-Known Jurist Dead.

Brattleboro, Vt., Oct. 28.—Judge Royal Tyler, for 50 years judge of probate for the Marlboro district of Windham county, died Tuesday afternoon, aged 94. He was born in Brattleboro April 19, 1802. His father was a man of distinction, having been elected in 1801 as a judge of the supreme court of Vermont and promoted to chief judge in 1807. He was also the author of "Contrast," the first American play ever staged and first produced in the old John street theater, New York, April 16, 1786. The younger Royal had held the office of judge of probate since 1851.

A Church Burned.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Fire broke out in the Third Unitarian church, Monroe and Laflin streets, just as the morning services were beginning, and the structure was totally destroyed. The congregation made its exit quietly. The loss is estimated at about $20,000; insured for $13,000. The pastor, Rev. Vila Blake, suffered the loss of a valuable library. The fire originated from a faulty furnace.

National Bank Dividends.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The comptroller of the currency has declared dividends as follows: First dividend, ten per cent., National bank of Jefferson, Tex.; third dividend, ten per cent., Ninth national bank, of Dallas, Tex.; fourth dividend, ten per cent., Baker City national bank, of Baker City, Oregon; fourth dividend, 20 per cent., First national bank of Redfield, S. D.

Two Boston Widows Asphyxiated.

Boston, Oct. 28. — Mrs. Elizabeth Hart, a widow 60 years of age, and her daughter, Mrs. Sarah J. Stevenson, 35 years old and also a widow, were found asphyxiated Tuesday forenoon at their home. A gas jet was turned partly on and the room was full of gas. The deaths are believed to have been caused by accident.

A Big Cargo.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 26.—The steamer Algoa sailed from this port for Liverpool with the largest cargo ever taken from an American port, consisting of 18,260 bales of cotton, 104,000 bushels of grain, and 640 tons of other freight, all valued at $1,000,000.

Rural Free Delivery.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Auburn township, in Sangamon county, has been selected by Frank H. Jones, first assistant postmaster general, as the place for testing the rural free delivery service in Illinois, to begin November 1.

Bishop Whipple Marries.

New York, Oct. 24.—Bishop Henry B. Whipple, of Minnesota, was married in this city to Mrs. Evangeline Simpson, widow of a wealthy cotton manufacturer of Massachusetts. The bishop is 74 years old and his bride 35.

Margaret Mather Again Single.

Milwaukee, Oct. 26.—Gustave Pabst was divorced from Margaret Mather in secret in the circuit court in this city last Tuesday. Judge Johnson granted the divorce on a complaint by Mr. Pabst which alleged that his wife was cruel and inhuman and that she horsewhipped him on the street October 3, 1895.

Chas. E. Judge returned Friday from a two weeks' visit with his old home friends at Clayville, N. Y. He expects his parents will move here in about two months.

A large McKinley and Hobart banner spans Washington street from Peter Alexander's to the Priest house, occupied by his son-in-law. Peter is very proud of it.

Owing to the delay of the one o'clock train from the south Friday, Hon. Thos. Barkworth and the other speakers were unable to reach Clinton for the afternoon meeting as expected.

A special meeting of the Order of the Eastern Star is called for Wednesday evening, Nov. 4. The order is growing quite rapidly and interest in the beautiful ritual increasing.

Quite a number attended the silver rally at Tecumseh Friday evening and heard Congressman Charles Hartman, of Montana. They declare him the finest speaker they have heard.

After the parade last Monday night, consisting of 23 horsemen and 112 on foot bearing torchlights, Charles Townsend, of Jackson, delivered a very able address from the republican standpoint, to an enthusiastic crowd, at the town hall.

The woolen mill was closed an hour earlier than usual Tuesday forenoon, to enable the hands to see and hear Ex-Gov. Foraker, of Ohio, who spoke from the rear end of the train, which halted on Chicago street for about fifteen minutes.

The acquaintances and friends of old Mr. McElroy, who lived in the east part of Clinton township, were surprised and shocked last Monday morning to hear that he had died suddenly of heart failure. Mr. McElroy had lived on the farm where he died, a great many years and was respected by all his neighbors. The funeral was held at the residence on Thursday, October 22nd, conducted by James Hause of this place.

Arthur Sewall still is, as he has been for a long time past, president of the Bath (Maine) national bank.

When wear begins to exceed repair in your body you are going to fall sick. The signs of it are: loss of flesh, paleness, weakness, nervousness, etc. The repair needed is food. You think you eat enough, and yet you feel that you wear out more tissue, energy, nerve-force, than your food makes for you. The difficulty is that you do not digest enough. And this is so serious it is worth sitting down seriously to think about. If you can't digest what you eat take a few doses of Shaker Digestive Cordial. The effect of it will be to increase your flesh and make you feel stronger. You won't fall sick. Proof that it is in control of your repair apparatus. It's easy enough to test this for yourself. Take a few bottles of Shaker Digestive Cordial.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Labor's Commission to Mexico.

The report of the commission of inquiry sent to Mexico by the Chicago Trade and Labor assembly to investigate the social and industrial conditions that prevail under the silver standard in that country was recently made public.

This commission consisted of Messrs. Maas and Enright, members of the Chicago Trade and Labor assembly, who were selected with no reference to any predilections on the currency question which they may have entertained.

The report is a scathing and unanswerable arraignment of silver monometallism as a currency system. It is a staggering blow to the free silver propaganda that seeks to deceive and betray American labor. The revelations it contains are a stinging rebuke to the repudiationists who are endeavoring to persuade American mechanics that their condition can be improved by Mexicanizing our currency.

In the comforts and necessities of life the Mexican laborers, according to the investigations of Messrs. Maas and Enright, are down to the minimum, and in no time in history could their condition have been more deplorable, or the race would be extinct. Special stress is laid on the significant fact that the principal inducement offered capital to invest in Mexico is the cheap native labor to be found and the absence of all danger of strikes. This fact alone should be sufficient to impel American labor to resist with all its mighty power the attempts to Mexicanize our currency.

Under the silver standard in Mexico labor is the cheapest commodity in the country. In Mexico "to don the raiment of toil is to wear the garb of servility." The toiler lives and dies a veritable beast of burden and performs his tasks "with the impassive indifference of an automaton."

It deserves the careful study and consideration of every intelligent American wageworker. It is entitled to his respectful credulity, because it comes not from economic scholars or from dreamy sociological theorists, but from plain toilers, "inured to the hard knocks of the factory and workshop."

The Gold Dollar Measured by Labor.

The proper test of the value of an article is the labor required to produce it.

The test applies as well to the gold dollar as to everything else.

If less labor is required now to produce a gold dollar than was required in 1860 or in 1873—that is, if a given amount of gold will purchase less labor, or if, in other words, wages are higher—then by the labor test, the only genuine test, the gold dollar must have gone down instead of up.

And no silver advocate has attempted to deny that wages have risen.

The senate report on wages and prices made in 1892 shows conclusively that wages have increased over 68 per cent since 1860 and nearly 24 per cent since 1870—in gold.

The purchasing power of wages has increased over 75 per cent since 1860 and nearly 32 per cent since 1870.

The cost of gold, measured by labor, has declined 41 per cent since 1860 and nearly 28 per cent since 1870.

Taking the cost of gold, measured by labor, in 1860 as the standard of comparison, the cost of gold from 1870 to 1891, the last year included in the Aldrich senate report, has declined as follows:

1870	.73	1881	.638
1871	.654	1882	.654
1872	.652	1883	.628
1873	.678	1884	.644
1874	.685	1885	.642
1875	.712	1886	.642
1876	.745	1887	.638
1877	.725	1888	.633
1878	.719	1889	.614
1879	.717	1890	.594
1880	.699	1891	.608

The labor test confirms the result of the interest test, that gold has not appreciated in value.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

From Secretary Windom's Last Speech.

The quality of circulation is even more important than the quantity. Numerous devices for enlarging credit may, and often do, avert the evils of a deficient circulation, and a redundancy may sometimes modify its own evils before their results become universal, but for the baleful effects of a debased and fluctuating currency there is no remedy except by the costly and difficult return to sound money. As poison in the blood permeates arteries, veins, nerves, brain and heart, so does a debased and fluctuating currency permeate all the arteries of trade, paralyze all kinds of business and bring disaster to all kinds of people.

How many hours a day, at 8½ cents an hour, Mexican style, would an American workingman have to work in order to own his own house? That is a free silver question.

There is the same difference between gold arguments and silver sophistries that there is between sunshine and moonshine.

What Makes Interest Low.

What keeps interest high is uncertainty. That means lack of confidence. That means low credit and high interest.

In Idaho, Montana and other far west states the average interest on farm loans is over 10 per cent. Idaho has had the severest laws enacted against usury, but these have not made interest low. Montana has failed to pay her own drafts. Those who have money to loan are afraid to lend in states where the state itself fails to pay its debts. In the older states where debts never have been repudiated the interest on farm loans averages from 5½ to 6½ per cent. This is because men who have money to loan believe that they will get their money back. They do not have to charge high insurance in the interest for fear they may lose the principal.

The reason western farmers have had to pay high interest is that those who had money to lend were uncertain what they would get back. They had been uncertain because they feared repudiation or debased money. Repudiation by southern states for years kept money out of the south and kept interest high. The free coinage movement at the west has had the same effect.

When sound money comes to stay, those with money to lend will be more ready to lend it and ready to lend it cheaper. This is truly "cheap money."

When the last bonds were sold, the secretary of the treasury stated to congress that he could save $16,000,000 interest if congress would say that the bonds would be payable not only "in coin," but "in gold." People expected they would be paid in gold, but they wanted to be sure. The difference between being half sure and being sure was $16,000,000 in interest.

It is "cheap interest" the western farmer needs, not "cheap money." He can get "cheap interest" with sound money, and in no other way.

That is true of all borrowers who need money to carry on their business.—New York World.

Swindling Old Soldiers.

The value of the pension secured by the wounded veterans, whose monthly payment from the government is in a great many cases their sole support, depends entirely upon its purchasing power. If that power be high, it will buy a much larger supply of the necessities of life than if calculated in cheap dollars. It requires no argument to prove that, if this country adopts the silver standard, prices as based on dollars containing 50 cents' worth of silver will be just twice as high as they are now. Values will be no higher, and the farmer or worker will get no more than he does now, but nominal prices will be doubled. As the number of dollars paid for pensions is fixed, it follows that if paid in silver dollars the pensioner would receive only one-half as much, measured in commodities, rent, etc., as he does under the gold standard.

These are facts which the silverites have never attempted to deny. Nor have they ever proposed to double the pensions which are paid to the old soldiers, their widows and orphans. Now, then, can they expect the country to adopt a financial system which would dishonestly rob the pensioners of one-half of their income?

The Workingman's Alternative.

If our workingmen think their wages are too high by 50 per cent and would rather have them paid in dollars that will buy only half as much in the markets and at the stores, they will vote for Mr. Bryan and free coinage of silver. If they think, as we do, that this would be "free and unlimited" folly on their part, they will stand by Thomas Jefferson's common sense doctrine "that dollars should be coined as near the market ratio as possible, so that they will buy 100 cents' worth of goods wherever they are tendered.—Baltimore Sun.

Why Not Call Francs Dollars?

As well might the farmer and laborer think to make a profit by selling his farm or labor for francs instead of dollars because it takes 5 francs to make a dollar, and he would consequently get five times as many of them, as to think that by selling his farm or his labor for silver dollars, two of which make a gold dollar, that he would make a profit by so doing.

Free silver in Mexico is a great institution. Wages averaging 35 cents among all kinds of workingmen are a great institution, too—for Mexico. They are not desirable enough, however, in American eyes, to be made part and parcel of our civilization.

EDWIN WILLITS DEAD.

Ex-Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Expires at Washington.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The flag on the agricultural building was at half-mast Saturday on account of the death of Edwin Willits, who was assistant secretary of agriculture during the administration of President Harrison. Mr. Willits died suddenly at his home in this city Friday evenig. He became ill at his office about four o'clock. He was taken home in a carriage, a physician having been summoned to meet him there. The doctor found that Mr. Willits had been stricken with a form of kidney trouble from which he had suffered at different times for several years. Every effort was made to restore him, but he gradually sank into a state of coma and died in a few hours.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—The funeral services over the remains of the late Edwin Willits were held at his home in this city Monday. Secretary Morton and all the chiefs of the agricultural department were present. The services were conducted by Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church. Dr. Radcliffe delivered a very impressive and touching sermon. The body was sent to Monroe, Mich., for burial. It was accompanied by the widow, Mrs. Willits; her sister, Miss Ingersoll, and her son, George S. Willits, of Chicago. The Washington alumni of the Michigan agricultural college, of which institution Mr. Willits was once president, met in the parlors of Willard's hotel Saturday night and passed a resolution of condolence.

Monroe, Oct. 28.—The remains of Edwin Willits, who died at Washington on the 23d inst., were interred here Tuesday with masonic honors. The remains, accompanied by Mrs. Willits, George S. Willits and Miss Ingersoll, arrived at noon and lay in state in the Presbyterian church until 2:30 o'clock. During that time hundreds of his fellow townsmen viewed the remains. Rev. L. B. Bissell conducted the funeral and delivered a very touching and impressive sermon, in which he paid a glowing and well-worded tribute to the memory of the deceased. Mr. Willits was for many years, before entering public life and during his congressional career, a resident of Monroe, and enjoyed a wide and very favorable acquaintance with the people of his county.

[Mr. Willits was born April 24, 1830. He was raised on a farm in Michigan and his earlier years were devoted to the duties of a farmer's son in summer and attending district schools in winter. At the age of 20 he entered the University of Michigan, where he distinguished himself as a diligent and thorough student. His class was graduated two years later than that of his college mate and friend, Secretary of Agriculture Morton. He entered upon the profession of law and settled at Monroe, where he achieved eminence in his profession, and was elected member of the house of representatives for that district. He served three terms and subsequently was made president of the agricultural college of Michigan. He was elected prosecuting attorney of Monroe county in 1860, and to a membership of the state board of education in the same year, and was re-elected in 1866, holding the position 12 years. He was on the commission to revise the constitution of the state in 1873, was editor of the Monroe Commercial from 1856 to 1861. Mr. Willits also had charge of the government exhibit at the world's fair. He was called by President Harrison to accept the position of assistant secretary of agriculture which place he filled with great efficiency during the administration of Gen. Rusk and eight months longer—up to January 1, 1894—remaining by special request, as assistant to Secretary Morton. Mr. Willits was a splendid specimen of American citizenship, intelligent, honest and conscientious. He leaves a reputation for fidelity to trusts and integrity in the discharge of all duties, public and private, upon which there is not a spot or blemish.]

Mines Will Resume.

Ishpeming, Oct. 25.—W. K. Matteson, of Boston, president of the Lake Superior Iron company, who has been looking over the mines here, states that the company will work its mines with full forces during the winter. This means steady employment to over 1,000 men. The Pittsburg & Lake Angeline mine, ordinarily employing 800 men, now idle, will probably resume mining with a full force next month.

Killed in a Well.

Grand Rapids, Oct. 22.—A fatal accident, of which Charles Miller, an employe of the Grand Rapids plaster company, was the victim, occurred about 11 o'clock Wednesday morning on the company's property a short distance west of the Eagle mills. Miller was repairing the walls of a well when the surrounding earth caved in on him, burying him alive. He was dead when taken out.

Saginaw Lad Wins.

New York, Oct. 28.—The fight between George Lavigne, of Saginaw, Mich., and Jack Everhardt, of New Orleans, to decide the lightweight boxing championship of the world, took place at the Bohemian sporting club's rooms Tuesday night. Lavigne won in the 24th round.

Another Promise to Pay.

Benton Harbor, Oct. 24.—It is now announced that the $118,000 due the Pottawatomie Indians from the government will be paid in this city November 4. The announcement of this payment has been made many times in the past few years, but it has always been delayed for some reason or other.

Suicide of an Insane Farmer.

Menominee, Oct. 27.—Peter Matteson, a farmer, committed suicide by drowning in the river. He was subject to fits of insanity. The man strapped his hands and feet together and drew his head forward by means of the strap so that it rested on his breast. He leaves a wife and two children.

A Hunter Killed.

Kingsley, Oct. 27.—Claude Putnam, 23 years old, accidentally shot himself while hunting near here, the charge entering his abdomen. He died in a few hours.

Jackson, Oct. 24.—James Deyo, turfman and breeder of fast horses, notably Small Hopes, died at his home in this city. He was 78 years old and had been ill several months.

Hints or Kicks? Which? Happy experience, coming from hints—or a sad one from kicks. As to cleanliness, if you want the happy experience, take the hints that Pearline gives. Use Pearline for all kinds of washing and you have ease and economy. Is there a hint in the fact that hundreds of millions of packages of Pearline have been used, and the sale increases? If you want sad experience, take the old way with soap, and rubbing and scrubbing. That's hard for you, and for the things that you wash. It's all rub, rub, rub. 429 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

DOWN THE DANUBE

In an Open Boat—Thirteenth Letter of this Interesting Voyage.

Heidelberg, Germany, Sept. 14, '96.

EDITOR HERALD:

After the deep mystery of the "geisen" was aired, we passed the night unharmed by the monsters. Eagerly on the morrow we arose and got afloat. Belgrade was not far away. From the first day of our voyage, and more earnestly each day, we had been cautioned about venturing into Servia, Bulgaria, and Roumania. These countries were peopled with all sorts of aerial, aquatic and terrestrial devils—so thought the people on the upper Danube. We had seen other terrors vanish as we approached them, and were not daunted. We stopped half an hour at Semlin, to see the remains of Hunyade's castle. The hero died here in 1456. Then we floated to the mouth of the Save and, after a hard row up stream, reached the Belgrade steamboat landing. We were met by a genial, kindly disposed officer, who talked enough German to explain the red tape necessary for a visit. Leaving our passports in the hands of the officials, we walked up into that strange Servian city. Everything, everybody, was so strange. The old ruined fort is different from any fort we have ever seen. During the Turkish wars, it was of utmost importance; now the walls are used to support the unsteady houses of fishermen. Children crawl through the port holes and along the dilapidated walls. Over from the fortress is the Turkish town with its mosques and soaring minarets. Then back to the Save and up the long "Milan" street, past the university and museum of Servian antiquities, until far up in the city we find the American consul, who is very kind to us. I go and bring our passport which he visees for Roumania and Bulgaria. We have coffee with him and after giving us some English books, Poe, Lytton and Twain, he bids us goodbye with a hearty Godspeed.

As we were returning to the river, I tried to get a pecture of the royal palace. A guard at once came up and demanded that I let him examine the kodak. I had no objections, and having allayed his suspicions by examining our marketing bag also, he allowed us to pass on. My wife noted, in Belgrade, the following: "The ladies wear black silk or satin zouave jackets with flowing sleeves. The army officers, and we have seen many, are very handsome, without exception, and are extremely polite. They wear blue coats and cardinal trousers." We were very courteously treated upon our departure. Our boat had been carefully watched all day and was, with all its contents, intact. At the next small town I stopped to get drinking water. As I climbed up the steep hillside, I entered a small farm yard. Seemingly from every point of the compass came a howl, and in a moment I was in the midst of pack of dogs, lean and gaunt and hungry, each barking savagely. I tried the old ruse of saying "get down," in an off-hand way, but they evidently misunderstood or were not very good linguists. Then I kicked and swung my water-pail vigorously. Just then came a stalwart Servian with a terrible voice and, still more effective, a volley of clubs. The dogs scattered, yelping. I thanked my rescuer with a mixture of English, German and Hungarian, which neither of us understood. He pointed out the town spring in the distance, and I got the water after admiring a very pretty group of peasant girls, with large jugs upon their heads, waiting their turn.

We were soon steaming down the river again. I say "steaming," because it was terribly hot and the exercise of rowing made me perspire copiously. As the sun was setting, and our view was limited by the trees which bordered the river, Sancho began to read from Poe's Tales which the consul had given us. The story was "The Little Gold Bug," and if you have read it you will understand how we forgot all and drifted unmindful of the necessary camping place until it was too dark to read and also too dark to see the shores plainly. The river is a mile and a half in width at this point and we were in mid stream. I rowed for the right bank. It was very dark before we neared it. We could see here and there, like will 'o th' wisps, the lights of the fishermen. The bank proved to be perpendicular. No landing there. Voices sounded very plainly over the waters and we could hear strange cries toward the left bank. I pulled eagerly over there and found another bank perpendicular. The darkness was simply appalling now, for clouds covered the sky. Again I saw a light. I rowed nervously toward it. We were very near to it, when my wife cried, "Why, it is a steamboat!" In the darkness I could only guess how to get out of the monster's path. Fortune favored and we saw the barge move swiftly by us in the gloom. Despairing of landing, we decided to float all night. Yet I continued to attempt landing, and about twelve o'clock we were delighted to hear the grating of a gravel beach upon which I had pulled our little boat.

At dawn we awoke to find ourselves in front of a small, dirty Servian town. These towns are a mixture of straw-stacks and huts, alternate houses and straw domes. The banks are high on the Servian side, and as we voyaged that day we could see the peasant beating the grain with a flail and throwing it high in the air to remove the chaff. Their favorite amusement seems to be mounting a horse and urging him far into the river to make him swim. They don't seem to distinguish between a horse and a hippopotamus. The Servian peasant costume is a white linen tunic and frock and a broad, red band at the waist.

Without adventure we passed Semendria, with its odd Turkish fortress, and Rama, the Servian fort with scarcely one stone left upon another. But on the morning following we had an experience which came near abruptly closing this strange, eventful history. We had camped on an island near O Palanka. The wind was pretty stiff and was increasing. We had no food and must cross over to O. Palanka. As we passed the end of the island, we found the waves so large that only by keeping them dead-ahead could we keep afloat. Thus we drifted until a bend in the river around a huge promontory let the wind strike us at right angles. Such a choppy sea on a river I never saw. I made up my mind that we should be overturned. My wife evidently thought likewise, but said very calmly, "I will get hold of the boat and we will gradually drift ashore." A very brave resolution, but no one except an experienced swimmer could have kept his head above water among such waves. Well, we battled with the ever increasing waves and at last were beaten ashore on a mud bank. As I stepped out, I went knee deep in mud. Then I waded and drew while my wife pushed the boat with an oar, until we reached the town. Completely exhausted, we bought provisions and settled in our tent to eat and rest.

EDITOR HERALD:—

I have thought my brother Tindall to be conscientious. When he deliberately makes a false statement, I am doubtful. I have not threatened him with personal violence and am sorry that he should so effectually wring his own neck by making a misstatement of fact. In trying to exhonorate his party he says, "Any political platform utterances contravening statutes should not be accepted." I want to say to him quietly, and yet so forc bly that he will not forget it, that the statutory enactment of Feb. 12, '73, demonetizing silver as primary or standard money, contravenes every principle of honesty and justice, because it deprived the American people of the best and most effectual means they had of maintaining the nearest approach to stability in the purchasing power of their money. It is but honest and just that we return to a bimetallic standard for we have not had stability in values since the day we began the experiment of standing, and trying to walk on our one leg "gold." The platform utterances of the republican party in '88 and '92, "contravening," as he says, this statute of '73, were altogether patriotic and righteous, and it comes with poor grace for our brother, at this late day, to say they "shonld not be accepted" as of any worth. Too true, they are of no worth. The republican party, because it has gone back on those utterances and for no other reason under heaven, finds itself today in a deep, dark hole, only to be deeper and darker after the people have spokon as they are already prepared to speak. But not realizing either pain or embarrassment, he goes on to wring his neck some more. He says, "Standard money relates only to the kind, quality and quantity of the material of which it is made." That is not true. Standard money relates a thousand times more to its function or use as money than it does to anything of which it is made. The exchange value or purchasing power is the all-important thing with money, and any standard of value which commands the value of the products of labor so unmercifully low as at the present time, is a cheat and a robber. The true function of money is to measure values with some reference to the principles of equity and justice. It can do this only when furnished in sufficient quantity by government, without interest, to facilitate the widest possible exchange of the products of toil This truth is the more profound when we reflect that an abundant supply of money directly opens up the highway for civilization to advance in. The highest advancement is possible only by the widest possible exchange of the commodities of the world and the highest intelligence and virtue of the people. But my opponent gives his argument entirely away when he says, "When the trade dollar was provided for, the 412 1-2 grain dollar was left out of the law:" and further, in referring to the coinage of the trade dollar he recites the wording of the law, "and no deposit of silver for other coinage shall be received." By virtue of that clause the free coinage of silver was prohibited from that day forth. Up to that day silver had free and unlimited access to the mints to be coined into 412 1-2 grain dollars, which had always been the unit of value and a standard equally with gold, and the virtue of the law could not be impaired though there had not been a dollar coined. Mistrusting the folly of his argument he "admits, to save contention, that silver was demonetized in '73," and there, half repenting, says, "but it amounted to nothing as there was no silver to be demonitized," but the fact is, there was an increasing amount of silver dollars being issued and had been for several years. Beginning in 1870, there was coined nearly three million up to Jan. '73 and from that date to Feb 12 nearly half a million more. Then they demonetized the "dollar of our daddies" and issued the trade dollar as a makeshift. The statute utterly prohibited the coinage of any more standard silver dollars from that date and made, by express declaration, 23.22 grains of pure gold the only and sole unit of value, which remains to this day. I have no pleasure in heaping ridicule on a fallen brother, but duty requires plain speech. His statemnnt that the Bland-Allison act of '18 and the Sherman act of '90 remonetized silver, is a most nonsensical misstatement of fact. The Bland bill did contemplate the remonetization of silver, but as it passed Congress and became law and known as the Bland-Allison act, the silver bird had its wings clipped. The repeal of that law and of the Sherman law in '93, was simply to damn the bird because it could n't fly. Since brother Tindall is the only man in the realm who knows that silver has not been demonetized, he ought to have an interview with Mr. McKinley and Mr. Bryan immediately, and lay the fact before them, for surely if he is right there is altogether too much ado about nothing.

EDITOR HERALD:—

I have never lost my love for old Tecumseh or its people, and have read with interest the papers upon the money question which have appeared recently in the Herald. While that question is most important, it is not the only issue in this rather unusual campaign, and it ought not to be used to blind the eyes of intelligent men as to what the election of Bryan, with his following, means to this fair land of ours which we love. Those who live in the larger cities have better opportunities of observing this than those living in the smaller towns where there is populistic, anarchistic element. Here is a report taken from yesterday's Sentinal of a Bryan meeting held at north side town hall, this city, on last Saturday night. I should like to have some of my old friends who think of voting for Bryan know with what kind of a company they are marching.

Four speakers were introduced to the audience, with the proud distinction of having been jail birds, Debs, Whip, Kelliher, Schilling, was the quartette. The first named did not boast in an unseemly manner of his incarceration in Woodstock jail. The audience relieved him of all necessity on that score. He had been too prominent an offender to make such a course on his part necessary, even if the chairman had neglected to do it for him.

Debs discussed the money question to some extent, appealed to laboring men to stand by the candidates of the Democratic and Popocratic party, and almost canonized Robert Schilling as a subject fit for congressional honors. Then some enthusiastic creature in the hall shouted, "What is the matter with Debs for president in 1900?" This gave the leader of the disastrous railroad strike of 1894 an opportunity to smile serenely and declare that he would accept no office in the gift of the American people; that he would rather raise up one poor, downtrodden son of Adam and give him his freedom than occupy the presidential chair. Mr. Debs then retired gracefully, and when he attempted to leave the hall the crowd shouted and yelled itself hoarse, and nearly crushed each other in attempts to get near enough to shake his hands.

Peter J. Whip, of Cleveland, was introduced as the next speaker distinguished by reason of his having been incarcerated in the jail at Cleveland. Whip is a beardless boy, lean and hungry in appearance. He began his oration with the declaration that he knew Bob Schilling in Ohio seventeen years ago; that Schilling was one of the truest hearted men that ever stepped in shoe leather; that he had been put on his "uppers" and forced to leave Ohio because of his loyalty to the union workingman. Mark Hanna was denominated an industrial cannible who lived outside the city limits of Cleveland to save taxes; he had hired a murderer named Ramsey to break up the Seaman's union in Cleveland; and the coalminers' union in Pennsylvania, and and when this thief, and murderer, and thug had accomplished Hanna's work, Hanna had rewarded him with a free trip around the world. Rourke Cockran had been in England for seven years trying to break into the British parliament, but the Bank of England would not allow him to do so because it had more effective work for him to do on this side of the pond. Mr. Whip then declared that the union laboring men of the United States were going to inaugurate the greatest strike in the annals of time on Nov. 3; they would march out at 6 o'clock in the morning and in twelve hours it would be brought to a successful close; there would be no starving wife or hollow-eyed children to mock their efforts on this occasion. "Remember the sound of the cannon at Homestead," he shouted; "the crack of the Winchester at Chicago and in Idaho." Remember the men who were put in Woodstock jail," he continued. "There will be no crack of a Winchester in this strike; the silent ballot will win the fight, and put a boycott on the necks in the White house."

Chairman Schindler, as a prelude to the introduction of the next speaker, said he had heard a lawyer, a prominent Republican of Milwaukee, say that McKinley would be elected without doubt. When another questioned his judgment and expressed a belief in the election of Bryan, the lawyer had replied that six months after Bryan was inaugurated there would be a revolution in this country. Mr. Schindler cautioned him that that was a dangerous thing to say in the present condition of the standing army. There were cries from all parts of the house of "Let her come," when reference was made to the possibilities of a revolution.

"I don't know as the next speaker has been in jail," remarked the chairman, "but I believe he has been. I have the honor to introduce Sylvester Kelliher, of Chicago."

"I've been there," said Mr. Kelliher. "I was in Woodstock jail with Debs."

"Good boy, Kelliher."

"Bully boy."

"That's the stuff." Mingled with thunders of applause greeted this admission.

"If the election of Bryan means revolution, the election of McKinley means slavery," shouted the speaker, "and you may take your choice. J. Pierpont Morgan, Rothschild's agent in this country, has more influence with this government in shaping its laws and controlling its destinies than the 70,000,000 of people who make up its population." He then drew a gloomy picture of the condition of the workingmen, declaring that they were being starved and ground into the dust by the corporations and trusts; that they were filling the world full of children to live without hope; that women were obliged to sell their souls to keep from starving and that there were but three ways open for them to live; one was to work, another was to steal, and the third was a life of shame. To perpetuate these conditions they had turned every railroad roundhouse into a Republican wigwam to continue the government of injunction.

Robert Schilling was the next speaker. He said he too could claim the distinguished honor of having been a jail bird. Had he been convicted on the charge for which he had been arrested, he would have been liable to a two years' term in the prison at Waupun. He thanked God, however, that there were men on the jury that tried him that could not be bribed or bulldozed, and he escaped. He was afraid that they were going to send him up for two years at this time, but it was to congress that his sentence would run. What the people had wanted was education about these things and they getting it very rapidly now that there had been a general awakening. Mr. Schilling then made one of his characteristic speeches, and was followed by John Toohey, who spoke briefly on the issues of the campaign and brought the meeting to a close.

Citizens and farmers of old Lenawee who responded so nobly to our country's call for the preservation of law and order, and for the purity of "old glory," are you willing to join hands with such men to overthrow all that you fought for, worked and prayed for? How would you like such political bedfellows?

he ladies of the Christian church serve dinner in the vacant store of nk Brown, on election day. The of fare will consist of chicken pie, hed potatoes with brown gravy, and beans, bread and butter, pick- tea and coffee, and a nice desert, for the small price of 20 cents. Half he tables will be set with McKin- ley and half with Bryan favors. A lunch counter will also be run in connection. Everybody should patronize the ladies and partake of a good fifty cent dinner for twenty cents. Ladies belonging to the aid society are requested to accept this as sufficient notice to be on hand to assist, also to provide the necessaries. Whether Bryan or McKinley wins the election is an open question, but that an excellent dinner will be furnished by the ladies, is beyond question.

M. V. Sickly attended the St. John mass meeting at Adrian Saturday night.

Bert Chandler, of Hudson, nominee for State Senator, was in this vicinity the first of the week.

The ladies of the M. E. church sent a barrel of fruit to the Deaconess' Home, in Detroit last week.

The Epworth League will hold a leap year social at the home of Mrs. John Koebbe Friday evening, Nov. 6.

Dr. E. E. Hendershot is president of the McKinley club and keeps things stirring for his side of the question.

The Ladies Aid society of the Reformed church held their regular meeting at Mrs. Bolt Pennington's Wednesday.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their monthly tea meeting at the home of Mrs. Clara Gooding, Tecumseh, Saturday, Oct. 31.

Hebron Camburn keeps Jersey cows and sells his butter in Detroit, ten months in the year, for 25c a pound. Better than talking about hard times all the while.

Mark Mills has been looking after his political interests throughout the county the past week. He and Chas. S. Burroughs have done their campaigning of the county on a wheel.

Will Richmond goes to Clinton every day to attend to his business of grain and stock buying. When Macon gets that railroad we hope Mr. Richmond will be able to establish headquarters here.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. Eugene Burdette is going to start up dress making again, assisted by Misses LeAnna Morgan, Addie Hendershot and Mamie Pratt. She is now ready to take in work at any time.

The first quarterly meeting of the M. E. church will be held at Clinton Sunday afternoon. The members of this church are invited to attend. There will be no Sabbath school or preaching here in the afternoon.

A pole raising was held at John Hendershot's last Friday afternoon, which was the finest yet held in this vicinity. Clem Bramble, Sumner Collins and Rolfe A. Mills were the speakers. Mr. Bramble gave an able address and surprised his hearers with his eloquence and good reasoning.

Most of the campaign meetings here have been held in the old Free Baptist church, which has stood vacant for several years, and people are asking why the citizens of this place couldn't raise money enough to buy the building, enlarge it and thereby convert it into a town hall. In all probability the Free Will Baptists never will have an organization here again strong enough to support a church. Let the movement be started and it will soon grow into a reality. Lon O'Mealy, of Adrian, will give an address in the church this evening.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 30, 1896.

In other columns may be found well written sketches of four candidates on the the county and legislative tickets. These articles are profitable to read. All should know something of the men for whom they intend to vote.

Thomas M. Camburn, of Franklin, republican candidate for the legislature, has sent no reply to the HERALD to the accusation made last week that he refused to assist the farmer in efforts to stop the coloring of oleomargarine. He has had ample and fair opportunity to do so, is afraid of the issue and no farmer should vote for him.

Republicans, know no friends on election day, but vote your ticket straight—Tecumseh News.

This is indeed good doctrine for a lot of republican candidates who have been turning every stone in the county to get democrats to split their ticket. The HERALD advises every voter to use his judgment and vote for the best men in state and county politics.

Before another edition of the HERALD is printed the great troubles of the politicians and country will be settled; either McKinley or Bryan will have been elected. One side of politicians will be happy, the other sad. The country will still remain with us and in any case civil war may not be anticipated. From the beginning of the campaign, the HERALD has endeavored to interest its readers by giving good reading matter on both sides of the question and has furnished a local friendly discussion which has been of much interest and proven of much benefit to many voters to aid them in deciding how to vote this fall. All the letters have been signed by the writers. In fact the HERALD absolutely refuses to print communications on any subject for persons who will not allow their names to appear in print, thus showing good faith in the discussion and giving persons of different ideas an opportunity to answer and know to whom their reply is addressed. The policy of the HERALD is independent, not neutral, and will now, as in the future, advise its readers concerning some of the local candidates without respect to party, thinking that in county and township politics the best man for the position should be chosen without regard to party politics. Bert D. Chandler, of Hudson, the silver nominee for state senator in this district, should by all means be elected. He is a young man of fine natural ability and has received training that will be of much value to him should he be elected, is a partner of Grant Fellows and esteemed, honored and trusted by democrats and republicans alike in his own home. Wm. Jibb, his opponent, is utterly without qualification to perform the duties of such an office. He has no standing in any sphere except in that of a political wire puller, and how he ever secured the nomination as against our worthy townsman John D. Shull or Dr. Howell is a mystery to the voters of the entire district, republicans included. Charles D. Burroughs, of Clinton, the silver nominee for representative should also be elected. His business and political career especially fits him for this position and the position Mr. Camburn has taken in the oleomargarine question is evidence to the farmers that Mr. Burroughs, not Mr. Camburn should represent them at Lansing for the next term. E. Leroy Mills, the republican nominee for county clerk, has made a most competent county employee and there is no reason why he should not be returned to the place for another term. Edwin D. Ferguson, of Adrian, the republican nominee for sheriff, should be the next sheriff of Lenawee county. He has had experience as under sheriff and is one of those men naturally qualified for such a position. His opponent, Mr. Iffland, is a good man, well known and respected in his community, but is not naturally endowed with the qualifications for a good sheriff. On general principle it is the desire of the HERALD that Grandon, of the Adrian Telegram, should be elected treasurer. For goodness sake, give a newspaper man for once a chance to look at money, even if he cannot own it. James W. Helme, Jr. would make for the county an able prosecutor. He is a careful, conservative man, able lawyer and level headed business man, has had experience as assistant prosecutor and will receive a large vote outside his own party. C. H. Bramble is practically a Tecumseh man, born and raised in Franklin with school days spent in Tecumseh. All like him and know of his capability to make a good register of deeds. Of the other nominees on either ticket the HERALD has nothing to say. All are good men and will serve the county well, if elected. Every voter should, in casting his ballot this fall, use the same independence in voting as the HERALD has in expressing its opinion. Pick out whom you think are the best men on each ticket and vote for them without fear or favor.

CHARLES S. BURROUGHS.

Nominee for the Legislature in the First District

To be a successful legislator, a man must possess those magnetic qualities which win and hold the confidence and esteem of his associates, and this was why Charles S. Burroughs received the nomination for the legislature on the first ballot. Mr. Burroughs was born in Ypsilanti, Mich., July 4th, 1857. When he was eight years old, his parents died and he went to live with his guardian, the late John P. Silvers, of Clinton, Mich., who gave the boy an excellent training. After leaving the Clinton high school, Mr. Burroughs entered the University of Michigan, graduating from the school of pharmacy in 1876, at the early age of nineteen. Upon leaving college, he decided to follow the drug business and entered the employ of a druggist in Toledo, Ohio. From there he went to Hays City, Kansas, and went into business for himself, but at the end of two years he sold out and returned to Michigan. In 1884, he returned to Clinton and went into the drug business for himself, where he used his knowledge of chemistry to practical advantage by inventing his famous "Crescent Cough Syrup," "Cuba Chewing Gum" and other useful articles.

As an active politician, an ardent advocate of free silver and an unswerving democrat, Mr. Burroughs is well known to the voters of Lenawee county, having been identified with the democrat party ever since he became a voter.

In 1893, Mr. Burroughs was appointed by the government, disbursing agent of town site board No. 18, of Oklahoma, and it was while filling this position of trust and honor that he evinced his strict integrity as a public official and his marked executive ability. The board was composed of three members, who sat as a court. Their authority was legislative, executive and judicial. Every report sent in by the court was sustained, while to the surprise of the Secretary of the Interior Mr. Burroughs, at the close of his term of office, turned in $550 which he was supposed to have used up in salaries for the board. It is such a man as this that the people of the first district can afford to entrust with their affairs of legislation.

In 1883, Mr. Burroughs was married to Miss Genevieve Lancaster, of Clinton, Mich. She died in 1895 leaving one child, a son now twelve years old.

Socially, Mr. Burroughs is always a leader. He is a Free Mason and a Maccabee and has hosts of friends in both of these organizations who will be glad to vote for him.

CLEMENT H. BRAMBLE.

Nominee for Register of Deeds.

One of the most important offices in the county is that of Register of Deeds. The choice of the people of the fusion ticket this year fell upon Clement H. Bramble, who is both well and favorably known throughout the entire county.

Mr. Bramble was born in Franklin, Mich., Oct. 26, 1861, and is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jehiel H. Bramble, of Tecumseh, Mich. During his boyhood on the farm he attended district school and afterward entered the Tecumseh high school, taking the English and Scientific course. Possessing an inherent taste for study, particularly for Science and Political Economy, he resolved to get a college education, and taught district school several terms to defray his expenses, while attending Kalamazoo College, where he took the Literary and Scientific course, in 1885.

In 1887 Mr. Bramble was married to Miss Nellie Heath, of Grand Haven, Mich., and took up his residence on his father's farm in Franklin.

Upon entering college Mr. Bramble soon became recognized as a logical reasoner and a most forceful debater and it was while a student thus favorably environed that he gave his first attention to the study of finance. His paper entitled "The Banking and Monetary System of the United States," read before the Farmers' Institute, at Adrian, Mich., a few years ago, was one of the most instructive addresses ever presented to a Lenawee County audience, and is yet often commented upon by those who heard it. An equally able paper was that read before the Institute at the Tecumseh opera house, entitled "Government Ownership and Control of Railroads."

Last year Mr. Bramble spent the winter in the West and South and it was while attending a debate held by the Chautauqua Club of Kansas City, Mo., that he heard and met the illustrious statesman, Wm. J. Bryan. After the debate it was his singular good fortune to travel a short distance with Mr. Bryan on the cars and to converse with him upon the great political issues of the day, and, no doubt, it was this happy instance that fired Mr. Bramble's enthusiasm afresh, and has enabled him to throw so much energy and zeal into the present campaign. He has spoken to large audiences in nearly every town in the county and has convinced his hearers that political subjects are interesting when presented in a forceful and logical manner.

Mr. Bramble is an active christian gentleman and is always identified with movements of public interest. He served as school inspector of the township of Franklin for several years and was a member of the County Board of Examiners for one year. He is a Maccabee, and a gentleman at all times and under all circumstances.

J. W. HELME Jr,

Nominee for Prosecuting Attorney.

J. W. Helme, Jr. was born in the city of Adrian in 1860, and has resided for the past 30 years in the third ward of that city. He graduated from Adrian high school at the age of fifteen, being the youngest person who ever graduated from that institution. He read law in the office of Willard Stearns for four years, and was admitted to the bar the day before his 21st birthday, being the youngest attorney ever admitted to the bar in this county.

Mr. Helme was night editor on the Daily Press during the campaign of 1878. His first appearance on the stump was in the campaign of 1880, at Palmyra, in behalf of Democracy. His first vote he cast a straight democratic city ticket, in the spring of 1881, against the republican ticket headed by Tom Navin. In 1882 he was nominated for circuit court commissioner on the democratic ticket and was elected by 97 majority, running over 400 ahead of his ticket, and the only man on the ticket elected except L. H. Salsbury for prosecutor. He was the youngest county officer ever elected and the first democrat elected commissioner in 30 years, the last one having been Judge Thomas M. Cooley, 1852.

In 1884 he was appointed city attorney and served five and a half years, being the youngest city attorney ever appointed and serving longer than any other occupant, a clear proof of the kind of service rendered. In 1892 he was appointed assistant Prosecutor by Prosecuting Attorney Fred B. Wood, and served until the expiration of Mr. Wood's term with ability and success, (so Mr. Wood says). He was a member of the committee on resolutions at the democratic state convention at Grand Rapids in 1894, which reported the first Simon pure free silver platform ever adopted by a democratic state convention.

Mr. Helme has, beginning with 1880, stumped Lenawee county for the democratic ticket for eight successive campaigns. For this service he received no pay whatever and paid his expenses out of his own pocket.

Mr. Helme resides on a 23-acre farm just west of the court house. He is a practical farmer in the line of fruit growing and dairying, doing a large share of the work on the farm personally before and after office hours. On this little farm fift en head of thoroughbred Jerseys are kept, besides other stock. He is a member of the state dairymen's association and has contributed many interesting articles on farm topics to the Michigan Farmer and the Lenawee county formers' institute.

ROLFE A. MILLS.

Nominee for Circuit Court Commissioner.

There is one man on the silver ticket of Lenawee county this year who is not only well known in the vicinity where he has always lived but who is regarded as an honor to the ticket, as a man always is when the office seeks him. This is Rolfe Mills, nominee for circuit court commissioner. Mr. Mills was born in Macon, Lenawee county, in 1864, and is the only son of John B. and Angeline Mills. When Rolfe was five years of age, his father died, and perhaps it was this early deprivation of a father's counsel and support that threw the youth upon his own energies and brought home to him, in all its sterner light, the seriousness of life and all its busy cares. As soon as he was old enough to read, Rolfe entered the district school at Macon and attended regularly until he was ten years old. Then he was obliged to drop out summers to help do the work on his mother's farm, and thus he continued, until he was twenty years old, going to school winters and working on the farm summers. In the meantime he taught district school one term.

At the age of twenty, Mr. Mills entered the Tecumseh high school and afterwards entered the state normal school, at Ypsilanti, where he took a four years' course, graduating in the literary department of the class of '91. Having a natural adaptation for books, he again turned to the school room, teaching one year in Michigan and then going to California, where he taught two years. In entering upon this work of teaching in the far west, Mr. Mills displayed the practical methods that accentuates all his business transactions. His school was engaged and he knew exactly what salary he was to receive before he left home.

Expiration of two years he returned to Michigan and entered the Law department of the University of Michigan, graduating with honors in the class of '95. It was here that Mr. Mills found his true field of activity. In the practice court, where the student has an opportunity to display his best powers as an attorney, Mr. Mills won all of his cases, including the one carried to the supreme court, the latter court being represented by three of the ablest professors of the Law department.

In argument, Mr. Mills appeals to the reason rather than the sympathies, while no man can swerve him from his sense of honor and truth, however much to his own disadvantage may prove the results. Temperate, fearless and just, he has the courage of his convictions and, if elected, will not only be a valuable official but an honor to the bar of Lenawee county.

Both Sides.

The following from the Morenci Observer, and answer is self explanatory. As John I. Knapp is candidate for coroner on the republican ticket the reply is significant to say the least.

Said a gentleman who is not a member of the political party to which the official referred to belongs: "John Bird is one of the very best prosecutors that Lenawee county has ever had. I say this unhesitatingly because I believe it. He has saved the people money in a manner and to a degree which all reasonable people must commend; he has been untiring in the discharge of every duty devolving upon him—shirking nothing, but giving to every case honest, fearless attention; in fact, has sought for the public interest from the beginning of his term until the present. Disregareing politics, I say that Mr. Bird deserves to be re-elected if any official of our county was entitled to such consideration." This was the language of a man who will not vote the national republican ticket.—Morenci Observer.

EDITOR HERALD:

I was somewhat amused to see copied in the Adrian Times from the Morenci Observer an item praising Pros. Atty. Bird for his economical administration, during the last two years. The fact that the Observer man lives distant from town may account for his singular statement. Mr. Bird may have been in some respects, but in many cases Mr. Bird's prosecutions have been absurd, expensive and almost malicious. Take the celebrated Dog Case—One, Ezra Fairbanks was arrested for stealing a dog, which witnesses swore was worth just 25 cents. Fairbanks claimed that it was a case of mistaken identity of dogs. Nevertheless he was tried in Justice Court and tried in Circuit Court and given 30 days in jail. As soon as he got out he discovered witnesses who identified the dog positively as his dog and not Reese's the complaining witness. Acting in good faith Fairbanks at once got the dog and was again arrested for larceny. This was in February, 1896. On the trial Feb. 24 a large number of responsible farmers from Fairfield positively identified the dog as Fairbank's animal, and the jury disagreed. Notwithstanding conviction was hopeless Mr. Bird tried the case again on March 2nd, but was knocked out on a legal point. The four trials about this 25 cent dog cost the county several hundred dollars. One witness Mr. Bird brought from Chicago cost the county $21.75 for each trial the witness attended. In this dog case Fairbank's attorney demanded security for costs on behalf of the county but Mr. Bird opposed the motion and the justice over-ruled it. Mr. Bird still apparently had it in for Fairbanks, and had Fairbanks arrested in May following on complaint of that well known character Dan Whitman, for drunkenness. A jury trial resulted in a disagreement and Fairbanks was finally discharged with all costs to be paid by the county. The case of the People vs. Mary E. Bailey for forgery, better known as the King case, was another instance of apparent lack of judgement in prosecution. Although the whole matter was largely a family quarrel this woman was confined in jail nearly a year, awaiting trial. She was tried three times in the Circuit Court and after two disagreements was acquitted at a large expense to the people of the county. Mr. Bird's action in the Clayton trouble with Justice Abbott was in my opinion unwise, and expensive to the county. He attempted to have Justice Abbott removed from office. Charges were preferred and the amount paid by the county to Circuit Court Commissioner Robinson, for taking the testimony about these charges was over $445. Governor Rich dismissed the charges as being without merit. In the entire history of criminal prosecution in this county, the above samples of Mr. Bird's administration can find no parallel for unwise expenditure of money.

Have You a Cold?

If so, then, instead of taking so much quinine and other strong medicines, take a pleasant, and mild stomach and bowel remedy, which will cleanse the system, and you will be surprised how quickly the cold will leave you. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do this better than any other. Trial size 10c (10 doses 10c), larger sizes 50c and $1, at Orr & Temple's.

Now is the Time.

Tuesday evening, Mrs. Will Spaulding, who is an active and prominent member of the Womens' Relief Corps and is soon to join her husband in Toledo, was given a surprise by the members of that worthy body. They met at the Central House and when all had arrived they went in a body to to the house. To say the lady was surprised, is a feeble expression; she was speechless. Recovering, she welcomed them and the evening was a delight to the entire company.

Walter Osborn, whose death occurred Monday morning, has suffered for a year or more with serious affection of the heart. Although not accompanied with any great pain, his breathing has been labored and he unable to do any work. During this period, he has had several severe attacks when death seemed almost certain, from which he rallied, and, like many cases of this kind, when the end came it was sudden and unexpected. He was 50 years of age and leaves three children, two sons and one daughter. The funeral was held at the house west of town Wednesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. P. Varner. The remains were placed in the cemetery here. At the grave the services were conducted by the Masonic body of which he was a member. An obituary will appear next week.

Exercises will begin promptly at 3 o'clock.

Very short notice was given for the silver meeting at Sutton's opera house last Friday evening, yet a large crowd greeted the speaker, Hon. Charles Hartman, of Montana, who proved to be the finest platform orator ever heard in Tecumseh. He held the closest attention of his vast audience and won the admiration of all by his able and courteous address. His coming was a ten strike for the advocates of silver and did their cause much good. He is a whirlwind.

It was a good house that greeted A. A. Nelson, of Montana, the so-called sound money democratic speaker at the opera house Wednesday evening. With him on the stage were C. F. Field and Will J. Ingersoll who had a lonesome look throughout the evening. To the surprise of his friends, the former gentleman introduced the speaker who proceeded to make his speech which consisted mainly in ridiculing Coin's Financial School, complimenting Charles Hartman and eulogizing Cleveland and his administration. Mr. Nelson, undoubtedly, is a fine gentleman, a good lawyer, but is not an easy or eloquent speaker. Many of the old time republicans, who four yeasr ago predicted such disasters if Cleveland was elected, cheered vociferously whenever the speaker alluded to him or his acts, which to some was very amusing.

—The success attending the efforts of the Standard Cabinet Company to introduce their kitchen cabinet is almost phenomenal, considering the scarcity of money, and demonstrates the fact that it possesses superior merit or people would do without it. The agents who work from this point are meeting with flattering success in towns adjacent and surrounding country. The good housewives see at once that it is not only practical but complete and a necessity they must possess and are willing to make sacrifices in other ways in order to secure one.

Cordelia Waller Adams.

The ranks of the old pioneers in this vicinity are rapidly depleting in number and it will not be long ere all are gone who saw the forests cleared away and the wilderness made to blossom as the rose. This week we are called upon to record the death of perhaps the oldest resident of Tecumseh, that of Mrs. Peter R. Adams, which occurred Tuesday morning, October 27th at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. John D. Shull, with whom she resided. Mrs. Adams was well known throughout southern Michigan and her disease will bring sorrow to many hearts.

Cordelia M. Waller was born at Palmyra, Portage County, Ohio, October 16th, 1815. In December 1829 she was united in marriage to Peter R. Adams at the same place and with him came to Tecumseh July 26th, 1830, since which time, with the exception of two years spent in Kansas in the early 70's, this has been her home. She possessed a cheery disposition and sterling qualities that eminently fitted her for life's duties which were faithfully discharged. She suffered an attack of peralysis June 25th of the same year since which time she has been rather feeble. The end came so suddenly and so quietly that those in attendance hardly knew when the spirit took its flight. She leaves two children, P. W. Adams, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. John D. Shull, of Tecumseh; six grandchildren and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. The funeral was held at the house this morning at ten o'clock and was conducted by Rev. B. S. Hudson, pastor of the Baptist church, of which she had long been a faithful member.

John McElroy.

The community was startled by the announcement, Oct. 20, that John McElroy was dead. Mr. McElroy had been a sufferer for several years. During last winter he had a very hard siege of illness, which undoubtedly laid the foundation of his sudden death from heart disease.

He was born in Antrim county, Ireland, in 1824. Was married to Miss Agnes Herbison in 1859. Came to this country in 1880 and settled in Clinton township, where he has since resided. When about 21 years of age he united with the Presbyterian church of his native land. He has always been a faithful and devout christian, putting in practice his belief as well as holding it mentally. He leaves a wife, three sons and three daughters, one son having preceded him in death.

The funeral occurred from the family residence, Thursday, Oct. 23, Rev. Chas. M. Brown, of Tecumseh, officiating. Many friends gathered to pay their last respects, and a large number of carriages accompanied the friends to Tecumseh, where the body was laid to rest to await the great trumpet call of the Master.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

PENSION SUIT ENDED.

The Long Case Dismissed by the United States Supreme Court.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The Long-Lochren pension case was dismissed by the United States supreme court Monday on the ground of abatement by reason of the retirement of Judge Lochren from the office of commissioner of pensions. The case was brought by Judge Long, of the Michigan supreme court, to test veterans' rights. Judge Long drew a pension of $72 a month and the reduction of the rating to $50 a month was stubbornly contested in the courts of the District of Columbia and finally carried to the supreme court.

Lansing, Oct. 28. — Chief Justice Long, of the supreme court, whose famous case against ex-Pension Commissioner Lochren was dismissed by the federal supreme court Monday, will at once commence a similar action against the present commissioner, and will endeavor to bring it to a final hearing before the commissioner has time to either die or resign.

SEEKS DAMAGES.

City of Port Huron Sued for a Bicyclist's Death.

Port Huron, Oct. 25.—J. W. Benedict, administrator of the George P. Burgess estate, has commenced a suit against the city of Port Huron for $30,000 damages. Burgess was drowned in Black river on the evening of November 27, 1895. He rode off into the river on his wheel and was drowned. J. W. Benedict, in his bill, claims that Burgess met his death because of the lack of proper safeguards being provided at that point by the city. The council investigated the case some time ago and decided that Burgess met his death through his own carelessness, and that the city was not liable for damages, owing to the fact that a chain was stretched across the roadway at the time, but that Burgess knocked it down.

Burned to Death.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 27.—George Lovett, 45 years of age, in the employ of Dr. C. R. Yearick, as general barnman, was smothered to death and burned fearfully at an early hour Monday morning. He was found lying on the bed in the barn, his face charred and the skin burned off most of the body. Lovett must have lighted his lamp early in the morning before getting out of bed, and placed it near the bed clothing and fallen asleep. He leaves a widow and three children in Toronto.

To Protect Creditors.

Bay City, Oct. 27.—See Brothers and the See Brothers' Manufacturing company, dealers in and manufacturers of furniture, gave chattel mortgages Monday, for $69,905 and $6,209 to secure pressing creditors, the first embracing those at home and the second those on the outside. The Chicago houses protected are: Lussky, Payne & Co., $1,699.96; Johnson Chair company, $175; Glover & Whitticomb, $429. The firm had indorsed paper for W. E. See & Co., who filed trust mortgages Saturday.

Big Damage Suit.

Bay City, Oct. 24.—A summons was served on Henry Huffman, an attorney of St. Ignace, in the smoking car of the Mackinaw train, in West Bay City by Deputy Sheriff Johnson in a suit for $20,000 damages started by John Godkin, lumberman of this city. The suit is based upon a remark alleged to have been made in a trial at Manistique a few months ago, in which Hoffman was the attorney against Godkin.

HENRY GEORGE SAYS BRYAN WINS.

The Result of a Careful Tour of Observation Through the Central West.

THE DRIFT FOR BRYAN.

An Opinion That Is the More Valuable Because of Its Extreme Caution and Conservatism.

Henry George Undertook a Trip Through the Doubtful States Convinced That McKinley Would Win—His Observation Leads Him to Change That Opinion and He Is Now Confident of Bryan's Success.

Early in September Mr. Henry George was requested by the New York Journal to make a tour of the so-called doubtful states in the middle west and to give the public in an entirely unbiased manner the result of his observations of the political conditions existing there.

Before his reply was received the news come from Maine of the increased republican majority at the state election there. Then followed Mr. George's answer, as follows:

"Chicago, Sept. 15, 1896.

"Editor New York Journal:

"In my opinion, confirmed by Maine, the result is foregone. I believe, therefore, that a convinced free silver man would be better to make proposed trip for Journal than I, as candor is something uselessly painful to friends. Will go ahead if you wish and do my best to give exact truth as I see it, but my judgment and feelings are against this.

"Would prefer to save my time and your money by not beginning. Could stop until to-morrow's committee meeting for your private information if you wish, though do not think I could learn anything not public; otherwise would start back. Advise me, Victoria hotel.

"HENRY GEORGE."

In reply to this message the editor of the Journal telegraphed to Mr. George, requesting him to remain for a short time in the doubtful territory and describe the situation as he saw it.

On October 5 Mr. George, having spent three weeks in the doubtful states, more especially in Illinois, Ohio, and West Virginia, was requested to telegraph, for the information of the editor of the Journal, his opinion of the probabilities. In reply, he sent the following:

"Cleveland, O., Oct. 5.

"Editor New York Journal:

"My belief is that Bryan will be elected. "This is my carefully-formed private, as well as public, opinion. I congratulate the Journal on the good prospects.

"HENRY GEORGE."

Mr. George, it is seen, began his journey with the settled conviction that McKinley's election was assured. For this reason he suggested that some one else undertake the trip for the Journal. But as only the exact truth was desired, and as Mr. George is everywhere known for thoroughness of investigation, accuracy of conclusion, and fairness of statement in all matters political, it was especially desired that he would make this trip and do this work. His reports are therefore valuable for their entire candor and reliability.

Mr. George has himself been surprised at the results of his investigations in the doubtful states. He began his trip fully convinced that McKinley would win. The results have convinced him that Bryan will win.

After having sent the Journal the above dispatch from Cleveland, O., on October 5, Mr. George continued his journey through the states of Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota and returned to New York. On the 18th of October he submitted his final report to the journal as follows. It is all the stronger and more valuable for its extreme caution and conservatism:

"October, 18, 1896.

"Editor New York Journal:

"I came back to New York over more than a third of the continent to register my vote and hear Gov. Altgeld make in Cooper Union the speech in which he set forth what, in my mind, is the most important of the issues of the campaign.

"The question which greets me from the lips of every friend I have yet met, and the question repeated in all I have as opportunity to glance at in the pile of letters I found awaiting me, is:

"'WHAT DO YOU REALLY THINK WILL BE THE OUTCOME OF THE ELECTION?'

"Let me answer questioners and correspondents, one and all, through the medium of the Journal. My personal opinion differs from that which has already been expressed in the letters that have recently been telegraphed by me to the Journal from the places where they have been written only in this.

"I AM SOMEWHAT MORE CONFIDENT THAT MY LETTERS TO THE JOURNAL HAVE SHOWN THAT BRYAN WILL CARRY THE STATES THAT HAVE BEEN CONSIDERED DOUBTFUL IN THE CENTRAL WEST, AND WILL BE ELECTED TO THE PRESIDENCY.

"I have no ability to see into the future, and am liable to all the mistakes of judgment that beset man or woman, but this is my opinion as to what will be, formed after five weeks' of as dilligent, cautious and dispassionate effort as I am capable of to discover the trend and strength of the tides of political opinion now running in that part of the country.

"This was not my first opinion—on the contrary, it at first seemed to me that McKinley, not Bryan, would carry the central west; but it is the matured conviction with which I came back to New York. And that the tide is daily setting more strongly toward Bryan, I am convinced.

"HENRY GEORGE."

This is not the work of a campaign manager, anxious to give coloring of victory to his own side. It is the result of a tour of observation of a candid, truthful, and reliable man, who began the work with the conviction that McKinley's election was sure. That it is a correct forecast the 3d of November will prove.

AN INSULT TO LABOR.

A Sneer at the Intelligence of Those Who Favor Bryan and the Free Coinage of Silver.

Dugald Crawford, proprietor of a big St. Louis department store, is being prosecuted for dismissing 12 of his employes who had the temerity to confess, when he asked them the direct question, that they were in favor of free silver and intended to vote for Bryan. The Chicago Evening Post, the organ of the goldbug aristocracy of that city, editorially suggests the following escape for Crawford from his dilemma:

"Mr. Crawford can beat the charge if he will go into court and claim that he discharged his employes because their announcement of an intention to vote for Bryan proved them unfit to discharge their duties intelligently."

This is a gross insult to every man who favors Bryan and free silver, and it is not the only one of the kind which the Post has recently given. Sneers at the intelligence of bimetallists are evidence of the ignorance, as well as the bad manners of the dudes who fawn upon the gold power. The scientific opinion of the world is almost unanimously in favor of bimetallism. A sneer at the intelligence of his employes will not clear Bulldozer Crawford.

"We can afford to be poor," said Gen. Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, who is chaperoning a crowd of "generals" around the country, speaking in McKinley's interests, "we can afford to be poor," said he, addressing a crowd of workingmen at Kansas City, "but we cannot afford to be dishonest. We must pay everything we owe with 100-cent dollars." This the very identical Millionaire Alger whom Senator Sherman deliberately charges, in his book, upon conclusive proof, with buying the votes of negro delegates instructed for himself in the national republican convention of 1888. Can such a man teach workingmen honest finance?

"You may read its history and you will find that the gold standard never brought a ray of hope to those who sit in darkness; the gold standard never gave inspiration to those who are downcast."—W. J. Bryan.

The committee from the Labor Legion of Chicago, appointed to investigate charges against Gov. Altgeld's convict labor record, recently made by eight alleged workingmen, have made a thorough investigation, going to the Joliet penitentiary for that purpose, and declare that the charges are wholly unfounded.

"Oh, the exigencies of this campaign, when John Ireland, archbishop of St. Paul, and Robert G. Ingersoll, the pope of infidelity, clasp hands on the same platform and unite in denouncing millions of their fellow citizens as fools and anarchists."—Father Nugent.

CELLAR FOR POTATOES.

One Seen in Colorado Answers All Ordinary Requirements.

I have just returned from a trip through the irrigation districts of the west, and while in Colorado, at Greeley, where potato growing is so large an industry, and where they do know how to raise potatoes, my attention was called to their potato cellars of which there are large numbers. The cheaper forms of simplest construction are, usually, holes in the ground, preferably, although not always, on a slope facing south or east. They are long, narrow and, usually, three-fourths or more below the general level of the ground, but often they are built so much above ground that a wagon may be backed into them when it is desired to remove the potatoes.

The cut gives a general idea of their construction and interior arrangement, as seen in a simple cross-section. Usually these cellars are without walls of masonry, and are provided with a roof made of poles covered with a layer of hay or straw upon which are six to twelve inches of earth. A row of chutes arranged along each side serves to fill the bins easily from the wagon; these are made of inch lumber, and are about one foot square in cross-section, projecting six to eight inches above the roof. In the crest of the roof there are, usually, two or more ventilators constructed in the manner of the chutes. The entrance to the cellar, especially when constructed so as to be entered with a wagon, is provided with double doors separated by a hallway having a length of six or eight feet, and has for its object the shutting out of the frost from in front. When necessary, potatoes are stored in the driveway as well as in the bins, the rear of the drive being filled first.—F. H. King, in Rural New Yorker.

SALT AS A MANURE.

Report of C. V. Vanderford, of Tennessee Experiment Station.

Results of a great many experiments both such as have been conducted under control methodically, and those made by practical farmers, do not show that salt is essential to life or development of agricultural plants. Salt may have some indirect effect because of induced chemical changes in the upper stratum of the arable soil, and in some cases by physical changes when applied to stiff clays.

For many crops, as potatoes, tobacco, beets, melons, etc., salt is injurious; in some cases a light application of salt may be beneficial, as for onions, cabbage, celery and possibly tomatoes. Upon stiff clay lands, salt at the rate of 200 to 600 pounds broadcast some weeks before the sowing of small grain, or the planting of corn, has apparently improved the mechanical condition of the soil and has probably added to the yield of grain. Upon land upon which wheat had usually made an overgrowth of straw, with a tendency to straw-fall before ripening grain, the writer has obtained a somewhat shorter but much stiffer growth of straw standing up well till the fully matured crop was harvested, by applying 300 pounds per acre of pork house refuse salt broadcast upon the land in January.

Little or much, it is not advisable to apply salt to annuals at the time of seeding and it should be used cautiously, if at all, during growth and cultivation. A moderate dressing, 200 pounds per acre on meadow or pasture, very early in spring, or better during the last winter month, has upon several occasions given apparently good results; but these were not sufficiently marked to induce further experiments.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Extend the scope of the agricultural societies.

Weeds tend to prevent one man from owning too much land.

Denser farming communities will give more educational facilities.

Generally the larger the animal the greater the cost of keeping.

Remember that the pasture is a principal part of the farm, and treat it accordingly.

All fallen fruit should be destroyed in some manner. Many insect pests will be killed by so doing.

Nature abhors an uncovered patch of ground. Therefore she has the weeds to carpet it if the farmer does not care.

Good pastures can be made from stumpage, if the stumps are cut off close to the soil and the ground seeded down.

In fighting weeds, remember that "weeds take possession of waste places." Therefore cover the waste places with something.

Apples Are Good for Cows.

Don't be afraid to give your cow green or ripe apples. But feed them regularly as you feed grain, meal or hay. A careful trial last season, during which time the amount was increased to more than a bushel a day, showed good results all through. The flow of milk was good and rich and the cow had to be milked up to the time of calving. There were no symptoms of milk fever, and the old idea that apples will make a cow "go dry" did not apply in this case. The apples were fed whole, in a trough, about 18 inches from the ground, and of course she never choked.—Farm Journal

Mrs. Geo. S. Beck, eastern manager of Farm News and Womankind, 193 World Building, New York, writes: "I had a bunion on my left foot that, as a pain producer, was on a par at least with the boils, sores, rheumatics and colics that obtained poor old Job's life so miserable. I do not have the bunion now, for Lightning Hot Drops reduced the swelling, killed the pain, rotted the callous, enlivened the skin, and—there is no doubt about it—annihilated the bunion."

Massey & Son, of Lipscomb, Maury Co., Tenn., writes as follows: "Lightning Hot Drops is the greatest medicine for the mumps I ever saw; gives instant relief."

Mr. Edward W. Smith, Proprietor of the Lake View Marble Works, Youngstown, O., says: "I used Lightning Hot Drops for a badly sprained ankle, and its action as a liniment was both soothing and effectual. It is indeed a good remedy."

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Look after the Back: A Fall, a Strain, a Constant Sitting or Stooping Position Brings Backache—Do You Know This Means the Kidneys are Affected!

How few people realize when their back begins to ache that it is a warning provided by nature to tell you that the kidneys are not working properly. You have a severe fall, you strain yourself lifting or perhaps you are compelled to maintain a sitting or stooping position for long intervals at a time; your back begins to ache, then your head, you become listless, tired and weary, but do you understand the real cause? We think not, else you would not use plasters and liniment on the back, which only relieve but do not reach the cause. If you would rid yourself of the pain and cure the root of the trouble, at the same time save many years of suffering and perhaps life itself, you will take a kidney remedy that has been tried and proven that it will cure.

Mr. John Robsoin of 661 Russell Street, Detroit, says: "As a result of exposure during the war I have suffered ever since with rheumatism and kidney trouble. Pains would start in my hip and go around to my back. Highly colored urine denoted kidney disorder. The pain in my back was often so bad I had to give up work until the severity of the attack passed away. I have used many liniments and other things, but received very little relief. Some time ago I started using Doan's Kidney Pills and they have worked a wonderful change in me. My back is all right now and I owe it all to the almost magical influence of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Mr. Robsoin was a member of the Fifty-first Illinois Regiment, which served through the war with honor and distinction. Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers—price, 50 cents. He Will Be the Next President of the United States.

The Republicans Carry the Country by Large Pluralities—The Electoral Vote Will Probably Be: McKinley, 318; Bryan, 93.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Reports received up to two o'clock this morning by Vice Chairman Henry C. Payne, of the republican national committee, from national committeemen and chairmen of state committees show that McKinley carried 24 states, with an aggregate electoral vote of 271. Mr. Payne conceded 14 states, with an aggregate electoral vote of 106, to Bryan. He claimed one state with nine votes and placed six states, with 61 votes, in the doubtful column. Mr. Hanna has announced that the results in every state have exceeded all estimates made by the national committee.

Hanna Claims 1,000,000 Plurality.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 4. — Chairman Hanna claims the country by 1,000,000 plurality.

New York, Nov. 4, 12:45 a. m.—The national republican committee has been advised that Chairman Mark Hanna claims 331 electoral votes for McKinley and Hobart.

Another Estimate.

New York, Nov. 4.—From returns received by the United Associated Presses up to one a. m. the indications are that McKinley will have 318 electoral votes, as follows:

New England states, 29: New York, 36; New Jersey, 10; Pennsylvania, 32; Ohio, 23; Wisconsin, 12; Iowa, 13; South Dakota, 4; Maryland, 8; Illinois, 24; Kentucky, 13; West Virginia, 6; Tennessee, 12; Virginia, 12; Nebraska, 8; North Carolina, 11; Indiana, 15; Michigan, 14; Minnesota, 9; Missouri, 17 Total, 318.

The total electoral vote for Bryan is 93, as follows: South Carolina 9; Georgia, 13; Alabama, 11; Florida, 4; Mississippi, 9; Louisiana, 8; Arkansas, 8; Montana, 3; Idaho, 3; Colorado, 4; Utah, 3; Nevada, 3; Texas, 15. Total, 93. The returns from the other states are meager and they are classed as doubtful as follows: Kansas, 10; North Dakota, 3; Wyoming, 3; California, 9; Oregon, 4; Washington, 4; Delaware, 3. Total, 93.

McKinley Feels Sure.

Canton, O., Nov. 4.—At midnight Maj. McKinley admitted publicly that he felt assured of his election. He made no announcement of the fact that he believed he had been chosen by the American people to the highest office within their gift, but he allowed his friends to congratulate him when they pressed about him. At one o'clock it was estimated that there were 25,000 people gathered in the vicinity of the McKinley home.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Mr. Payne's Claim.

Chicago, Nov. 4. — Committeeman Payne claims for the republican ticket all the New England states, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Wyoming, Oregon and California.

The Next Congress.

New York, Nov. 4.—Returns up to midnight show that republicans have elected 200 congressmen; democrats, 89; populists, 11, and "sound money" democrats, 1—Josiah Patterson, of Tennessee. This leaves 87 districts to be heard from.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Chairman Babcock, of the republican congressional committee, claims 100 majority against silver in the next house.

Advices from the various states are as follows:

Illinois.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—The state gives McKinley a plurality of 100,000 and John R. Tanner (rep.), for governor, about the same.

Ohio.

Columbus, O., Nov. 4.—Chairman Kurtz at 11 p. m. claimed the state on returns so far received for McKinley by 102,000. The entire state ticket, headed by Charles R. Kinney, for secretary of state, is elected by pluralities no less. Of the 21 congressional districts the republicans have carried 17 and the democrats 2, leaving 2 districts still in doubt.

Michigan.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 4.—The Journal estimates that the state has gone from 60,000 to 80,000 republican. The entire republican state ticket, headed by Mayor Pingree for governor, is elected. The legislature will be two-thirds republican. Democrats concede the election of 10 out of 12 republican congressmen.

Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 4.—Chairman Roberts, of the republican state committee, claims Kentucky for McKinley by 25,000, and that the republicans have seven, and possibly ten congressmen.

Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 4.—Unless the returns from the country districts shall show enormous democratic gains, McKinley has carried Indiana by at least 30,000 plurality. The entire republican state ticket is elected by pluralities that are almost as large as that for McKinley. It is estimated that James A. Mount, the republican candidate for governor, will have at least 28,000 plurality. The republicans claim 12 out of the 13 congressmen and the legislature by a decisive majority in both branches, meaning a republican successor to Senator Voorhees.

Iowa.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 4.—The Leader (dem.) concedes the state to McKinley by over 50,000. The democratic state committee also concedes Iowa to McKinley. Chairman McMillan, of the republican state central committee, says that from returns received up to midnight Iowa will give McKinley 85,000 over Bryan. The committee also claims the election of each of the 11 republican congressmen.

Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 4.—The state has apparently given the Buckeye statesman about 50,000 plurality. Every county so far reporting gives a big McKinley majority. Clough (rep.) is reelected governor. It is a clean republican sweep on congressmen except the Seventh district.

New York.

New York, Nov. 4.—The returns from over three-fourths of the election districts in New York city indicate that McKinley will carry the city by 25,000 plurality. His plurality in the state is figured at 200,000. Black, republican candidate for governor, will have 60,000 plurality, and the delegation in congress will consist of 27 republicans, 6 democrats and 1 independent. In Brooklyn McKinley has 20,000 plurality.

Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 4.—Out of the apparent republican avalanche in neighboring states, Nebraska has seemingly remained true to Bryan, who has, on the face of the scattering returns, carried the state by from 6,000 to 12,000. Chairman Post, of the republican committee, declines to concede defeat, but the figures disprove his claims.

GARRET A. HOBART.

Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Nov. 4.—The indications are that McKinley will carry Wisconsin by at least 50,000 majority. Edward C. Wall, of the democratic committee, concedes the state by 100,000, to McKinley. The republicans have elected ten congressmen. Maj. Edward Scofield, the republican candidate for governor, and the entire republican state ticket are elected, and the republicans will have 75 of the 100 members of the assembly, and the state will also be overwhelmingly republican.

Utah.

Salt Lake City, Nov. 4. — Exceedingly meager returns are at hand, but such as have been received and reliable estimates show that Bryan and Sewall have carried Utah by 40,000 to 45,000 majority, and King (dem.) is elected to congress by probably 10,000 majority.

Idaho.

Boise City, Idaho, Nov. 4.—Returns come in very slowly and there will be no figures obtainable until morning. The state is conceded to Bryan by 15,000 to 20,000 majority.

Delaware.

New York, Nov. 4.—The Times' bulletin says the democrats concede Delaware to the republicans by 1,000.

Montana.

Butte, oMnt., Nov. 4.—Returns from the state are meager, but indicate a smaller majority for Bryan than was expected. He will carry the state by 25,000.

Oregon.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 4.—One hundred and ninety-eight precincts out of 733 give McKinley, 19,658; Bryan, 16,144.

West Virginia.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 4.—On basis of the returns the state is estimated at 12,000 to 15,000 for McKinley.

California.

San Francisco, Nov. 4.—California gives 4,500 majority for McKinley.

The Carolinas.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 4.—Bulletins received here from all parts of South Carolina show that the democratic presidential, congressional, state and county tickets have been successful by overwhelming majorities.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 4.—Populists and democrats voted nearly solid for Bryan and claim the state. The result for governor is in doubt. The other republican-populist fusion state officers are elected.

Colorado.

Denver, Col., Nov. 4.—A very heavy vote was cast in Colorado, and Bryan electors win by a large majority.

Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 4.—As far as learned up to a late hour the election in the state passed off quietly. Chairman Cooper, of the republican state central committee, concedes Bryan's majority at 45,000.

Wyoming.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 4.—Returns of 297 Wyoming precincts give McKinley 796; Bryan, 732; democratic gain of 201. Same gains throughout the state will give Bryan a plurality of 1,400.

Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 4.—There being eight long tickets on the Australian ballot, the count in Kansas is slow. Returns from scattering precincts in 20 counties show republican gains. Chairman Simpson, of the republican state committee, says that McKinley has carried the state by 10,000; that the state ticket is elected, and that the republicans have elected at least five out of the eight congressmen and a majority of both branches of the legislature, insuring the election of a United States senator to succeed Mr. Peffer.

North Dakota.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 4.—Returns have been received from 204 precincts in 28 counties, indicating that Maj. McKinley has carried North Dakota by at least 1,000, and probably by 4,500. Johnson (rep.) is reelected to congress by 1,000, and all the republican state ticket is elected.

Maryland.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 4.—McKinley has carried Maryland by at least 15,000 majority. The indications also are that the state will send a solid republican delegation to the next house of representatives.

Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 4.—Bryan's majority in Georgia is estimated at 40,000.

Massachusetts.

Boston, Nov. 4.—McKinley has carried Boston by 12,000 and Massachusetts by over 100,000. The democratic vote has fallen off 61 per cent, and the republican gain is 49 per cent. Williams, the democratic candidate for governor, is defeated by Wolcott (rep.) by 150,000. Twelve republican congressmen are elected, and the result is in doubt in the Ninth district.

Missouri.

St. Louis, Nov. 4.—Chairman Cook, of the democratic state committee, claims Bryan carries Missouri by 40,000. Conservative estimates give St. Louis to the republicans by at least 25,000 majority.

Connecticut.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 4.—Bryan carries only three out of 111 towns which reported in this state and none in the cities. McKinley's plurality will be 40,000.

Texas.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 4.—Meager and scattering returns only have been received. State Chairman Blake (dem.) estimates Bryan's plurality at 100,000.

New Jersey.

Cape May City, N. J., Nov. 4.—The returns so far from New Jersey indicate that McKinley has carried the state by 45,000. The republican committee chairman claims the state by 40,000, while the democratic chairman concedes the state to McKinley by 30,000. The reports show that the whole eight republican congressmen are elected, and the republicans have both branches of the legislature by a large majority. The senators elected will vote for a successor to United States Senator James Smith.

Washington.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 4.—The indications are that McKinley has carried Washington by a small plurality, and that Sullivan (rep.) is elected governor.

Rhode Island.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 4.—As soon as the returns began to come in it was evident that the state had given McKinley an overwhelming majority. Town after town, irrespective of political complexion upon local issues, cast the vote for the republican candidate, and his plurality will be 20,000.

Maine.

Portland, Me., Nov. 4.—There is a general falling off of about 25 per cent. in the total vote, compared with that of the state election. The probability is that the republican plurality will be 40,000.

Tennessee.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 4.—Reutrns up to midnight, though only partial, show a large vote by both political parties for president, and the best information obtainable is that Bryan has carried the state by a safe majority.

Mississippi.

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 4.—Mississippi gives Bryan a majority of 50,000. The vote for Watson will not exceed 10,000.

Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—Returns are coming in slowly, but those received indicate that McKinley will carry the state by 175,000 plurality. The Pennsylvania delegation to the lower house of congress will probably stand, republicans, 25; democrats, 5.

Louisiana.

New Orleans, Nov. 4.—Louisiana gives 40,000 majority for Bryan and elects six democratic congressmen.

Virginia.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4.—Returns indicate that the electoral vote of Virginia will surely be given to Bryan.

South Dakota.

Huron, S. D., Nov. 4.—South Dakota threw its vote for Maj. McKinley by at least 5,000, and later figures may increase his majority to 10,000. But four counties of the state seem to have gone for the fusion ticket. Both republican congressmen are elected. The legislature is overwhelmingly republican, insuring a gold successor to Senator Kyle.

Florida.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 4.—Twenty-six precincts out of 632 in Florida give Bryan 1,262, McKinley, 107. If the ratio continues throughout the state Bryan's plurality will exceed 10,000.

A Fatal Error.

Deming, N. M., Nov. 2.—While in pursuit of border bandits who have been committing murders and robberies in the southwest and in the vicinity of Skeleton canyon, near the Arizona line, Deputy Sheriff Frank M. Galloway, of Silver City, was shot and kill by a member of his own posse, who mistook him for a robber in the darkness, having called out to him and received no answer. The posse was close upon the robbers, but had camped for the night and Galloway was on watch. The robbers have made their escape.

Negro Kills a Farmer.

Owenson, Ky., Nov. 2.—Peter Shea, a prominent farmer and trader, was shot and instantly killed by Jim Burke, a desperate negro, near his home at Lusby Mill Saturday. The negro was drinking and got into an argument on politics with the crowd. Seeing there might be trouble, Shea, who knew Burke, led his horse some 25 yards away, when Burke pulled a pistol and shot Shea through the head without the slightest provocation. Burke escaped.

Fatal Collision.

Westchester, Pa., Nov. 2.—The second section of the day express on the Pennsylvania railroad, four hours late, crashed into the rear end of a freight train at Whitford at nine o'clock Saturday night, killing one man and seriously wounding another. The caboose, in which was John Clark, a drover of Pleasant, O., was smashed into splinters and Clark was killed. The conductor, brakeman and flagman of the freight were all seriously injured.

Singular Death of a Hunter.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 2.—Ira Sawyer, while coon hunting near Hamlin, W. Va., became separated from his companions. He built a fire against a tree and while asleep the tree burned through and fell upon him. While he was pinioned the tree kept on burning until it reached Sawyer, who was literally roasted alive. He was found by his friends just before he expired.

Many invitations were issued for the marriage of Harry U. Kies to Miss Maretta Fellows, of Saline, who were married yesterday. They will live on the farm.

For some time past Clark Bailey has been actively engaged in furnishing his house preparatory to a most important event in his history. He evidently acted upon the suggestion so often given—"Provide the cage before securing the bird." It was a very happy company that gathered in that cosy home Wednesday evening to witness the ceremony by Rev. D. H. Ramsdell which changed the name of Miss Mertie Cummins to that of Mrs. Clark Bailey. Charles O. Wiltse and Miss Alice Rose attended the bride and groom. The guests were received by them as they arrived. It was a very pretty home wedding.

Joe Alexander arrived home Saturday from the Queen's dominion. He came to perform his duty as an American citizen by depositing his ballot November 3rd.

Charles O'Hara's little girl, thirteen months old, was fatally burned Thursday so that it died Sunday. The mother put a fire-lighter in the stove and stepped outside the door for wood. While she was gone the child took the fire-lighter setting fire to its clothing. The funeral was held Wednesday.

The law for specific kinds of game expiring October 31st, the sportsmen are in high glee. Being a firm believer in the adage "The early bird catches the worm," Seth W. Demuth was off hunting early Monday morning. The number of his trophies he keeps to himself.

Rev. T. H. Warner, having accepted a call from a church at Perry, Shiawassee county, moved his family there this week. The reverend gentleman and his estimable wife during their sojourn here have formed many strong friendships that will be enduring. Our entire community wish them success in their new home and field of labor.

The HERALD article in its Clinton department, referred to by the editor in last week's local, did not eminate from Charlie Keyes, as assumed by brother Blanchard, but was furnishnd by one of Clinton's respected citizens who has always been a republican. We make this explanation knowing that Charlie's modesty forbids compliments to which he has no claim.

No more will the pleasant and familiar face of John Nelson be seen on our streets, he having joined the great majority on the other side. Although in failing health for some time, his friends hoped there would be a change for the better, but it was not so to be, and he laid down life's burden last Friday. His funeral was held Sunday under the auspices of the G. A. R., and was largely attended by sorrowing friends.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to know that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

CLOSED ITS DOORS.

A Banking Institution at Big Rapids Has Failed.

Big Rapids, Oct. 30.—The Mecosta county savings bank of this city did not open its doors Thursday morning. Wednesday, after a run on the bank and $12,000 had been paid out, the doors were closed. At a meeting of the directors this course was decided upon. Inability to raise money on collateral deposits are announced as the cause of the failure. The bank's last statement, issued on October 6, showed resources to be $302,000, of which some $44,000 was cash on hand. Since then there have been steady runs, which during the past few days have drained the bank of all its available cash. The bank's officials assert that all depositors will be paid dollar for dollar, but despite their assurance there is considerable uneasiness among those interested. The Michigan Trust company of Grand Rapids is named as assignee.

A seeming great wrong is being uncovered by the assignees of the bank. Mr. Brown, the assignee, made affidavit that D. F. Comstock, the bank's president, had received $75,000 of the bank's funds and was putting his property into other hands. An injunction was issued, and the sheriff attached Comstock's unfinished block and all other realty that could be found. During the issuance of the papers it was discovered that Comstock had deeded to his wife the $15,000 homestead and given chattel mortgages for $21,000 to his two married daughters on personal property. His son Chester, who was general manager of the bank, is still away, and the ugly charges afloat are strengthened by his continued absence.

CLAIMS THE HEART OF TOWN.

Residents of Mount Pulaski Disturbed by a Coming Suit.

Ithaca, Oct. 30.—John Jeffery, a real estate man here, has claimed 80 acres of land in the heart of Mount Pleasant The land covers the south half of the city and includes the central Michigan normal school and the fine residence portion of the city. When John Jeffery, Sr., died he held a warranty deed to the property from a man named John M. Hursh, who made the deed from his wife by power of attorney. Mrs. Hursh claimed the deed was a mortgage, and that she never gave him the power of attorney. Then a man named Robert Hillock secured a deed from Mrs. Hursh and commenced suit against Mr. Jeffery and heirs to set aside the Jeffery deed and get a clear title. Jeffery claims the Hillock decree is not valid on account of an error in the proceedings. The case will be upon the Isabella county circuit court docket this fall. The land is worth over $100,000.

DR. WETMORE INNOCENT.

Story Implicating Him in the Lawrence Murder Declared False.

Holland, Nov. 2.—Dr. Judson D. Wetmore has been acknowledged innocent of the charge of complicity in the murder of Enos Lawrence, for which he is now confined in the county jail at Grand Haven. The wife of Lawrence and her brother, both of whom are serving time in Jackson prison as confessed murderers of Lawrence, have now confessed that the doctor, whom they implicated last month in the crime, is innocent of all knowledge of the murder, and that it was the woman's hope to lighten her own sentence by implicating him.

In a Receiver's Hands.

Petoskey, Oct. 30.—The Connable Fishing company, one of the supposed strongest financial institutions in Petoskey, has gone into the hands of a receiver. Twenty years ago B. Connable & Sons engaged in shipping Petoskey lake trout and made a fortune. Later Ralph Connable, Sr., retired, being succeeded by Connable Bros., and they in turn three years ago sold out to the Connable Fishing company, retaining stock and business management. Fishing stations were maintained here, at Mackinac and at Grand Marais and offices in Chicago. The business will continue under a reorganization Payment to Indians Deferred.

Benton Harbor, Nov. 3.—David Fisher, of Kalamazoo, who was appointed to distribute money due the Pottawatomie Indians from the United States, has resigned, and the payments which were to have been made this week will not be made until later, and then by a regular United States Indian agent. This information was received Monday morning by Brace Knapp, of this city. He is a relative of Chief Pokagon.

Lumber Piles Burned.

Stephenson, Nov. 2.—About 11 o'clock Saturday night five lumber piles in different parts of Ira Casley's yard at Ingalls, three miles south of here, were discovered burning. Casley's oil house, near the mill, was broken into and the lumber saturated with oil. The piles were fired about the same time. Two dwellings were also burned. The loss is $21,000; insurance, $18,500.

Arrested for Counterfeiting.

Grand Rapids, Nov. 3. — William Deighner, Mrs. Emma Zimmerman, Deighner's stepmother, and Ira Koung, an inmate of the soldier's home, were arrested Monday for counterfeiting and for raising bills from one to ten dollars. Koung has confessed. A lot of counterfeiting apparatus and coins were found at Deighner's house.

A Sudden Death.

Port Huron, Oct. 31.—Mrs. David Worden, of Eleventh street, died suddenly while making a call at the M. E. parsonage. She had been seated in the sitting-room scarcely a minute when she fell to the floor and expired instantly. Drs. Lewis, Randall, Stewart and Vollmar were called and decided that death had been caused by apoplexy.

Benton Harbor, Nov. 3.—Shriver Brothers, fruit growers of this locality, sent a crate of ripe strawberries Monday to Maj. McKinley and his wife. Some of Shriver's plants are producing two crops of strawberries this season.

PERISHED BY FIRE.

Wife and Daughter of a Farmer Burned to Death.

Jackson, Oct. 31.—The home of Albert Robinson, living near Trumbull Station, a few miles from this city, was destroyed by fire Friday morning and Mrs. Robinson and her eight-year-old daughter were burned to death and Mr. Robinson probably fatally burned. Mr. Robinson was trying to build a fire in the kitchen stove and poured kerosene on the fire from a five-gallon can. An explosion followed, and, wrapped in flames, Robinson rushed into the bedroom. His wife wrapped bedding around him to smother the flames and then ran to the kitchen. Robinson, supposing his wife and child had escaped, jumped from a window. The bodies of the mother and child were found in the ruins, both burned to a crisp. Robinson is seriously burned.

Held Up in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 30. — Robert J. White, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was held up and robbed of his purse containing $400 by a trio of colored women Thursday night. At the time of the robbery Mr. White was passing beneath the elevated railroad structure in Harmon court. He was pounced upon by three negro women and before he could recover himself his assailants had fled with his money.

Railroad Earnings.

Lansing, Oct. 30.—There was a falling off of $74,559 in the amount the railroads earned in Michigan in August, as compared with the earnings of the same month last year. The total earnings this year were $2,545,883. The aggregate earnings of $19,201,865 from January 1 to September 1 were, however, an increase of $658,320, or 3.42 per cent. over the same period of 1895.

Instantly Killed.

Houghton, Oct. 30.—Paul Kabi, aged 26, single, who had just recovered from injuries detaining him eight months in Calumet and Hecla hospital, was instantly killed by a rock falling on him in the Hecla branch of the mine.

Stole Valuable Jewelry.

Clare, Oct. 31.—Thursday night, at about 8:15 o'clock, the houses of John Imerman and E. B. Horning were entered and about $300 worth of jewelry and other articles were stolen.

Fell Overboard.

Benton Harbor, Oct. 29.—Henry R. Palsley, of this city, fell overboard from the steamer Frank Woods while off Milwaukee and was drowned. He leaves a family.

HE WAS A SMART BOY.

Managed to Recover a Dropped Quarter from a Difficult Spot.

He had deposited his ticket in the box on the downtown station of the Sixth avenue "L" road at Fiftieth street early one morning, and was counting his change in a search for plugged dimes and nickels. A quarter fell from his hands and rolled along the platform until it lodged under the raised steps which form the edge of the platform. There it lay in plain view, but as unobtainable as the golden apples of Hesperides. The loser was the picture of rage, says the New York Mail and Express.

"I don't care about the blame coin," he wailed. "I've got 'em to burn; but it just makes me mad to see that quarter there, and I can't get it."

"Gimme a dime, mister," said a messenger boy, "and five cents for expenses, and I'll get your mun."

The man regarded the boy for a moment and said: "Go ahead."

He returned in a few minutes with his form working convulsively. In his hand he had a piece of scantling. The crowd watched him curiously. From his mouth the boy took a well masticated wad of chewing gum. He stuck this on the end of the scantling and, thrusting the stick through the narrow space, pressed the soft and sticky gum firmly on the lost coin. Then he deftly drew it out and presented the money to its owner.

"Keep the whole outfit," said the man. "Boy, you're a peach. We live and learn," and he boarded a train, his face wreathed in smiles. The face of the boy was similarly decorated.

THEY SPIN BY HAND.

Old-Fashioned Block Islanders Still Send Their Wool Into Connecticut.

The hum of the spinning wheel is still a familiar sound in Block Island, a quaint and interesting resort in summer and a miniature world in winter, in which the habits and customs are those of 150 years ago. The island is 15 miles off the Rhode Island shore and almost directly south of stormy Point Judith, says the New York Herald.

The heads of 30 Block Island families set sail in fishing boats the other day and pushed up the Thames river to Oakdale, where they left heaps of wool to be carded into rolls for hand spinning. The rolls will be spun and knitted into stockings and mittens for the protection of the hardy islanders against the bleak winter winds of the Atlantic.

There are times during the winter when the wind sweeps across the treeless land at a velocity of 84 miles an hour, and women take their lives in their hands when they venture out of doors. The isolation of the island is almost complete.

John Schofield established the first woollen mill in Connecticut near Oakdale, where the carding was done by power cards. In 1798 the Block Islanders began to send wool to the mill to be carded into rolls, and generation after generation have kept up the practice. Formerly many bags of grain accompanied the wool, and grist and woollen mills were kept running day and night, while the fishermen and farmers enjoyed themselves in the quiet Connecticut village until the work was done.

Cincinnati Pays $10,000 for Breitenstein.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—Pitcher Breitenstein has been sold to the Cincinnati club for $10,000 cash. Breitenstein will get none of the money.

IN OUR POCKETS.

We May Soon Be Able to Carry Gallons of Coffee.

In the forward march of science, nature's methods are being closely imitated in the laboratories of the synthetical chemist who has already been able to make an artificial quinine which contains most of the therapeutical properties of the real article. Two German chemists working in Berlin have just produced an artificially prepared caffeine, the alkaloid to which both tea and coffee owe their refreshing stimulating and analgesic properties.

As may be readily imagined, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, the process by which this has been done is exceedingly elaborate and costly, but the discoverers are not without hope that they will be able to simplify and cheapen it so as to bring it within the region of practical economics, as has been done with many of the coal-tar preparations which, though now exceedingly cheap, were very expensive when first produced.

Should the anticipations of these two gentlemen be realized a cup of tea or coffee will resolve itself into a question of minute pellets; one of the alkaloid, one of saccharine, and one of a highly concentrated milk, which will only need to be put into a cup of boiling water to be an efficient substitute for the real article.

IT WAS ON A TRAY.

Reason Why Johnnie Could Not Put the Card Under the Door.

The lady who lives at the family hotel on the North side was dressing for dinner. She was not expecting company just at that moment and was somewhat startling to the eye. But no eye was there save hers. Suddenly she was roused from a contemplation of her charms in the mirror by a knock.

"Some one is rapping again," she muttered. "Everybody in this hotel seems to have a hammer out."

Then in a clear, bird-like voice she called:

"Who is it?"

"It's Johnnie," said a voice.

Johnnie was the sad-faced boy with the painstaking head who brought up ice water and things.

"What is it, Johnnie?" asked the lady fair.

"I have a card," replied the page.

"Put it under the door," said the charming guest.

"I can't," said Johnnie; "it's on a tray."

And the elevator fell to the basement with a great crash.

Honey in Butter.

Parisian restaurant keepers mix a little honey with their butter. This gives it an agreeable taste and flavor and makes the inferior butter more palatable

Grand Rapids, Oct. 26.—A Berlin dispatch says: The United States ambassador, Edwin F. Uhl, and Mrs. Uhl announce the engagement of their daughter, Lucy Follett, to Dr. Guy V. Thompson, of Yale. The marriage will take place in Berlin during the beginning of February.

"Down Brakes, and Reverse!" When a train is discovered rushing on the system is flying along the track at such a frightful pace that no ordinary methods will prevent disaster. There are plenty of medicines which act as brakes to "slow up" the disease and ward off disaster for a little while; but that is not enough. What is needed is a medicine which will instantly reverse the entire system, and thus cure the degenerating process.

When people are losing flesh and strength and vitality, with the life oozing out day after day, they need Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which acts directly upon the vital forces, completely transforming the entire nutritive organism and absolutely reverses the wasting, debilitating process which is at the root of all disease.

It enables the digestive and blood-making organs to supply the circulation with an abundance of pure, healthy, vitalizing blood, stops the wasting of tissue, builds up solid muscular flesh and healthy nerve force.

Miss Mary Whitman, of East Constable, Franklin Co., N. Y., writes: "For several months I have had a bad cough, and instead of getting better, it grew worse, until I was persuaded by a friend to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I hesitated at first, for it seemed to me nothing would give relief only death. My parents were anxious about me, and I was afraid to have consumption. I tried your medicine, and before I had taken many doses there was a great change. When the second bottle was finished I had no cough and was a great deal stronger.

There is an era of tiny dogs in fashionable society. The more diminutive the parcel of canine flesh that you can possess the more are you a swell, says the Toledo Blade. But, alas! How many feminine readers who delight in the possession of miniature doggies know that they are an artificial product.

There is in London an establishment devoted entirely to the stunting of dogs and animals. The proprietor is a breeder of fighting dogs, but he finds more profit in rearing the Lilliputian canines, for which he has a world-wide reputation. He does not claim to be the originator of the process, for he declares that all dog men know of the dwarfing powers of alcohol, but he asserts that he is the only man in London to adopt the principle systematically.

His method is as follows: The puppy destined to be stunted is taken from its mother when a few hours old and starved until it begins to whine for sustenance. It is then fed with a warm decoction of port wine and water. Deprived of milk, it takes to this readily. When it reaches adult age alcohol in various forms constitutes the animal's sole diet. The puppies neither die nor do they develop. They simply cease to grow at all. After a period of one or two of mating the much-desired Lilliputian canine is obtained.

People who drive to Tecumseh these days cannot fail to note the improved appearance of the little cemetery situated across the road from the residence of Jim Hendershot. The grass has been mown, all the weeds and brush cleaned up and every lot put in good order. Many of the old residents of the immediate neighborhood are burried in this little resting place and the late improvement is a pleasure to everybody.

Election returns were received last Tuesday night, by telephone, at Cotton's store, and by telegraph at Bradley Scudder's. The largest crowd gathered at Cotton's and naturally filled in the waiting time with predictions of the result. One man in the crowd, who had been a good observer of elections in the past, said that as Macon had gone so had the presidential election for the past three elections. This was a new omen and roused every man present to a fever heat. After awhile the returns began to come in. Clinton, Tecumseh, Saline, all reported for McKinley and the McKinley element of the crowd yelled itself hoarse. Then came Ridgeway with 25 majority for Bryan and the other side cheered. Pretty soon came the report that Macon had given one majority for Bryan. Such a yell! It must have been heard in Nebraska. But in another moment came the report that Macon was a tie. Then the whole crowd collapsed.

Mrs. W. R. Maryfield, of Ashton, O., says: "I had a case pin worms presented to me of 30 years' standing. This man has taken three bottles of Lightning Worm Killer, and has passed, he says, over 2 1-2 gallons of worms, and that he will make oath to the same. A score of doctors told him that he could not be cured."

Mr. George Craft, of Annville, Ky., writes: "Lightning Vegetable Liver Pills have given me great benefit in kidney and liver disease of ten years' standing. They act as recommended."

Mr. J. K. Moore, of Weston, W. Va., writes: "Lightning Vegetable Liver Pills, used for constipation and piles, have given me great benefit."

Mr. C. C. Garrett, postmaster, Calm, W. Va., writes: "We have been using Lightning Worm Killer for the past six years with perfect satisfaction. It is a sere eradicator of worms, and has greatly benefitted our children."

Foley's Honey and Tar does not claim to perform miracles. It does not claim to cure all cases of consumption or asthma. How many young men and young women are cut off just as the future seems brightest and fullest of promise! They are taken away by the disease which causes over one-sixth of all the deaths in the world—the disease which doctors call consumption. There is absolutely no reason in the world why consumption should be fatal—why it should be even serious. It is a disease of the blood, and can be cured absolutely and always by purifying and enriching the blood. The only exception to this is the case where the disease has been neglected and improperly treated until it is stronger than the body—until the body has become so weak as to have lost the ability to recuperate. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure 98 per cent of all cases of consumption if used according to directions. It also cures all lingering coughs bronchial and throat affections.

TECUMSEH, MICH., [illegible] 1896.

Is there any man who is not glad that it is all over?

Mark Hanna has proven to be even a larger man than the cariacatures have pictured him.

It would hardly seem by the looks of George W. Larwell that he carried D. W. Grandon inside his waistcoat, but such seems to be the case.

It is sincerely to be regretted that this senatorial district, one of the largest and wealthiest in the whole state, should be represented in Lansing by old Bill Jibb.

It is now thought by the politicians around the county that the Hudson Gazette has completely mopped the earth with Stearns. Poor old Stearns! He stands defeat the best of any man in Michigan.

The returning of Thomas M. Camburn to Lansing is a mistake which party majority cannot undo. With this man in the lower house and Bill Jibb in the upper house this section of Michigan is certainly in a bad way.

It is really a pleasure to read the Tecumseh News this week. Now that everybody is sure which way election has turned out, the editor really expresses an opinion. A candid opinion, it matters not whether it be right or wrong, is wholesome, to say the least.

Thos. M. Camburn was re-elected to the legislature by a handsome majority, notwithstanding the efforts of the Herald to besmirch his honesty, and advice to farmers not to vote for him. Burroughs can attend to his business at home just as usual.—Tecumseh News.

The HERALD simply told the truth about Mr. Camburn and neither he nor the News dared to refute the charges, although given ample time and opportunity to do so.

"Sound money and prosperity" has been the motto of the republican party throughout this the most bitterly fought campaign since 1860. It seems from the reports, though unofficial, that the republican party will, in the next congress, control both houses. Now if this same G. O. P. will continue on with this motto of sound money and prosperity, and transact quietly and quickly the legislation which the country needs, all right and good. But they have taken upon themselves the contract to restore good times. It is the wish of every citizen in this country that this contract should be fulfilled. The wheels of industry must begin to turn and this at once. There is now no excuse for the capitalists of this country withholding their money to stimulate industry. There is now no excuse for foreign capitalists refusing to buy American stocks. There is now no reason why gold should not flow steadily in and not out of the treasuries of these Unites States. Indeed the republican party has taken upon itself a large contract and it has the ability the money and the enterprise necessary to fulfil it. The fullfilment must come and this at once, or the people of the country will be so dissatisfied that this may be counted their last victory.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Chautauquan for November, more than ever replete with literary may fitly be called a "Moliere" number. A glance at the frontispiece shows a full-figure portrait of Moliere, the master of French comedy, while the study of his life and works is presented in six appreciative articles, two of which are profusely and beautifully illustrated.

Madame Calve and Madame Melba will both appear in the next issue of the Ladies' Home Journal with articles on the voice. Madame Melba has written before and is, in fact, no novice with the pen, but this is Madame Calve's first attempt at authorship. She wrote the article in French, and after an English translation had been made of it she had the original manuscript bound between morocco covers as a souvenir of her debut as a writer.

* * *

During November some interesting and characteristic features in the progress of the political campaign will be shown in pictures by T. de Thulstrup, who has made a special trip to the National Headquarters at Chicago in the interests of Harper's Weekly. Princeton's sesqui-centennial will be fully treated by the Weekly, in illustration and text; and Robert Reid's decorations for the Congressional Library will form the subject of an attractive paper.

The November "Forum" will contain among other articles "As Maine Goes, so Goes the Union."—a trenchant article by the Hon. Thomas B. Reed, whose drift is perhaps sufficiently indicated by its title. Mr. Edward P. Clark under the title "The Solid South Dissolving," contributes an interesting study of the way in which the South grew from normal conditions into solidity, and the way in which that solidity is now disappearing—a very timely and suggestive paper. Mr. E. W. Codington, a business man of Florida, discusses the Money question with uncommon lucidity, and suggests a plan for placing our financial system upon a sound basis. The "Forum" sweeps over the whole field of contemporary thought and activity, and presents to its readers scholarly and authoritative discussions of the leading questions of the day by experts in their respective fields.

The complete novel in the November issue of Lippincott's is "An Interrupted Current," by Howard M. Yost, a new writer with a happy knack of story-telling. The scene is in eastern Pennsylvania, and the action turns on tracing the perpetrators of a bank robbery and their plunder.

The Arena closes its sixteenth volume with the November number, which is one of the most notable issues of that progressive magazine. It contains striking papers on the money question by Prof. Frank Parsons, of the Boston University School of Law, Justice Walter Clark, LL. D., of the Supreme Bench of North Carolina, Hon. William H. Standish, and B. O. Flower, the editor.

The Hon. Thomas C. Platt discusses "The Effect of Republican Victory" in the November number of the North American Review, and confidently asserts that the election of McKinley and Hobert will constitute a verdict so emphatic that during the lifetime of all those who are on earth today, no man or party will be found bold enough to go before the people advocating doctrines which mean repudiation.

An important feature of Harper's Magazine for several months to come will be Poultney Bigelow's series of papers on the "White Man's Africa." treating in a thoroughly popular way the new continent recently opened up to European exploitation. The first paper, in the November Number, will be merely introductory, but it will give a novel view of Jameson's raid from material placed in the author's hand by an English physician and a Boer official—thus presenting both sides of this remarkable episode. The series is the result of a journey to South Africa undertaken by Mr. Bigelow for Harper's Magazine and is illustrated from photographs specially made for the purpose.

The superior truth and delicacy of the old daguerreotype are made manifest in the November "McClure's," where fine reproductions of daguerreotype portraits of Calhoun, Webster, Edward Everett, Dr. Holmes, Jenny Lind, and others, from rare collections still surviving, illustrates an entertaining paper by Mrs. D. T. Davis, on the development of daguerreotyping in America. Soon after the discovery of the process, American daguerreotypers became the finest in the world, and there is a strong movement now toward a revival of the art. The paper is, therefore, timely as well as entertaining.

Birds and monkeys will often warn the jungler of the approach of a tiger—the latter especially take every opportunity to express by loud hootings the intensity of their feelings at the hated presence of either of the dread beings of their jungles. I have heard too that peculiar bark of the sombar stag sound again and again in the night air from out the dark jungles on the banks of the Nerbudda, as he sends out a warning to his kind that murderous "stripes" is stalking near.—From "Panther-shooting in Central India." by Capt. C. J. Melliss, of the 9th Bombay Infantry, in the November Scribner's.

"The Food of the Anglo-Saxons," by Dora M. Merrill, is the title of the leading article in the November issue of "Table Talk." It touchs upon the menus and special dishes eaten by the English in America, Austria, England, Canada and India, and is followed by "Some Old-Fashioned Thanksgiving Dainties," by Eliza R. Parker. Miss Cornelia C. Bedford gives an exhaustive and valuable article on "Bread;" Miss E. Marguerite Lindley on "Dress and Its Effect upon Health and Mind." Any of our readers, sending their name and address to the Table Talk Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., are offered a sample copy of the magazine free.

All through the campaign, "Public Opinion" has successfully maintained its reputation for fairness. Every shade of thought upon all topics is represented in its American Affairs department; not one man's opinion but the opinion of every man who is at all representative. "Public Opinion," (published in New York), is the one journal that enables its readers to keep posted upon the happenings in every field of human activity. Your local paper furnishes information as to purely local affairs and "Public Opinion" furnishes a view of national affairs. For $2.50 you can be a thoroughly posted man for one year. Six months for $1.25.

Magazine articles about the late George Du Maurier are likely to be quite numerous during the coming months. The first noteworthy attempt to form an estimate of Du Maurier's career that has appeared in America since his death, is in the form of a profusely illustrated article contributed to the November "Review of Reviews" by Mr. Ernest Knaufft, who describes Du Maurier's qualities as an artist and illustrator, rather than his more recently developed gifts as a writer of fiction. Mr. Knaufft has for years followed Du Maurier's work in "Punch," and his article is illustrated with many evidences of his zeal and success as an enthusiastic collector of Du Mauriana. There are also several interesting portraits of the author of "Trilby."

There is a "new girl" as well as a "new woman." She has not been much talked about and she would not like to be; but she exists—strong of muscle and keen of intellect; modest and dignified; fearless yet tender; selfreliant yet never aggressive; a girl more often beautiful than otherwise, for beauty is the divine right of every woman properly bred and nourished. She is well groomed and dressed, unconsciously expressing her harmony of thought in harmony of appearance. She is a loving, lovable girl, with a capacity for romance; but none for "sentimentalism." She is the newest growth of a new country—an exponent of the freshest and strongest civilization in existence. —From Mary Annable Fanton, in Demorest's Magazine for November.

Charles Meredyth Woodward.

Charles M. Woodward was the third son in a family of four brothers and two sisters, children of John and Polly Woodward, and was born on a farm on the east side of Seneca lake in the township of Hector, Schuyler County, New York, February 10th, 1843. His early life did not differ materially from many raised on a farm. He attended the district school and afterwards the academy or college near by, from which he graduated with honor (being second in his class) in the early spring of 1861. His home associations were of such a character that he formed habits of industry and imbibed sentiments of honor and Christian charity which characterized his future life in a marked degree. His intense love for the profession which he afterwards chose and in which he attained prominence, was, in a sense, inherited, as on both sides of the family there was a tendency to the professions, especially the clerical and medical professions, in which many gained distinction. In April 1861 at the age of eighteen, in company with an elder brother, he enlisted as a private in Company I 23rd Regiment, New York Volunteers, under command of Col. H. C. Hoffman, which started for the front in May. Soon after he was promoted to Corporal and then to Sergeant. While on a prolonged march he had a severe sunstroke which incapacitated him for the hardships of out door army life and he was transferred to the medical department of the army of the Potomac. While here he prosecuted his studies under Surgeons Kolleck and James Collins of the U. S. Army. On being mustered out with his company in the spring of 1863, he immediately returned to the army of the Potomac and served as hospital steward till the close of the war, when he returned home and continued his professional studies under the late Dr. G. N. Dox, of Geneva. In 1867 he graduated from the medical college at Albany N. Y. For a time he served as assistant physician in the sanitarium at Geneva. June 12th, 1867 at North Pelham, Canada West, he married Mattie L., second daughter of Rev. Leonard Neelishan. He then located at Waterloo N. Y., where he soon secured a lucrative practice and gained prominence in his profession. He was a member of the different medical societies and medical director of the G. A. R. He came to Michigan and located at Port Huron in 1874. A year later, at the urgent solicitations of friends he came to Tecumseh where he has since resided. In 1879 he entered the State Militia as Assistant Surgeon of the 1st Regiment, under Dr. Porter. He was promoted to Surgeon with rank of Major in 1883, and again promoted in 1891 to Brigade Surgeon General with rank of Lieutenant General, his term expiring in 1894. He leaves behind him a grand military record and in his beloved profession one most flattering. He was a valued member of the medical societies, both State and National, and frequently presented papers of great merit. In this community he held a high position in religious, social, musical and professional circles, and his place will be difficult to fill. He was a devoted member of and greatly attached to the Episcopal church and for many years was a member of the choir. He was an accomplished musician and formed the social orchestra whose valuable services were freely offered for all charitable and worthy objects. He was a member of the Masonic bodies, G. A. R. and Royal Arcanum.

The obsequies were perhaps the most imposing ever held here and were conducted in a beautiful manner by funeral director Tansley, who had entire charge of the civil and Major Seymour Howell, of Adrian, of the military departments. The services were held at St. Peter's church and conducted by Rev. W. R. Blachford. The cortege was arranged in the following manner:—Band, Company B, of Adrian, Company C, old members of Company C, Royal Arcanum, Business Men and Masons, Physicians, G. A. R. Post, hearse and bearers, horse caparisoned but riderless, mourners and friends. At the grave, Beers Post had charge of the services.

Besides brothers and sisters, the widow and two daughters, Amy Meredyth and Anna Agnes, survive him. Among the many expressions of sympathy and eulogies for his worth received by the family, the following is taken from a communication received from Dr. J. E. Clark, of Detroit, Surgeon General of Michigan:—

"To Dr. Woodward's push and perseverence is due, in a large measure, the improved position occupied by the medical officers of the M. N. G., and it seems to me had his wishes and aims been given more consideration by our military boards, the medical department would be in even better condition than at present. My association with him was such as to gain for him my admiration for his talents and ability as an organizer and professional man. He leaves an honorable record in the military, one of which any man might be proud. As an officer and a gentleman he will be missed in no respect more seriously than by those who have the interest of the militia at heart, not only in the state of Michigan but in the national organization of military medical officers at the inception of which he was a moving spirit. He had the honor of being the first Surgeon General of Michigan, I the last, and I trust when my time comes I will be as deserving of honorable remembrance as Dr. C. M. Woodward."

Tecumseh Council No. 634, Royal Arcanum.

Tecumseh, Mich., Nov. 2, '96.

WHEREAS: It hath pleased Almighty God our Heavenly Father, the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, to remove from our midst our brother, Dr. C. M. Woodward, a charter member of this Council and its medical examiner since its organization, therefore

RESOLVED: That we sincerely mourn his death as a loss to this Council and the community of which he has so long been an active and useful member.

RESOLVED: That we tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this, their sad affliction, feeling as we do that their bereavement is our loss and that we must mourn with them the death of our friend and brother.

RESOLVED: That the charter of this Council be suitably draped for thirty days; that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family of the deceased brother; that a copy be placed on the records of the council and also be published in the Tecumseh HERALD and Tecumseh News and the Crown, the official paper of the Order in this state.

Resolutions on the Death of Dr. C. M. Woodward.

Whereas it hath pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from earth Dr. Charles M. Woodward, a devoted communicant of St. Peter's church and for the past twenty years a faithful member of the vestry; be it

RESOLVED: That we hereby give expression to our heartfelt sorrow at the loss we as a church and congregation have sustained in his death. We shall greatly miss his genial presence and zealous spirit in all the work connected with the maintenance and support of the parish, and while keenly feeling our own loss, we tender to his afflicted family our sympathy in their bereavement, and commend them to the kind providence of an all-wise and all-merciful Father.

RESOLVED: That a copy of these resolutions be given to the family and that they be spread upon the records of the church.

By order of the Vestry of St. Peter's church.

Mr. Kellogg and some of the boys were forced to form themselves into an impromptu fire company Monday noon, some burning leaves having set fire to the sidewalk.

Tuesday morning several enthusiastic sophomores arrived early and by nine o'clock the B room was brilliant with flags and flowers. The first two hours were devoted to exercises in honor of the day. The lives of Bryan, McKinley, Hobart, Sewall, Mrs. McKinley and Mrs. Bryan being given, together with an address on patriotism, by Mr. Kellogg, and the song America by the pupils. The last hour in the afternoon was given over to the pupils of the A room by Miss Hartbeck. Will Hicks, Harry Osgood and Leigh Pennington took charge of the exercises. The McKinley March was played by Mary Mills, Mr. Kellogg addressed the pupils for about ten minutes, after which Leigh Pennington and Will Hicks debated on the financial question, the silver side being presented by Leigh and Will took care of the gold. Exercises closed with the rendering of the Bryan March by Naomi North. All expressed themselves much pleased with the exercises.

Surveyor—Blair 426, Baluss 355, Cole 11—Blair plurality 71.

The entire republican county ticket was elected and for the following pluralities in Lenawee county from governor down, the Herald is indebted to the Adrian Times:

Returns this year from the outlying districts have been exceptionally tardy in their transmission, and difficult to get. From 23 towns and wards received from reliable sources, at the Times office this morning, we make the following computation of pluralities on the republican ticket. The remaining townships may not materially affect these figures, and judging from their vote in previous years, any change will be to the advantage of the winning candidates:

Governor—Hazen S. Pingree, 736.

Representative in congress, second district—George Spalding, 638.

McKinley and Hobart electors, 649.

State senator, fifth district—William Jibb, 254.

Representative, first district—Thos. M. Camburn, 325.

Representative, second district—Wm. R. Edgar, 98.

Judge of probate—Richard B. Robbins, 496.

Sheriff—Edwin S. Ferguson, 626.

County clerk—Edwin Leroy Mills, 543.

Register of deeds—Mark B. Mills, 784.

Treasurer—James E. Jacklin, 817.

Prosecuting attorney—John E. Bird, 819.

Circuit court commissioners—Geo. Chapman, 690; Leslie B. Robertson, 462.

Coroners—Samuel M. Hamilton, 585; John I. Rnapp, 493.

Surveyor—James Blair, 669.

Cyrus Palmer.

We clip the following from the Centreville Observer as Cyrus Palmer, in a very early day, was a resident of Ridgeway township, where he has many relatives and was well known to all the old settlers in this region of the county. He was an uncle of Mrs. G. W. Jackson, of our village:—

Cyrus Palmer was born in Walworth, Wayne County New York, on May 17th, 1815, and died at his home in Nottawa township October 14th, 1896, at the advanced age of 81 years, 4 months and 27 days.

He was a son of John and Mary Palmer, who emigrated to Lenawee county, this state, in the spring of 1831, and settled on land in which is now Ridgeway township, where, after reaching a good old age, they passed from earth. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom Cyrus was the second son. He came with his parents when they removed to this state and was at that time fifteen years old. He continued to live with them until the year 1838, and then with his wife he came to this county and settled in Nottawa township.

He was married September 17th, 1837, to Miss Mary Schreder, in Lenawee county, Ridgeway township. When Mr. and Mrs. Palmer came to this county it was little better than a wilderness. Their first work after settling was to make a clearing; that done, to cultivate and improve the land. Their first home was constructed of logs, and in it they resided for a number of years.

Their golden wedding was celebrated September 17th, 1887. September 17th last was their 59th anniversary. Seldom do companions continue so long together in the journey of life. There were present on the day of the funeral their seven children, six of whom acted as pall bearers. All save two of them were at his bedside when the spirit took its departure.

In this, their hour of bereavement, the aged mother and seven children have the prayers and sympathy of neighbors and friends.

It is a notable fact that this pioneer is the last in St. Joseph county who yields up the title to his land which he has held from the general government since the days of Andrew Jackson. Their home never has been transferred nor mortgaged. Steadily the old pioneers have yielded their former possessions.

In the death of Mr. Palmer the township loses an honest, industrious and upright citizen, the neighborhood an excellent neighbor and sympathetic friend and the family a loving and kind parent.

The funeral services were largely attended and conducted by Rev. J. W. McDougall, of Mendon, from the home. His remains were laid to rest in the Ketchum cemetery.

A Golden Wedding.

Last Thursday afternoon, Oct. 22, 1896, a pleasant company of relatives and friends assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Eberhart to pay their respects to this venerable couple and extend their congratulations to the aged ones, who have traveled down life's journey side by side for fifty years.

Owing to the feebleness of Mrs. Eberhart, the entertainment was given in the form of a reception, the guests being received by Miss Anna Eberhart and Mrs. John Gillespie, daughters of the bride and groom. A delicious collation was served in the dining room and each guest, upon departing, was given a souvenir in the form of a heart-shaped brochure with appropriate quotations, memorizing the event, written thereon, and tied with golden ribbon. The bride and groom were remembered with a number of choice presents while the children and grandchildren will ever cherish the memory of the day as one of those rare instances that come only to a favored few in the course of a life time.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

THE ELECTION.

The State Goes for McKinley—Pingree Elected Governor.

Detroit, Nov. 4.—Chairman Ferry, of the republican state central committee, claims Michigan by 50,000, and the returns received up to midnight make his estimate probably a conservative one. Figuring from the two o'clock count, Pingree has received a plurality of 5,000, with McKinley running a close second. This may be reduced. A careful estimate, based on returns at hand, show that at least four out of twelve of the congressmen will be republican, and the entire delegation is not an improbability.

The following congressmen, all republican, are known to be elected:

First district	John B. Corliss
Fourth district	H. H. Hamilton
Fifth district	William Alden Smith
Seventh district	H. C. Smith
Ninth district	R. I. Fisher
Eleventh district	W. S. Mesick
Twelfth district	C. D. Sheldon

In the presidential election of 1892 Michigan cast 476,217 votes, giving the state to the republicans by a plurality of 20,412. In the state election of 1894 Michigan went republican by the largest majority the state has ever given. There were 416,538 votes cast, and of these 237,215 went to the republican candidate, giving a republican plurality of 106,392.

Appended dispatches from various points throughout the state tell how the battle at the polls was waged:

Adrian—Returns thus far show republicans carry Lewanee county by 500 for McKinley and Spalding for congress. Pingree, for governor, runs ahead. Six towns and four wards of this city give Bryan 2,083, McKinley, 2,333.

Benton Harbor—St. Joseph gives McKinley 630; Bryan, 320. Palmer, 68—a republican gain of 130. The county will go 2,500 for McKinley. Eth Hamilton, for congress, will get a few more votes than McKinley Pingree, for governor, has 2,300 plurality.

Big Rapids—The republicans have carried this city by 300 and Mecosta county by from 700 to 800.

Cassopolis—This town gives Bryan 113 plurality. Fourteen townships give Bryan 115 plurality. Democratic gain over 1892, 200. Jarvis, for congress, gets about the same vote.

Constantine—Constantine gives 140 plurality to McKinley, the largest republican plurality ever given. Three townships show republican gain of 150 over 1892.

Decatur—Decatur township gives McKinley 277; Bryan, 269. Incomplete returns from Van Buren county indicate a republican majority of 600 to 800, as against 2,600 at the last state election.

Grand Haven—This city gives McKinley 675; Bryan, 364. Smith, republican, for congress, 689; Hummer, silver democrat, 366. Pingree, republican, for governor, 707; Sligh, silver democrat, 315; Sprague, gold democrat, 46. This is a republican gain of one-third since the last election in this city.

Ironwood—Eight wards of this city give McKinley 1,688; Bryan, 574. The same wards in 1892 gave Harrison 2,344; Cleveland, 1,615. Pingree, for governor, and Sheldon, republican, for congress, have the same vote as McKinley. Eleven precincts in Gogebic county out of 18 give McKinley 1,533 and Bryan 663.

Marquette—McKinley and Hobart carry the town by about 150, a change of 200 or 300 votes. The town usually goes democratic by from 50 to 200.

Sault Ste. Marie—Chippewa county gives McKinley 700 plurality; republican gain of 500. This city gives McKinley a plurality of 400, a gain over 1892 of 324.

Hudson—The Abbott voting machine, which was given its first test here Tuesday, proves to be all that was claimed for it. Hudson has 700 votes and not a single person experienced trouble in voting quickly and without confusion. The entire vote of the city was polled at least two hours before the polls closed. One blind and one armless man voted on the machine. Following is the official result: McKinley, 402; Bryan, 273; Palmer, 13; congressman, Spalding, republican, 396; Barkworth, silver democrat, 276; governor, Pingree, 371; Sligh, 279; Sprague, 27. McKinley's plurality here is a gain of 60 over 1892.

FARM AND GARDEN.

FOR SMOKING MEATS.

How to Improvise a Suitable House in a Few Moments.

The approach of the season when meats are usually preserved by smoking, calls up suggestions in regard to this subject. One plan is illustrated herewith. Where one has but a few pieces of meat to smoke, a smokehouse may be improvised in a few moments by taking two empty barrels and arranging them in the manner shown in the cut. In the side of the lower barrel is cut an opening, in which an old kettle is set, filled with smoldering chips or corncobs. The upper barrel has either hooks in its bottom or sides—the bottom of the barrel now being uppermost—or has rods passing through the sides, on which to hang the meat. A small hole can be bored in the barrel's bottom, to give a slight draft, if needed, while the opening in front of the kettle can be closed if the draft proves too strong. A simple little arrangement of this sort will often do as much good work as one on which much money and labor have been spent.

The same plan is suggested for use in fumigating articles, or for bleaching articles with burning sulphur. For such purposes, a tighter chamber is required than is needed for smoking meat. This tightness can be secured by wrapping cloth about the point of union of the two barrels, while no opening need be made at the base of the lower barrel.—Country Gentlemen.

SELECTING SEED CORN.

A Task Whose Importance Is Not Realized by Some Farmers.

Selection of seed corn and its care afterwards are of much more importance than many realize until bitter disappointment faces them, with perhaps one-third of a stand, and then it is too late to recover for the year. And still farmers go right on and do the same thing another year. While I always go into the field and select early at least a part of my seed, I do not plant such selection unless I have failed at husking time to gather such as I desire. I can select just the size and shape that seems best to my mind at that time and I cure it in the chamber over the kitchen stove and leave it there until wanted in the ear. I would not shell any I did not use for the year, and during my entire life I have never so saved corn that 95 per cent. would not grow, and seldom ever any fails even at three years old. While the early ripening will always grow and will make very early corn, after a number of years of such saving I am satisfied the variety grows small by so doing. I prefer to plant and sow the largest and best of its kind. At husking time, either from stalk or shock, one can make the selection. Leave enough husk on the ear and throw to one side of the wagon, and in this way the corn can be selected with little or no hindrance, and unless there has been very hard freezing with corn damp there is very little danger of its not growing, if properly cared for after picking.—Cor. Live Stock Indicator.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Every hog feeder should know at what weight to sell.

Ewes should always be in a thrifty condition when bred.

Every feeder should know the ration that is best for his animals.

Kind treatment generally begets a gentle disposition in a horse.

Plenty of salt and water will help to maintain good health with hogs.

On many farms during the fall months is one of the best times to drain.

The corn shucking should be pushed now. Get it all under shelter as soon as possible.

It is poor economy to feed wet fodder to stock by scattering on the ground on a rainy day.

There should be a sufficient growth of grass left on the meadows to properly mulch the plants.—Farmers' Union.

The Farmer's Happy Home.

A recent letter from the superintendent of farmers' institutes in the state of Pennsylvania states "that at every two day's institute held in the state during the coming winter the evening session of the first day is to be set apart to the ladies, and the topic is to be 'Country Homes.' All topics relating to home life in the country will be included, such as the construction of homes, the heating, lighting, ventilating and sanitary arrangements for country homes; the water supply, sewage and plumbing for houses in the country; the cooking of food, the care of the sick, the care of the children; flower gardening, kitchen gardening, house decoration, and all that relates in any way to comfort, convenience, health and enjoyment in a country home."

ABOUT KAFFIR CORN.

Valuable Pointers Supplied by the Kansas Experiment Station.

A recent bulletin issued by the Kansas experiment station says that in an average season red Kaffir corn will mature in about 12 or 14 weeks. Planted in the middle or latter part of May, the seed is ripe by the middle of September, and it should be harvested at once. The fodder will remain green until frost, but this fact should not be made an excuse for putting off the harvesting. The earlier it is cut after the seed is ripe the more time will there be for the stalks to cure, which is an essential point, especially if the fodder is stacked. Any of the many good corn cutters on the market will do the work. When the seed has dried out sufficiently so it can be stored, which condition it will not reach until the end of November, it should be threshed. It is true that many growers feed the crop as it comes from the shock, seed and all, but it is a wasteful way to handle it, though of course the cost of threshing and grinding must be taken into consideration, and doubtless there are considerations under which this cost will exceed the value of the waste incurred by feeding without threshing or grinding. One way of proceeding is to gather the heads in the field, as corn is gathered, before the crop is cut. A better way is to cut the heads off in the stock after the seed is dry, and thresh them at once. We have on one occasion threshed the whole stalk, but this has the objection that the fodder is badly broken up, and it also requires that the stalks shall be well cured in order to avoid heating when stacked. We have also threshed it by taking each armful of fodder and sticking the heads into the cylinder for an instant; but this method requires too much handling of the whole crop and is, therefore, not desirable, unless the fodder in the process of stacking or storing away must be handled anyway. As in the handling of corn fodder, it is desirable to save as much time as possible. The seed is hard and brittle, especially the red sort, and will sometimes crack badly in threshing. When this is the case it can largely be remedied by removing the concave in the thresher and putting in boards instead. For the reason noted above the seed should be ground, and the finer the better, in order to utilize it to the best advantage.

ADDITION FOR PLANTS.

How the Dwelling House May Be Provided with One Cheaply.

A small plant house can quite readily be provided by building an addition to the sunny side of the dwelling house. If this is given too much the aspect of a greenhouse—by making the addition rectangular and having a glass roof—

VIEW OF PLANT HOUSE.

the appearance of the house is seriously injured, as the addition savors too much of commercial plant growing. A perspective view of an added plant room that is at once a graceful addition to a house, and a most serviceable room for plants, is shown in the accompanying illustration. Fig. 1, with a floor plan, Fig. 2, showing the interior arrangement. The circular shape gives great access to the sunlight while the room is made high enough so that glass is not needed in the roof. The center bench can be used for some lofty plant, or plants, which will be in full view from the room adjoining. Portieres separate the two rooms. One who is anything of a mechanic can construct this without the aid of a carpenter, but it would be well to employ a carpenter to lay out the job and make water-tight connections at roof and sides of the house.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Pat Followed Instructions.

An Irish laborer, who was somewhat new to his work, was plowing one day, and the furrows being uneven, the farmer told him to look at something at the other end of the field as a guide. "That cow by the gate," said he, "is right opposite us. Now, work straight for here." "Right you are, sur," says Pat. Coming back later on the farmer was quite horrified to find the plow had been traveling zig-zag all over the field. "How is this?" said he. "What have you been doing?" "Shure, sur," was Pat's reply, "I did what you told me. I worked straight for the cow, but the craychur didn't keep still."

Frost as a Pulverizer.

Make the frost do some of the work of pulverizing the soil. When sod lands or soils that are difficult to reduce are plowed late in the fall the frost pulverizes the lumps and also destroys any insects that are brought to the surface. The expansion and contraction of the rough plowed land by alternate freezing and thawing will bring it to a fine state before spring, at which time cross plowing will cause it to turn over in a mellow condition for crops.

STATE NEWS.

Interesting Bits of Information from Many Localities.

DIES AT PRAYER MEETING.

Heart Disease Overcomes Rev. W. H. Allworth in a Lansing Church.

Lansing, Oct. 31.—Rev. William H. Allworth, a Congregational minister of prominence in Michigan and Canada, died under peculiar circumstances Thursday night. He attended the midweek prayer-meeting at Plymouth church and while making a fervent talk on the broad catholicity of the church fell to the floor and died instantly of heart disease. He was for 17 years a pastor at Paris, Ont., and was 78 years old.

Prepare to Log 34,000,000 Feet.

Menominee, Nov. 3.—A big crew of men have been sent up on the Popple river by the Scofield Arnold company to build a large warehouse and several camps. They have a contract to log 34,000,000 feet belonging to the Schroeder Lumber company of Milwaukee and will put in 16,000,000 feet of this amount this winter. Two hundred and twenty deer licenses have already been taken out by residents of this city.

Insane from Cigarette Smoking.

Jackson, Nov. 2.—Robert O'Connor, aged 18, son of a wealthy man of Louisville, Ky., escaped Saturday night from the Sanitarium at Battle Creek, where he is being treated for insanity, and bought a ticket for Detroit. He was arrested by Jackson officers and returned to Battle Creek Sunday. The young man's insanity is said to have been caused by smoking cigarettes. He is very wild and violent.

Victim of Hydrophobia.

Saginaw, Oct. 30.—William Manchke, aged 35, died in Saginaw hospital, Thursday morning, after having been in great agony for 24 hours, of hydrophobia. The young man was bitten by a dog afflicted with the distemper, last June. He leaves a widow and three children.

Home Ordered Sold.

Grand Rapids, Oct. 31.—In the United States court a decree was made ordering the sale of the home of Leroy A. More to satisfy creditors of the defunct Greenville national bank, of which he was president. The place is the finest in the town and is worth about $15,000.

Kalamazoo, Nov. 2.—It is said that the receipts to celery growers in this vicinity for this year's crop will be less than $400,000, a considerable reduction from the usual figure. The loss was caused by the overflowing of the Kalamazoo river early in the spring.

An Important Difference.

To make it apparent to thousands, who think themselves ill, that they are not afflicted with any disease, but that the system simply needs cleansing, is to bring comfort home to their hearts, as a costive condition is easily cured by using Syrup of Figs. EFFECT OF MUSIC.

The Nervous System Influenced by Different Kinds of Sounds.

The old story that Saul when out of temper used to summon David to play the harp, and found the music to be a sedative, may prove to be more than a simple historic incident, for both Charcot and Tarchanow have declared that musical sounds are a remedial agency in disease which no physician can afford to ignore, says the New York Herald.

Mr. Warthin, of Michigan, who has given a great deal of thought to this subject, asserts that different kinds of sounds are more effective than drugs in the cure of disease. For instance, he boldly assures us that the music of Valkyrie will increase perspiration, and, therefore, cure certain forms of ailment caused by checking its flow. The operative energy is not the music as such, but the peculiar vibrations made by it. Tannhauser, on the other hand, is a vibratory soporific and induces a serene state of mind and body.

M. Coriveaud, of Paris, asserts that violin playing is at least a temporary remedy for sciatica. He adduces the instance of a patient who found almost instant relief in that way and who successfully resorted to it whenever threatened with an attack.

Perhaps this is an appeal to the imagination, but what matters it if the patient is cured? Perhaps, again, there is a law hidden somewhere in the pile of apparent impossibilities—one which will some time be discovered for our benefit. We never smile with incredulity at anything in these wonder-working days.

WE WANT TO TELL YOU

Why Your Back is Lame—Why it Aches and Pains, and How to Cure It.

Do you know what it is to have a back that is never free from aches and constant pain, a lame back, a sore back, an aching back, in fact, a back that makes your life a burden? What have you done for it? And does it still keep you from the happiness that perfect health brings to all? We know full well if such is your condition a cure for it will be a blessing you no doubt desire. Plasters won't do it, but may assist in bringing strength. Liniment won't do it; for, while it may give temporary relief, it does not reach the cause. The cause, there's the point; there's where to make the attack. Most backaches come from disordered kidneys, therefore you must correct their action if you would be cured. Read the following from D. D. Cook, whose address is No. 18 Michigan Street, Grand Rapids. He says:—

"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and wish to say it is a truly great medicine. Thirty years ago I had nervous prostration while in the army, where I served for over four years. I think it was during this service that the seeds were sown which have caused all my trouble. Severe bilious attacks bothered me, and at such times my kidneys were worse. It is almost impossible to describe the pain which so often lamed me. I have been so lame that to stand up after I had been sitting down required a great exertion. Walking was at times an impossibility, even at night I did not rest, being forced to get up during the night. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and wondered if they could make an almost lame man well. I got some, and soon after taking them began to feel their good effects. I used them for some time, my lameness all left me and I have not felt it since. Doan's Kidney Pills have done me an inestimable amount of good."

HOW SHE FOOLED HIM.

BY HELEN GRAVES.

The momentous interview between Mrs. Jefferson Wayland and Mr. Hopkins was over at last—and the lady was heartily glad that it was so. All her smiles and suavity were needed—all her slender stock of patience was exhausted.

"Of all intolerable creatures, I do think an old bachelor is the most intolerable," thought Mrs. Wayland to herself, looking at Mr. Hopkins with the sweetest and most interested of expression. "I wonder if he really means to stay here all day—and I have an engagement at two!"

But Mr. Hopkins had risen to his feet at last, with an "ahem," and a manifest intention of going, and Mrs. Wayland rose, too, with a soft rustle of silken robes and expensive laces.

"Then you think, madam, that circumstances are tolerably auspicious as regards the consummation of my matrimonial happiness within a very brief period of time?" was Mr. Hopkins' final query.

"My dear sir, I am quite sure of it," answered Mrs. Wayland, emphatically, as she followed Noah Hopkins, Esquire, to her front door.

Noah was a tall, portly gentleman, something on the shady side of 50, with massive gold eye-glasses, and scanty hair, brushed carefully to hide the bald spot on the crown of his respectable head—a gentleman who pronounced his words slowly and sententiously and somehow seemed to carry in his very presence the auriferous idea of bank stock, railroad bonds and productive coupons!

"Yes, but, madam, Miss Wayland is so very—ahem!—so remarkably undemonstrative—I might even say so decidedly cold in her manner—"

"Oh, my dear sir," smoothly interrupted Mrs. Wayland, "that is the way with all girls at this interesting period of their lives. Nothing on earth but maidenly shyness—natural girlish timidity, I assure you!"

Mr. Hopkins looked gratified, but still doubtful.

"You are quite certain, then, that she really loves me?"

"There cannot possibly be a doubt of it, Mr. Hopkins!"

And Noah Hopkins departed, treading gleefully over the ringing pavements as his thoughts reverted ever and anon to the pretty 18-year-old damsel who was, cupid willing, so soon to become Mrs. Hopkins.

But what did Bessy Wayland herself think of it? And how did she contemplate the near approach of orange blossoms and wedding ring?

She sat there by the window, as her mother returned from bidding a ceremonious adieu to Mr. Hopkins, a modern edition of Niobe, "all in tears."

She was small and fragile, with shady blue eyes, rather large and languishing; light brown hair that had an irresistible inclination to curl all over her head in tiny gold-burnished rings, and cheeks where changing dimples hid away among the loveliest roses.

"Crying again, my dear?" said Mrs. Wayland, in accents of mild reproach. "Really, Bessie, your conduct is most inscrutable."

"Mamma!" sobbed Bessie, flashing rebellion from the brimming blue orbs, "I hate Mr. Hopkins!"

"My dearest child!" exclaimed the horrified mother, "don't let me ever hear you say such a shockingly unladylike thing again! When he is so condescending as to notice a child like you!"

"Yes, but, mamma—"

"I quite understand the meaning of this new freak of obstinacy," went on Mrs. Wayland, sternly. "You have seen Charley Evans again."

"I couldn't help it, mamma," faltered Bessie; "he was at the door just as I came out of church last night, and when I—"

"The idea!" ejaculated Mrs. Wayland, holding up both her hands and looking appealingly at the ceiling, as if for inspiration. "And you can actually stoop to fancy a clerk in Mr. Hopkins' banking establishment!"

"But I don't 'fancy' him, mamma," returned Bessie, stoutly; "I love him with my whole heart."

"Hush—sh—h!" exclaimed Mrs. Wayland, authoritatively. "You will be married a month from to-morrow to Mr. Hopkins, Charley Evans to the contrary notwithstanding. And now let us sit down and make out a complete list of the dresses and things you will want."

"I don't care for dresses," pouted Bessie; but Mrs. Wayland paid no attention whatever to her remonstrance and opened her tablets, putting the pencil thoughtfully to her lips.

"You see, we must be very careful at first, for Mr. Hopkins is so exceedingly economical—it won't do to shock his ideas of what is proper and fitting."

Bessie winked away the tears and listened—nay, she almost smiled as her mother wrote down item after item. Mrs. Wayland could have hugged herself for her diplomacy.

"The girl never yet lived who could resist the attraction of new clothes and an outfit of dresses," she thought. "I knew how to bring the willful little minx to reason!"

"Bessie," she said, as she finally closed the little set of tablets and restored the pencil to its place within them, "Mr. Hopkins is coming to take you out walking to-morrow."

"Very well, mamma."

"And I think you had better wear your blue silk with the double satin folds. Never mind about putting on your new earrings and pin. Mr. Hopkins has some rather peculiar ideas, and might consider them a little extravagant for people in our circumstances."

"Yes, mamma," said Bessie, as docile as a four-year-old child.

She was all ready, looking exceedingly lovely in the blue silk dress, when Mr. Noah Hopkins called for her, according to the programme, next morning.

"What a lucky fellow I am," thought Noah, exultantly, as he drew the little gloved hand within his arm, with a sensation of proprietorship very agreeable to experience.

"Do stop a minute, Mr. Hopkins," said Bessie, as they reached the glittering splendors of a jeweler's window, "I just want to look at those pretty things! Aren't those rubies perfectly splendid. You're going to buy me a set of emeralds and diamonds, aren't you, when we are married? And a real Geneva watch with a bouquet of brilliants on the case? And a pair of those lovely link bracelets? I never had much jewelry, but when I'm married, I mean to buy everything that is pretty. And you'll get me a parure of big white pearls, won't you?"

"I—I'll think of it," stammered Mr. Hopkins, rather taken aback by the extent of his bride-elect's expectations.

"It will be so nice to have a rich husband," went on Bessie, artlessly. "Mamma says you'll let me have a carriage and a pair of darling little cream-colored ponies, that I can drive myself, with silver-mounted harness, and—"

"Y-yes, but you don't consider, my dear—horses are shockingly expensive," interrupted Noah, wiping his brow with a huge yellow silk pocket handkerchief.

"What of that? You're rich, aren't you? I shall have a housekeeper, and two maids, and a colored waiter, and white kid gloves—"

"Kid gloves are two dollars a pair, my dear," apologetically put in Mr. Hopkins.

"That's nothing, as long as one has a rich husband! We shall go to Saratoga, or the White mountains, for at least two months every year, of course. I always did sigh for a gay life and plenty of excitement."

"Sixty dollars a week for eight weeks—four hundred and eighty dollars!" mentally computed Noah, with a slight shiver. "I shall come to the poorhouse, as sure as I'm a living sinner!"

"And as many dresses as I want," pursued Bessie, clapping her little hands. "Mrs. Glenn has 32 silks, and I don't know how many of nuns' veiling and taffetas. Oh, Noah, how glad I am that you are rich!"

Noah Hopkins stared confusedly down at the blue eyes that were upturned to his so unconsciously.

"You'll have a billiard table, of course? I dote on billiards—and a yacht, for I'm so fond of the salt air, and sea bathing, and—"

"I'll have a private insane asylum and put myself in it first!" ejaculated Noah, driven to the very borders of distraction. "Miss Wayland, I must have entirely misunderstood your character, from beginning to end!"

"I shouldn't at all wonder if you had," said Bessie, demurely.

"I certainly never for an instant contemplated such frightful extravagance as you seem to coolly take for granted."

"If I marry a rich husband I certainly mean to use his money and enjoy it," said Bessie, defiantly.

"Then, ma'am, allow me to remark that you will not use mine! I—I prefer remaining single!"

"And what's to become of me, with all my wedding clothes ordered?" whimpered Bessie, trying very hard to summon the semblance of mortified tears into her mischievous blue eyes.

"Perhaps you might prefer some younger man?" suggested Noah, with the lively horror of a breach of promise suit rising up before his mind's eye. "I understand that my clerk, Mr. Evans, is—"

Bessie's cheeks glowed like carmine.

"Mr. Evans' situation does not justify him in marrying—he is too poor. I'm afraid you'll have to take me yourself."

Noah involuntarily recoiled from the idea of pony carriages, cream-colored horses and yachts.

"Yes, but—but our head clerkship is vacant, at a salary of $2,000 a year. I did intend it for old Bogsley, but Charley Evans is a very deserving young fellow, and—"

Here Miss Bessie interrupted him by standing on her tiptoe to give him a kiss that almost shook his resolutions of celibacy. But he remembered the colored waiter, with the white kid gloves, and stood firm!

"But what will mamma say?" suddenly questioned Bessie.

"I will make it all right with her, my dear," said Mr. Noah Hopkins, thinking of the gorgeous India shawl full of palm leaves and pagodas, wherewith he would propitiate the impending anger of his mother-in-law that was not to be.

"It'll cost a deuce of a sum," thought Noah, sorrowfully, "but it won't compare with the daily and hourly drain of an extravagant wife. I'm well out of this scrape, shawl or no shawl!"

So our little Bessie went triumphantly home, to work at her wedding garments with renewed zeal, sewing a happy thought in with every stitch, and Charley Evans was that very day agreeably surprised with a $2,000 position, formally presented to him with a little stiff speech by Noah Hopkins, Esq.

"Poor Evans," thought Noah, as Charley left him after a torrent of thanks, "that extravagant little puss will be the ruin of him, before he is a year older; but it's no business of mine."

Nevertheless, Mr. Evans would persist in rushing blindly upon his fate, and married Bessie Wayland on the very day originally set for the consummation of Noah's own nuptials. Mr. Hopkins went to the wedding, and muttered thoughtfully to himself, as the bridal party passed beneath the arched doorway of the church:

"Good Apollo! what an escape I have had!"

But Mr. and Mrs. Evans were quite contented with the existing state of things.—N. Y. Weekly.

—Mr. Fabre claimed that after 16 years of cultivation he secured a variety of wheat from a common grass, the "Aegilops Ovata," which grows abundantly all over the south of Europe. Others, however, claim that he was mistaken, and that the flowers of the plants in his experiments were hybridized with wheat.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding Nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters and aids digestion. Old People find it is an excellent appetizer just exactly what they need. Price fifty cents per bottle at Baker & Hall's drug store. 5

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Pheobe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result every thing else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Baker & Hall's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. 5

Here's the Peddler with washing-powder. "Prizes, too, for any woman brave enough to use it. Reckless—that's a truer word for her, when you think of all the harm that cheap, inferior washing-powders can do. When you consider the ruined clothes, paint, etc., that you're risking, wouldn't it seem cheaper to buy these trifling "prizes," for yourself, if you want them? Pearline isn't peddled, doesn't give any prizes. It is a prize in itself. Pearline is manufactured only by James Pyle, New York. 430

DOWN THE DANUBE.

Among Carpathian Hills—Fourteenth Letter of this Interesting Voyage.

Heidelberg, Sept. 20, 1896.

EDITOR HERALD:—

Soon after the adventure at O. Palanka, we reached Bazias and entered the beautiful hills of the Southern Carpathians. It was with a feeling of awe that we entered upon the marvelous solemnity of those hills. Never among the Alps or the more rugged grandeur of our own Rockies have I been so impressed with mountain charms as here. High up on the grassy declivities, the shepherds and their flocks moved idly along. The quaint pipes of the shepherds make the vast slopes vocal with pastoral sound that would have delighted the ear of Theocritus. The many tinkling bells of the sheep are reverbrated among the rocks and sound sweetly as the babbling mountain brook. Truly, the wonders of the Danube for the seventy miles from Moldova to the Iron Gates, are overwhelming For us, it was filled with dangers. The perils had been recited to us daily and those who saw our boat shook their heads decisively and said it was impossible. At Moldova, begins the grand defile. On either side, rise the tremendous iron gray rocks three to four hundred feet straight up. On the Servian side there is no road, but the Hungarian Szechenyi has caused a road to be cut in the face of the rock on the Hungarian side. As we entered between these beetling cliffs, we passed the Babakaj rock, the gigantic silent sentinel which stands in mid stream as if to repulse all intruders. To our right, on a pinnacle of the rock, stood the ruined fortress Golubac, perhaps as picturesque as ever ruin could be. Opposed to it, is the ruin Lazylovar. In the face of these massive rocks, many caverns open their dark mouths. From the large Golubac cavern, the poisonous flies swarm, which sting and ki many cattle. So the simple peasant b eves. You may be as credulous as you please. We clambered up to one of these hungry looking caverns and, to satisfy the adventurous cravings of my wife, we ventured some distance into the gloomy maw. The multitude of bats clinging to the wall and the uncanny odors like those from catacombs, drove us back at last. The sweet air of day is more pleasant than the melancholy breath of the nether world. Near by was a moss covered grotto whence water dripped continually and where green lizards ran hither and thither as we approached. Back to the river again, where we were now scorched by the hot winds which rush through the defile, and now gliding swiftly and coolly in the shade of some monster shaggy rock. Where the precipitous rock gave way to slopes just habitable, we saw for the first time what is the common lower down on the ri ... is, hay stacked in trees. The u ... anches are cut away and an outs ... e supports the load. They look like huge toadstools on these slopes. At Dre ... va, we went over the first of the six le ... es of rock which cause the six rapids of the Danube. The grandeur and stern beauty of this region must be seen: I cannot describe it. It was amid these awful surroundings that one after another we shot four of these terrific rapids I own that I experienced a thrill of terror now and then as a powerful whirlpool twisted us around and seemed to cast us out as if unworthy of its strength, or we passed perilously near one of those black rocks about which the turbulent water boiled and seethed. You cannot appreciate the fearful power of the mighty Danube without actually being in its grasp. Once we were driven irresistably upon a rock. Luckily we struck squarely and our stout little craft only swung round and went stern first through the remainder of the rapids. We had both been thrown from our seats and badly frightened, but, when I drew the boat on land to examine, I found we had suffered no damage. One of the chief dangers for us was the choppy sea, which we found about the middle of each rapids. Our united efforts were necessary to keep upright. Well, we passed safely four of the six rapids, but the terror, the Iron Gates, was still before us. It was passable only on the Servian side, said the guide book, "Keep to the Servian side and near the shore," said every fisherman or raftsman whom we asked. We had camped in a broad, lake-like basin just before the famous Defile of Kasan and and after a sleepless night arose to pass a day among the grandest works of Nature. That defile! how can I convey any idea of it? The emminent overhanging cliffs, the superb stream 200 feet deep confined to the narrow limits of 180 yards, the Veterani cavern which the Austrians so bravely defended against the Turk in 1682, and the extremely interesting traces of Trajan's road through this pass—these, and all those other indescribable things, make this defile incomparable. Trajan's inscription, now barely legible, may be seen on a perpendicular cliff opposite Gradina. It commemorates the first Dacian campaign and the completion of the roads above mentioned. At Orsova, we landed and were at once met by a beggar boy, a Romanian. We gave him a loaf of bread which was past its usefulness for us, and for a reward his hideous, dirty mother came to the water's edge and insisted upon telling my wife's fortune. She shuffled a filthy pack of cards and urged my wife to draw. Sancho could face the dangers of the rapids, but she flinched and blanched before that vile deck of cards. Nothing daunted, the woman made motions and facial contortions meaning, evidently, that Sancho would have a grand palace, and lots of money. Having performed her functions, the witch retired smirking. After going up to see where Kossath burried the crown of Hungary in 1849, we continued down the river to the first Romanian town. Being hailed by a sentinel, we went ashore. An old man sat soaking his legs in mud, while his wife, playing with a pet ram, sat on the grass near him. The guard made motions to follow him, and I fell in line. When we came to the custom house offic ... I succeeded, with the aid of a German idler, in getting my passport approved. The officers were polite, handsome and agreeable. On returning to the boat we decided th shoot a rapids just ahead of us and came for the night. We had heard so much of the dangers of the Iron Gates, where the water falls sixteen feet in one and one-half miles that I wanted good daylight for it. It was now dusk. We got into the full current of the river, were carried at a terrific speed for a mile, and by a dexterous turn got into a return edey near shore, and landed. I asked a fisherman how far the Iron Gates were. He looked at me stupidly and shook his head. We camped on a narrow ledge for the night. Next morning the wind was strong and I did not care to risk so dangerous a passage as the Iron Gates would be. We climbed high up on the mountain side, but could see no rapids as far as we could view the river below. Then we returned, tied all loose articles to the boat, and when my wife had safely adjusted her life preserver, made a start. At every turn in the river, we hugged the shore expecting the rapids to appear. Finally I climbed a hill to view: and was challenged by a frontier sentinel. I showed him my passport. He looked at it wisely and, though he could not read a word, bowed and said I could go. As I was going he pointed to a distant spire and said, "Turn Severin." I looked and suddenly it flashed upon me that we were three miles past the Iron Gates already. We had shot those terrible rapids in the dusk on the wrong side of the river, said to be impassable, and had stopped three-fourths of the way through to ask where they were. For the protection of the travelling public, we think that the Iron Gates ought to be plainly labeled. They are a menace to public safety.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

Postmaster F. D. Jenkins, of Tipton, recently resigned to move onto a farm in Somerset, and yesterday Warren J. Hampton, the hustler, was notified of his appointment to fill the vacancy.—Adrian Telegram.

Eighty cents per bushel was paid for wheat at Britton last week Wednesday, says the citizen. Somebody must have had an oversupply of cash.—Deerfield Times. It is a fact that the Britton wheat market is the best in this county.

Other victims of the forger, B. F. Cooper, managed to get back some of the plunder, but Tom Elliott, of Tecumseh, was too late to come on the "divide" and will put up for his $85 guaranty. The next man who asks his guaranty will need to have his face mended by a doctor.—Adrian Press.

The Tecumseh seniors had a pink faced time of it the other day, over parsing the word "kissed," and embarrassment increased, when the question was asked if it were an active transitive verb. Several of the class knew it was, and that it was of the compound gender, but smothered their knowledge.—Adrian Press

The venerable Cicero M. Comstock, of Hudson, died on Monday, at the age of 87. He was one of the early landlords of Hudson, occupying successively the Franklin House, the old Exchange Hotel and the Comstock House, which he built in 1867. He was a very energetic man in his day, but had been retired from active life for some years.—Morenci Observer.

Under the new law, the season during which the small boy can realize on the bodies of the deceased English sparrow will commence Nov. 1 and continue until April 1. The entire carcass must be presented. The new law further provides that no bounty shall be paid unless the birds are brought in lots of 10. It is not unlawful to kill the sparrows at any season of the year.

It has been decided to make a test case of students voting in Ann Arbor. To do this, complaint will be made against two students who vote next Tuesday and the matter carried to the Supreme Court to ascertain just what the law is. It is generally believed that students will be allowed to vote if such a test is made.—Ann Arbor Register.

The six sons of the late veteran mason of this village, John Sharr,—Uri, Frank, Asa, Herbert, Allen and Almer, whose ages range from 17 to 35 years—acted as pall bearers at the funeral. The burial arrangements were carried out in a manner as desired by Mr. Sharr and accordingly the body was placed in a brick vault, which was constructed by the sons.—Morenci Observer.

H. H. Chapin, of Adrian, the gentleman who has been at work on a directory for Hudson, Adrian and Tecumseh for several years past, was in the city Tuesday, making excuses for the delay and endeavoring to induce the business men to go into the enterprise again.—Hudson Gazette. No use. Harry Chapin is a good man, good printer, but too slow for this world.

The Supervisors were in a salary cutting mood last week. As a result the following changes were made: Clerk, $1,200 to $1,000; Register of Probate, $1,300 to $600; Pros. Atty., $1,200 to $1,000; Commissioner of Schools, $1,500 to $1,200; School Examiners, $4 00 to $3 00 per day.—Ann Arbor Register. About the same kind of a cut has been made in Lenawee county.

In nearly all the large cities the returns from next Tuesday's election will be thrown on a large white canvass by stereopticons in front of the newspaper offices. These returns, of course, will be read by millions of anxious and interested people and the first to greet their eyes will read something like this: "The Abbott voting machine was used at Hudson, Michigan, and gives the following results," etc., etc. Arrangements are being made in Detroit and Chicago to wire the returns from Hudson within 15 minutes after the polls close and have it thrown from the stereopticons as above stated. It will be a great advertisement for the machine.—Hudson Gazette. If the Abbott voting machine works as they claim for it, every village and city in Michigan should immediately invest.

George Steel, living south of Hudson, has done "doing" the yellow-legged chicken in the style of the boa-constrictor. A bone stuck in his throat, and for two weeks he was in bed, unable to move or swallow. The bone and George are now out. The chicken first got it in the neck, and George followed suit, while the ghost of the biddy flapped its wing in glee on the barpost and voiceless, (like Voris' speech) crowed in derision.

The Daily Graphic is the name of a new journalistic venture which made its appearance at Monroe last week Thursday. Graphic Printing Co. as publishers—Geo. W. Grames, business manager; Ella T. Grames, advertisement solicitor; Miss F. Tisdale, city editor. One cent per copy or 17 cents per month. The publishers announce with professed certainty that it has come to stay. The issues that we have received have a very good show of advertising patronage.—Dundee Reporter.

CAUTION: If you want to Mexicanize this country vote for Bryan. McKinley has somehow imbibed the notion that this is a better country than Mexico, and he couldn't be coerced to de-Americanize it.—Exchanges. The above paragraph has been seen by the editor of the Herald in eleven different papers all published last week. It is needless to say that it is "plate" matter published in Chicago and sold by the column. Would it not be better for country newspapers to say nothing editorially than buy their brains by the column.

James McCourt of Northfield, had six head of cattle stolen from his premises, last Wednesday night. Thursday morning he came to town and notified the officers of his loss. Pros. Atty. Randall started out at once with an officer and in a short time located the cattle. They had been brought to town early Thursday morning and had been sold to Wm. Rehfuss, county treasurer, for $120.00 The theif thus had the start of the officers by a good half day, and will probably not be captured, at least right away. It was a cool piece of theiving and should be severely punished, if the offender can only be caught.—Ann Arbor Register.

Walter S. Osborne.

Walter S. Osborn was born in Franklin, Michigan, March 7th, 1846, and died October 26th, 1896. In March 1871, he was married to Miss Henrietta Mead, of Clinton, who died five years later. Two children were born to them. Frank A. Osborn, of Oscoda, and Mrs. Jennie Rynd, of Seward, Ohio. In November 1878 he was married to Miss Laura M. Brown, of Clinton, who died five years ago. One son, Donald, who is now ten years old, was born of this union. He lives with his aunt, Mrs. Munson King, of Clinton.

Mr. Osborn left two brothers and one sister, namely, W. J. Osborn, of Brooklyn, Rev. F. L. Osborn, of Oscoda and Mrs. Libbie Mead, of Mt. Pleasant. Having grown up and spent his life in the same community, he was well known. His funeral was conducted at the home by Rev. J. P. Varner. A large procession of friends followed the remains to the cemetery, where the Masons took charge of the burial.

My Friend—

Like others I need money to do a cash business with, and if you owe me I will consider it a great favor if you will come in and pay me now without my being to the expense of mailing to you statement or spending my time to come and see you.

It costs considerable to see each one when you have a large number on your books, and you ought not to expect me to do it. I give credit as a favor, and hope you will bring me the cash now.

If you can not pay all cash now, bring what you can and settle by note till you are able to meet it.

You certainly can do this and expecting you will, I thank you in advance. Yours truly,

INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK

Encouraging Reports from All Parts of the Country.

Wheels Which Have Lain Idle for Months Begin to Revolve—Manufactories in Many Places Start Up at Full Time.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 10.—The Star tin-plate works, located on Twelfth street, Pittsburgh, which has been running half time, started up in full with two additional mills Monday morning, giving employment to 100 skilled workmen.

The Oliver Iron and Steel company will start their plant in full Wednesday morning, employing 600 men.

The Clinton Furnace company, located on the South side, will start up in full Tuesday, giving work to 300 men. The Westinghouse Electric company, which has been running but five days per week, Monday started up on a six-day schedule, giving one more day's work to 2,000 men.

Prosperity in Connecticut.

Bristol, Conn., Nov. 10.—A business revival is felt here, and the most notable instance of it is found at the works of the Bristol Brass and Clock company. Beginning Monday night, the factory will run overtime. This course is necessary to fill orders which have been received.

Manchester, Conn., Nov. 10.—The big silk mills of the Cheney Brothers began a full-time schedule Monday. The works have been running at reduced time for more than three years. The change affects 2,500 employes.

Will Get More Pay.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 10.—J. C. Moorehead, general superintendent of the Erie railroad here, has issued an order which will affect for the better several thousand men. The order calls for longer hours and increased pay and more men.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 10.—The John S Gibbs company, one of the largest canning industries in the state, has increased wages 25 per cent. to take effect at once. Seventy-five men will be benefited from two to three dollars per week. Mr. Gibbs says there is an unprecedented era of prosperity ahead and he expects all the packing firms in the city to follow his example.

Car Works Open Up.

Meadville, Pa., Nov. 10.—The Erie railroad car shops in this city started running on full time Monday. The road expects a big increase in freight traffic on account of the revival of business.

Sedalia, Mo., Nov. 10.—After working one-half a force on one-half time for several months past, the Missouri Pacific shops here on Monday put a full force of men, 800 in number, to work on full time.

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 10.—The car shops of the Chesapeake & Ohio railway in this city, employing 700 men, began Monday morning a ten-hour day. The shops have been on eight-hour time for a year past.

Brick Yards Start Up.

La Porte, Ind., Nov. 10.—The Porter brick yards located at Chesterton, which have been idle for six months, resumed operations Monday morning. Fifteen hundred men returned to work. The syndicate operating the Porter yards control immense brick-making industries in Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, and the resumption of work furnishes employment to over 5,000 men.

Miners Feel It.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 10.—"The returning wave of prosperity has struck the mining industry and has infused life and vigor," said Frank Rockefeller Monday. The mines owned by Mr. Rockefeller in the Lake Superior region will be opened in a few days and will give employment to about 1,500 men. These mines have been idle since last July. The order to open them has been sent out by Mr. Rockefeller. The extensive mines owned by John D. Rockefeller will resume operations soon and will put a greater number of men to work than those of his brother.

Other Industries Enjoy a Boom.

Piqua, O., Nov. 10.—The corrugating works, the rolling mill, the Snyder Bentwood works and the Orr linseed mill started Monday, giving employment to 500 men.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 10.—The Des Moines Packing company opened its packing house Monday after a long period during which it was shut down on account of hard times. It employs 150 men. The Des Moines knitting works has put on day and night forces, doubling its capacity and employing 75 men. The Des Moines woolen mills has also doubled its force and will employ 130 hands. The Rock Island road has ordered nine hours' work daily in all its shops in Iowa, the first time in a year.

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 10.—The following firms have resumed work, after being idle for the past year: Chambers, Bearing & Quinlan, employing 100 men, manufacturers of check rowers, etc.; F. B. Tait & Company, 100 employes, manufacturers of corn planters and farming implements; Decatur Furniture company, 100 men, manufacturers furniture; Wabash railway shops, 300 men. All of these places have been shut down entirely or working half time for the past year.

Pats Many to Work.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—Fresh evidence of increasing business activity due to a restoration of confidence are to be found in nearly every line of manufacturing carried on in the great Kensington mill district. The daily opening up of mills and factories in the district, many of which have been practically shut down for over three months, is giving employment to hosts of idle men and the legend hands wanted, has already become so familiar in the business part of the city as to cease to excite remarks. Conservative manufacturers who scout the idea of realizing prosperity in a single leap say that the manifestations of activity are caused by the filling of orders which have been held in abeyance, but all agree in the belief that operations will gradually increase until all the big plants are running full blast.

FARMERS' NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Sixteenth Annual Session of the Organization Opened at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 11.—The sixteenth annual session of the Farmers national congress began at the state house Tuesday morning with about 500 delegates in attendance. Many more who are interested in the matters to be discussed by the congress are present. The body is a non-political organization, and its sessions are open to the public.

Col. B. F. Clayton, of Iowa, president of the organization, was in the chair. The morning session was devoted entirely to addresses. Mayor Taggart welcomed the congress on behalf of the city, J. G. Offett, of Trafalgar, on behalf of the farmers of the state, and Gov. Matthews upon behalf of the state. Col. Clayton delivered the president's address and in the course of it gave the keynote for discussion in the following paragraph:

"During the last fiscal year of the operations of the former tariff law the agricultural imports on 20 articles the like of which we produce north and south amounted to $65,804,446; during the first calendar year of the operation of the present law the importation of the same articles amounted to $135,068,860, or an increase over the former law of $68,264,314. In the exportation of farm products we find the discrepancy still greater in 27 chief articles produced on the farm. During the fiscal year 1894 we exported farm products to the amount of $907,946,945, while during the calendar year 1895 there were exports in the same products to the amount of $751,833,937, a decrease of $156,113,000. Adding the gain in imports to the loss in exports, and the American farmers lose in one year $224,337,322. If these figures be true, a vigorous remonstration to these schedules should go up, and we should demand that the agricultural department investigate each item. Should protection be the policy of the government, then it should be applied to farm products, and the agricultural department should recommend to the general government such changes in tariff schedules as will furnish equal protection to the products of the farm."

IOWA BANKS FAIL.

Withdrawals and Inability to Realize on Securities the Cause.

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 11.—W. P. Manley has been appointed receiver of the Iowa savings bank of this city. Heavy withdrawals and slow collections caused the failure. Assets are $445,000 and liabilities about the same. Officers say they will pay in full.

Decorah, Ia., Nov. 11.—The First national bank of this city failed to open its doors Tuesday morning as a result of a special examination by order of the comptroller of the currency. Bank Examiner Stone is in charge pending the appointment of a receiver. The bank had suffered a run for some weeks and was unable to convert assets fast enough. It has $75,000 capital. No statement has been made public of its condition, but it is said to be in such shape that the capital will be lost and depositors will lose heavily.

FIVE LIVES ARE LOST.

Schooner Sonora Wrecked Thursday—Mate Duquett Alone Escapes.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 10.—A report reached here from St. Thomas, Ont., that the schooner Sonora was wrecked and five lives lost in Thursday's storm off Point Abino, about ten miles from Buffalo on the Canadian shore. Mate W. Duquett, who claims to have been the only survivor, carried the news to St. Thomas. Nothing can be learned in local marine circles about the reported wreck.

Sandy Hook an Island.

New York, Nov. 9.—The great October storm tore through the Sandy Hook peninsula about a quarter of a mile north of Highland Beach. It made a large inlet from the sea to the Shrewsbury river and in its course demolished the railway trestlework erected on deep-driven piling by the United States government to transport its big guns and gun carriages and machinery from all points to the government proving grounds. No efforts have been made to close this break in the peninsula.

Government Secures a Historic Building.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Under the operation of a law passed at the last session of congress the United States Tuesday became possessed of the house opposite the old Ford's theater, where Lincoln was carried after the assassination, and died. The house will continue to be occupied by the Lincoln Memorial association as a museum of relics of the martyred president.

Death in the Blizzard.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 11. — The first death in a Kansas blizzard this season is reported from Goodland, on the Colorado border, where on Monday the body of J. N. Moran was found in a snowdrift. He had evidently lost his way in the night and storm, and, finally, turning loose his horses, sought shelter behind the wagon box.

Lost in Lake Michigan.

Muskegon, Mich., Nov. 9.—In a fierce storm the three-masted schooner Waukesha went to pieces off this port and Capt. Corbett and three sailors were drowned.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.

Synopsis of the Report for the Past Fiscal Year.

A Saving of Over $3,000,000 Announced—Recommendations for the New Year—Asks for the Renewal of Private Post Office Boxes.

Washington, Nov. 9.—First Assistant Postmaster-General Frank H. Jones, in his annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, states that there has, during that time, been a saving of $3,278,985, and also such was an improvement in the service of delivering the volume of mail matter.

The number of presidential post offices is 3,654, the salaries of the postmasters being $6,203,900, and the total gross receipts from these offices were $65,282,364.

Mr. Jones recommends that $17,000,000 be appropriated to compensate postmasters for the next fiscal year. He asks only $11,000,000 for clerk hire, a considerable decrease in proportion to the increase of clerks to be employed. He recommends that $75,000 be appropriated for the rental and purchase of canceling machines. He thinks $15,000 a sufficient sum to cover advertising expenses regarding unclaimed letters, and advocates the adoption of the bulletin board system in this matter. He recommends that ten inspectors be assigned to look after the work in the salary and allowance branch of the service.

Free delivery service has been established at 24 cities during the year, and there are now but 63 entitled to it, but on account of the expense the remainder could not be benefited. Experimental free delivery in towns and villages has shown a reduction in gross receipts in a majority of offices. By November 1 next rural free delivery will be tested in about 30 states. There was a reduction of dismissals of letter carriers, which evidences the high standard of discipline. An estimated expenditure of $13,326,500 is made on account of free delivery system for the fiscal year 1897-98. Negotiations are now pending for an exchange of money orders with Mexico. Mr. Jones recommends that a penalty be prescribed for the unlawful use of the frank of a member of congress and suggests $300 fine in each case. He says the law was disregarded during the campaign just closed. He asks legislation to do away with private post office boxes.

Foreign Mails.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The annual report of Capt. N. M. Brooks, superintendent of foreign mails, shows that the aggregate weight of the mail dispatched from this country by sea to other countries during the last fiscal year was 6,286,914 pounds, of which over 4,500,000 pounds were transatlantic. It is pointed out that the postage collected by the government on articles exchanged with foreign countries largely exceeds the gross expense incurred by the department in connection with that service. The sum of $5,294,756 was received by this country for mail exchanged with other countries. Only 1,516 errors were reported in the distribution of 11,518,373 letters and postal cards. The net excess of cost of the contract ocean mail service was $453,386.

Estimates for Next Year.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Postmaster-General Wilson has submitted to the secretary of the treasury his estimates for the post office department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898. The estimates show a grand total of $97,515,411, an increase over the estimates of 1897 of $4,943,846. As the expenditures for the service of 1898 are estimated at $97,515,411 and the revenue expected for the same year is placed at $96,227,076, there will be an estimated deficiency of about $1,288,335.

More Rural Free Delivery.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Morning Sun, in Louisa county, Ia., and China Grove, Rowan county, N. C., will be granted free delivery in accordance with the experiments now being made by the post office department for the establishment of such service for rural districts.

Torrens Law Is Void.

Ottawa, Ill., Nov. 10.—The supreme court Monday declared the Torrens land title act unconstitutional. The question came before the court in the quo warranto case of the people vs. Samuel B. Chase, which was appealed from the county court of Cook county. The judgment of the county court was reversed and the case remanded.

David Blakely Dead.

New York, Nov. 9.—David Blakely, manager of Sousa's band and president of the Blakely Printing company, of Chicago, died in this city Saturday. Mr. Blakely was a pioneer newspaper publisher in the west years ago.

The Three Friends Seized.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 9.—The famous steam tug and alleged Cuban filibuster Three Friends was seized at Jacksonville, Fla., on advices from the treasury department, charged with violation of the neutrality laws.

New Orleans, Nov. 9. — James Michael, the little Welsh wonder of Tom Eck's team, broke the world's record for five miles Sunday afternoon on the new cement track. He went the distance in 9:12.

Nearly Wiped Out.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 10.—The town of Spencer, W. Va., was almost destroyed by fire Sunday night. Thirty-nine stores and houses were burned. The total loss is estimated at $300,000.

The Companion Calendar.

It is said that the expense of making the Companion Art Calendar for 1897 was so great that had it been published in the usual quantity it could not be sold for less than one dollar. Four beautiful female figures are reproduced on four folding pages. Each figure is lithographed in twelve colors, being a true reproduction of the original water-color painting which was selected because of its excellence of design and charm of color and tone. The size of each of the four folding pages is 10 1-2 by 6 inches.

It is by far the best piece of color work the Companion has ever offered. Both as a calendar and as a gem of the lithographer's art, it is so attractive that it becomes a valuable addition to the mantel or centre-table of any room. It is given free to all new subscribers sending $1.75 to the Companion for the year 1897, who receive also the paper free from the time the subscription is received till January 1, 1897.

Celebrating in 1897 its seventy-first birthday, the Companion offers its readers many exceptionally brilliant features. Fully two hundred of the most famous men and women of both continents have contributed to the next year's volume of the paper. For free Illustrated Prospectus address.

DRAINING PASTURES.

In Many Cases It Can Be Made to Pay Handsomely.

The impression is quite common that it will not pay to underdrain pasture land, says Drainage Journal. There are pasture lands that it will not pay to drain, but it is also true that in many instances it will pay to underdrain, in part, at least, lands used for grazing purposes. In passing through the country we see many acres of pasture land which, if sufficiently underdrained, would be very valuable. As they are now they are practically worthless, affording only wild and unnutritious grasses, worth but little for grazing purposes; in fact, such lands are disease breeders of the live stock which have the run of them. Pastures which need underdrainage may be cared for so as to present a good appearance to the casual observer, but when carefully examined are found to grow grasses of little value. If they have been seeded to tame grass there is such a mixture of water grasses with the tame that the pasture is poor.

If a landowner is doubtful as to the benefits of underdraining such land, let him put in one or more tile drains with good outlets and observe the result. The wild sour grasses will disappear and the tame grass sod will thicken and grow luxuriantly. The live stock are good judges. In grazing they will keep the grass near the drains cropped closely because it is more palatable to the taste and more nutritious. We are confident that the value of thousands of acres of pasture lands could be greatly enhanced if underdrained, which are, in their present condition, practically worthless. Those who have given little attention to the real condition of their grazing lands will be surprised in a careful examination of their condition. It will soon become apparent to them that where there is one blade of good, nutritious grass, four or five may be made to grow by a well directed effort in the underdrainage of the land.

STORING FARM WAGONS.

A Device Which Makes the Shifting of Wagon Bodies Easy.

The illustration below is of a home-made appliance placed in a barn the past winter and found to be a great convenience, especially in shifting from wagon body to hay rigging, and vice versa. This device consists of a round shaft, a, 9½ inches in diameter, reaching from one main side beam to the other, bb. In one end of the shaft are two spokes, c c, seven feet long, making four handles 3½ feet in length. From one handle to the next is a bolt, e, about two feet long. The shaft runs in wooden boxes with bearings five inches in diameter. On one side of the shaft two small chains, f f, drop down within two feet from stake holes in wagon body, or hay rack, or other implement, as at g. From these ends of chain two pieces about four feet each, with hooks on the ends, run to the stake holes or hooking parts. Similar chains are arranged on the other end of the shaft. After the first rigging is rolled up, it is very easy to raise afterwards, as the weight of one body going down assists in raising the other.—F. C. Hubbard, in Orange Judd Farmer.

CHEAP FARM PAINT.

It Gives a Satisfactory Finish on Either Wood or Stone.

A method of painting farm buildings and country houses, while by no means new, is yet so little known and so deserving of wider application as to warrant a description. The paint has but two parts, both cheap materials, being water lime or hydraulic cement and skimmilk. The cement is placed in a bucket, and the skimmilk, sweet, is gradually added, stirring constantly until just about the consistency of good cream. The stirring must be thoroughly done to have an even flow, and if too thin the mixture will run on the building and look streaked. The proportions cannot be exactly stated, but a gallon of milk requires a full quart of cement, and sometimes a little more. This is a convenient quantity to mix at a time for one person to use. If too much is prepared, the cement will settle and harden before all is used.

A flat paint brush about four inches wide is the best implement to use with this mixture. Lay it on exactly as with oil paint. It can be applied to wood work, old or new, and to brick and stone. When dry, the color is a light creamy brown, or what some would call a yellowish stone color. The skimmilk cement paint, well mixed, without adding color has a good body, gives smooth satisfactory finish on either wood or stone and wears admirably.—American Mechanic.

Plenty of Swindlers Abroad.

The number of people who live or try to live by their wits seems to have increased rapidly of late. Never have swindlers of all kinds been more in evidence both in city and in country. In a single week no less than four schemes to defraud farmers have come to our notice. They are all variations of the venerable swindles which have been exposed so often in the press. One correspondent intimates that hypnotism is being used to bunko farmers in his locality. This is probably only the hypnotism of a smooth tongue on the part of the "agent" and careless business methods on the part of the victim. There is a heap of this kind of "hypnotism" all over the country at present.—National Stockman.

CAUGHT IN CHICAGO.

Arrest of a Bay City Newspaper Man—Embezzlement Charged.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Edwin T. Bennett, for many years connected with the Bay City (Mich.) Tribune, was arrested here Monday afternoon charged with embezzling $15,000 from that concern. The complainants are Edwin T. Carrington, president, and John F. Eddy, one of the directors of the Tribune Publishing company at Bay City. The stock company was organized by Bennett himself, the former owner of the concern. He was made manager, secretary and treasurer. After a failure last May the concern was reorganized and Bennett's alleged discrepancies were discovered. He had for several months been living in the east and on Prince Edward island. He returned to Bay City early last week, but before a warrant could be obtained for his arrest had boarded the steam barge John Spry, bound for Chicago. He was arrested here Monday when the boat landed after a perilous trip down the lakes. He will return to Bay City to-day in charge of an officer without the formality of a requisition.

Bay City, Nov. 11.—Police Justice Kelley was in his office at ten o'clock Tuesday night when Special Officer Benson walked in with Edwin T. Bennett, whose arrest he caused in Chicago Monday on a warrant sworn out by stockholders of the old Tribune Publishing company for alleged embezzlement. The complaint charges that while treasurer and acting manager of the Tribune company he embezzled $5,000 between March 1, 1895 and September 1, 1895, $5,000 between September 1, 1895, and February 1, 1896, and $5,000 between February 1, 1896, and August 1, 1896. There were three business men on hand to become bondsmen in the sum of $5,000 for the appearance of the accused Thursday morning. Bennett says he is entirely innocent and will prove it.

WILL REMOVE TO MUSKEGON.

Princess Knitting Works of Chicago Decides to Leave Illinois.

Muskegon, Nov. 9.—The Princess knitting works, manufacturers of ribbed underwear, located at Chicago, are to be moved to this city and be consolidated with the Amazon Hosiery company, recently moved here from Michigan City. The stock holders of both companies are or will be the same. George W. Powell, president of the Amazon, is the president and principal owner of the Princess, and the move is one in the direction of joining interests. The union will increase the number of hands employed by the Amazon from 300 to 600 and the pay roll from $75,000 to $150,000. The move will be made in the near future.

Another Factory Starts Up.

Muskegon, Nov. 9.—The Alaska Refrigerator company, the largest refrigerator factory in the world, will resume work to-day, after being idle all summer. The company has 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 feet of hard wood lumber ready for immediate manufacture. The company employs 350 to 450 hands, and its annual output is 60,000 refrigerators. The Kelly Bros.' Manufacturing company is completing negotiations for the manufacture of 3,000 ice boxes, which orders were placed recently contingent on McKinley's election.

Improvement Shown at Niles.

Niles, Nov. 9.—The Dowagiac Manufacturing company, the largest drill works in the country, employing over 200 men, and the Round Oak stove works, employing 500 men, started up to-day, giving employment to all their old men and many new hands. All their traveling men have been sent out. In this city the banks have been paying out gold and there has been deposited in the banks by farmers thousands of dollars in bank notes calling for gold. Business in all branches shows renewed activity.

Lumber Trade Revie

Saginaw, Nov. 9.—The result of the election is already felt in the lumber business. Orders are coming in fast and some large sales have been made. A. C. McLean, who operates a line of lumber lighters on the river, put on 125 more men Saturday and wanted as many more, but could not obtain them. Wickes Brothers, machine and boiler builders, have added 40 men to their force.

Bay City's Oldest Resident Dead.

Bay City, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Lavina Stickney, the oldest resident of Bay City, died Thursday night, aged 98 years. She went to Saginaw from New York state in 1853. She had been a widow since 1857. She is survived by seven living children, 42 grandchildren and 52 great-grandchildren.

Young Lady Minister.

Mattawan, Nov. 8.—Miss Wisemecht, of La Porte, Ind., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational church here. She is accredited with being one of the youngest women clergymen in the Congregational ministry, and an eloquent pulpit orator.

Drunken Man Hangs Himself.

Detroit, Nov. 5.—George W. Whipple, butcher, 45 years old, hanged himself in a cell of the Vinewood avenue police station, with a string he had worn for a belt. He had been arrested as a tippler. His widow and several children survive him.

Insane Over Election.

Allegan, Nov. 11.—Miss Dolly Mollar, of Otsego, went crazy election night while shouting "Hurrah for McKinley!" Then she chased her father and mother around with a butcher knife. The doctors say she is hopeless.

Four Barns Burned.

Brown City, Nov. 6.—Four large barns owned by Andrew Brown, living west of here, were destroyed by fire Thursday, with their contents. Loss, $2,500; partly insured.

Mistaken for a Deer.

Iron Mountain, Nov. 7.—D. Miller, a German, residing at the Great Western Mine, was mistaken for a deer while out hunting near Sag in and was shot dead by a companion.

PRIMARY SCHOOL MONEY.

Amount Apportioned Among the Several Counties.

Lansing, Nov. 11.—The semi-annual apportionment of primary school money was made by Superintendent of Public School Instruction Pattengill Monday. The amount per capita is 77 cents, which is 31 cents more than was apportioned in May. The following is the amount apportioned among the several counties:

Michigan Sunday Schools.

Kalamazoo, Nov. 9.—The state Sunday school convention which will be held in the First Congregational church, this city, November 17-19, will be one of great interest. From 800 to 1,000 delegates will probably be entertained in the city during the convention.

A woman whose nerves are unstrung, racked and dragged by debilitating pains and inflammation, cannot be a good companion or happy wife; and she is unfitted to be a mother.

These troubles prevail almost universally among women largely because of carelessness and neglect. There is no need of them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for the weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism.

It cures them radically and permanently. It heals, strengthens and purifies. It is the only scientific remedy devised for the special purpose by an educated, skilful physician. It is the only medicine that makes motherhood easy and absolutely safe.

Miss Lauretta McNees, of Rose Hill, Washoe Co., Nev., writes: "I have been taking the 'Prescription' and will not be without any more (at present). Last month I had pain at all and worked every day without inconvenience whatever. It was the first time I never had pain during that period. I cannot say too much for your medicine. I have used the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' for my patients.' I know of a lady who had been an invalid for years, who has been restored to health by your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' She was not sick like she was all her life, but was taken with flooding. This was her second baby. She took your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and your grand medicine. So do I."

Dr. Pierce has had a large experience in this particular field. He has written an illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" (1008 pages), which contains chapters devoted to woman and her peculiarities and to physiology. A paper-bound copy will be sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. For a cloth-bound copy send 50 stamps.

Floral Display at Grand

Grand Rapids, Nov. 11.—The Grand Rapids Floral club's second annual chrysanthemum show opened with ten exhibitors, 100 varieties, several thousand specimens. The display is for the benefit of the Children's Home and is a great improvement over the show given last year. Besides the chrysanthemums, there are large displays of carnations, violets and other flowers. The show will last a week.

Bonds for a New Road

Benton Harbor, Nov. 7.—It is announced the promoter of the new Benton Harbor & Eastern railway has secured financial bonds from eastern capitalists for building the road and will take possession and that the road will be started in a few weeks. The road is known as the Tunnel line.

Killed Himself.

St. Joseph, Nov. 10.—Farmer Harry M. Wilson, agent and treasurer of the Benton and Home Forum orders, disappeared when short in his accounts. It is now learned he went south, stopping at Little Rock, Ark., where he committed suicide.

MACON.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Day is improving.

We are sorry to say that Dr. Hendershot moves back to Britton this week.

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church met with Mrs. Wm. Biddle this week.

Dr. Charles Howell and wife, of Ann Arbor, spent Monday and Tuesday with his brother, Edwin Howell.

There was quite an attendance at the leap year social held at Mr. Koebbe's last Friday night. The supper made about $4 50.

It is a little late for election news and yet a joke that is told on the chairman of the democratic silver committee, of Macon, is too good to go by unrecorded. It may not have been noised around the earth, probably the news didn't "flash" at all, for most of the wires were too busy serving the devil that day, but there was one solitary voter who had the courage to walk up to the polls in Macon and cast his ballot for prohibition. Just as the voter was turning away from the booth, the undertaker from Ridgeway and the chairman of the silver committee rushed up against each other. "Hello," said B. F., "what are you up here for, to bury this prohibition corpse?" "No," was the quick retort, "I came up here to get the job of looking after the last sad remains of W. J. Bryan." He got it.

Mrs. Ed Sisson, of Detroit, came home with her mother last week, having recovered from her recent illness, and is visiting friends in this vicinity.

B. F. DePuy has decided that another presidential campaign would be entirely too much for his nervous system and so has decided to attend the World's Fair, at Paris, in 1900. His daughter, Fern, will accompany him and the two will make a tour of the continent before returning home.

Asel and Lafe Kelley entertained friends at dinner last Sunday and served, among other good things, nineteen quails, which they "bagged" the day before. Lafe's dog has a nose especially trained to quail and is the envy of every fellow in the neighborhood who owns a gun.

Last Sunday night a valuable cow belonging to Ira Coller got choked on an apple, from the effects of which she coughed so hard and so long that she burst her lung. Then the throat and neck began to swell, until by Monday the poor creature was in such agony that Ira was obliged to have a neighbor shoot her. Mr. Coller had recently paid $35 for the cow and yet he would have been glad to have given that amount if he could have saved her from such suffering and such a death.

They have come. What? Why, over 1,000 pair sample shoes at Lenardson Bros., Britton. Be quick and get your choice.

If all the accusations made are true, there must have been some high-handed violations of the law at the Macon polls on election day. Even the names are told of those who bought votes right and left all day, but as no man has yet been found who dare own up that he sold his vote, no proceedings have been ventured against the offending parties. These gentlemen are warned, however, that the defeated people are gathering evidence.

Quite a number of young gentlemen, who live in adjacent towns, come down here on a wheel, to see their "best girls." Last Sunday night the weather froze up, and the roads too, before good night had been said for the twentieth time, and some of them had a humpty dumpty time of it getting home, especially the fellow who has to go almost to Manchester. If these gentlemen can only get elected to the next legislature we'll have stone roads sure.

At Lenardson Bros., Britton, you can get shoes at your own price, if you hustle.

The news furnished by the Herald's Britton correspondent last week, that Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor were the parents of a bouncing baby girl, warather amusing to Mr. Taylor's family as the little lady weighed just two pounds and had to be esconced in delicate, soft flannel until some wee clothes could be made for her. Indeed, the little one is such a tiny bit of flesh and blood that she seems more like a doll than a real child. She is bright and smart, however, and will grow up just like any other daughter, although she probably won't come under the head of "bouncing" during the present season.

Mrs. W. R. Mayfield, of Ashton, O., says: "I had a case pin worms presented to me of 30 years' standing. This man has taken three bottles of Lightning Worm Killer, and has passed, he says, over 2 1-2 gallons of worms, and that he will make oath to the same. A score of doctors told him that he could not be cured."

Mr. George Craft, of Annville, Ky., writes: "Lightning Vegetable Liver Pills have given me great benefit in kidney and liver disease of ten years' standing. They act as reccommended."

Mr. J. K. Moore, of Weston, W. Va., writes: "Lightning Vegetable Liver Pills, used for constipation and piles, have given me great benefit."

Mr. C. C. Garrett, postmaster, Calm, W. Va., writes: "We have been using Lightning Worm Killer for the past six years with perfect satisfaction. It is a sure eradicator of worms, and has greatly benefitted our children."

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 13, 1896.

Our worthy townsman, F. J. Temple, is candidate for oil inspector. This will leave as far as heard from 26 instead of 27 candidates for the Tecumseh postoffice.

It will be the prediction of the HERALD that with the coming republican McKinley administration there will be no great change in the tariff or agitation of the tariff question. There are many incongruities in the Wilson bill which need attention, but the tariff, or rather the revenue from the tariff, will not have to be materially changed. In 1892 the people of this country spoke in very strong terms their opinion about high tariff. There should be sufficient revenue raised by tariff to pay promptly the expenses of this government. The campaign just finished, as everyone knows, was fought on currency issue. No doubt Mr. McKinley and his assistants will have common sense enough not to stir up any agitation by "tariff tinkering."

The banks and manafacturer throughout the country have taken upon themselves the job of restoring the United States to prosperity. Yes, old time prosperity. By old time prosperity is meant prosperity to the merchant, to the manufacturer, to the mechanic, to the farmer, to the day laborer, to the capitalist, to everybody. They should be assisted by republicans, silver men and democrats alike and with this assistance old time prosperity will certainly be with us. The daily papers since election have brought intelligence that the banks throughout the country are paying out the gold freely to all who desire it. To thoroughly convince the people of this fact, a number of large manufacturers paid their employees last Saturday with the yellow metal. Thousands of dollars were tranferred this last week from safety deposit vaults to banking institutions, thus putting the money where it could be circulated instead lying idle and bringing no income to its owners. The capitalists are now willing and glad to loan their money on good security. Factories are daily starting up and a few increasing pay rolls should improve business in every direction. The shortage of the wheat crop in India and Australia will help the farmer in this direction. Wheat is now 80 cents a bushel and bids fair to go higher. The opening of the cotton mills already begins to boom the price of cotton. Indeed everything tends to help us in all branches of industry and with hard work and a little patience it is to be hoped that the beginning of the end of the so-called hard times will soon be with us.

The following concerning the wheat crop and other matters from the Secretary of State is interesting and shows good crop prospects and good healthy condition of stock. The average condition of wheat in the State on Nov. 1 90, in the southern counties 88, central 93, and northern 95, comparison being with vitality and growth of average years. The average condition in the State in previous years has been: 1895, 78; 1894, 94; 1893, 89; 1892, 87; and 1891, 91. The average condition in the southern counties is 16 per cent higher than in 1895, 3 per cent lower than in 1842. The plant appears to be in healthy condition but is of small growth owing to the unusually cold and dry weather of October. The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers since the October report was published is 1,227 917, and in the three months, August, September and October, 3,399,174. This is 476,459 bushels more than reported marketed in the same months last year. The average yield of corn per acre in the State is estimated at 72 bushels of ears, equal to about 36 bushels of shelled corn. The estimate for the southern counties is 74, central 70, and northern 67 bushels of ears. These are remarkable high estimates for the State and each section and indicate the largest crop ever grown. The average yield per acre in the sixteen years, 1879-94, was 51.65 bushels of ears, or about 26 bushels of shelled corn. The clover seed crop is light. The estimate is 1.61 bushels per acre on less than three-fourths the acreage in average years. Potatoes are estimated to yield 80 per of an average crop. The excessive rains during the growing season did much damage to this crop. Hog cholera is reported from a few localities, mostly in the extreme southern counties, but stock generally is in good condition. The mean temperature of the State in October was 44.9, and in the sourthern counties 46.2 degrees. It was 1.6 degrees below the normal in the State, 1.7 degrees below in the southern counties, and about 1 degree below in the remaining counties. The average precipitation during the month was, in the State, 1.50 inches, and in southern 1.23 inches. Compared with the normal there was a deficiency in the State and in each section in the lower peninsular as follows. State 0.92 inches; southern counties, 1.03 inches; central, 1.13 inches, and northern, 1.25 inches. The rainfall in the upper peninsula amounted to 3.46 inches which is 0.71 inches in excess of the normal.

Election Bets.

Very few bets of any kind were made in Tecumseh this year, some money changed hands and it is reported that some staunch republicans lost small sized "wads" on "Li Hung Ping." A few novel bets were indulged in but only the two following were discovered by the HERALD man.

Chas. H. Heck, the miller, and Will Sisson, the furniture man, have for the past few months been very warm friends. Heck has been allowed to rest himself in the easy chairs in the furniture show room, while Sisson smoked the farmers cigars, but now all friendship has ceased between them and Heck declares that Sisson is nothing more or less than a web-footed-horse-thief from the swamps of Blissfield, and all on account of an election bet. Heck bet Sisson a barrel of flour against an easy chair that Michigan would go over 30,000 republican, and Sisson paid the bet by sending him a picture of a chair, which was delivered via Uncle Sam's postoffice. The same parties have another bet still unsettled and people at the HERALD end of town fear bloodshed.

The papers all over the state have recorded, in various ways, the wheel-barrow ride wager between Miss Metta Owen and Frank Bauer, which culminated in the young lady treating Mr. Bauer to a delightful "push-buggy" excursion from the Mills block to the HERALD office and return, last Saturday. The reports of the trip were fairly correct but the following description of how the bet came about is vouched for by both interested parties:

Said Metta to Frank,
"I'll wheel you up the plank,
If 'Old Gold bug Mc' is elected."
Said Frank to Miss Mettie,
You better not 'bettie'
Election might go unexpected."

Then she said, "Mister Bauer,
I will give you one hour
To bet or to simply back down.
For I do surely think,
Old "Mc" on the brink
Of being 'done up' in this town."

Then said Frank very gruff,
"I will not stand the bluff
I will bet you a ride in the barrow
That Bryan is 'done.'
This is business, not fun
Lets decide it today not tomorrow."

Election is past
And this is the last
Bet Metta will ever be Owen,
Still Frank was not gay,
As she trundled away,
He had rather he hadn't been "goin."

Chrysanthemum Show.

The ladies of the Research circle are to be congratulated for the wonderful success of their display of these popular and beautiful flowers. The transformation which the Heesen store presented as one stepped inside the door, was simply marvelous. One could scarcely believe the room could be transformed into such a bower of beauty by human hands and yet these ladies did it unassisted. Considering that with the exception of some plants furnished by Mr. Peck, florist, of Hudson, and a fine collection of blooms of the different varieties from Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, the entire display has been gathered from this community, one's credulity experiences a severe strain. When seen in the homes of the individual owners they do not look so extraordinarily beautiful but collected together and arranged as these have been, by skillful hands, language seems too feeble to do the picture presented justice. The ceiling and side walls above the shelving of the room were tastefully adorned with bunting of different tints, the floor covered with a great variety of rugs artistically arranged, beautiful screens placed around formed pretty backgrounds for the charming grouping of plants in bloom. In the center of the room a lovely floral pyramid rose to the ceiling, made so by the arrangement of blooming plants of different kinds and colors. On the north side of this was the beautiful chrysanthemum collection from N. Smith & Son's of Adrian, and on the south side those from Mr. Peck, of Hudson. The east side of the room was draped in white and in the center yellow chrysanthemums of every hue, which were greatly admired. On the west side there was a variety—cactuses of different kinds in full bloom, ferns, mirrors, canary birds in pretty cages, pictures, palms, and on top of the shelving potted plants in great profusion, all arranged with such exquisite taste that it furnished a picture to delight the eye. In the west window, arranged like a parlor, was a wedding scene, complete in every detail, one ought to see to comprehend. It showed taste, skill, and a great amount of labor. The diminutive ladies' toilets were handsome and the little gentlemen were in full dress. The priest was there, the bridal pair with attendants under a marriage bell, behind them a bank of flowers; children with baskets of flowers, guests, etc. It was indeed very realistic. A piano orchestra furnished the music.—A gentleman presided here only. Dainty lunches were served and choice boxes of bon bons sold. Each visitor was presented with a hand painted souvenier that was a work of art. This delightful entertainment was planned, executed and conducted entirely by the ladies of the Research circle and they should have reaped a bountiful harvest.

Anderson & Rosacrans.

Anderson & Rosacrans occupy the store known as the "old Anderson store," which is a building 23 by 120 feet in size and the space used for sales rooms is the first and second floors, thus making one of the roomiest and best lighted sales houses in southern Michigan. Since the organization of this firm, (which consists of Webb Anderson, John L. Anderson and Fred Rosacrans), every effort has been made to purchase a new, well-assorted and complete stock of dry goods, notions, carpets and cloaks. These goods coming, a great many of them, indeed most of them, direct from the manufacturers, and being purchased especially with regard to the trade and desires of the people of Tecumseh and vicinity, it has taken until about this time to get the assortment fully in place. Now everything is here. No finer stock of dry goods proper can be found in the county. Special attention has been paid to the purchasing of hosiery and underwear, and the assortment of notions is tasty and up to date in every particular. In the carpet department may be found stock which was never before and never will be again sold at such low figures. It may be said that wool used in making carpets is now at the lowest price ever known. The facilities for making carpets have been perfected from year to year, and combining the two the results in price are simply marvelous, and now is the time to buy carpets. Prices were never so low and the stock of this firm will certainly please you.

It has been the purpose of Anderson & Rosacrans in no way to hurry the arrival of this immense stock of merchandise. The idea was to take pains in selecting, special care being used that the prices and qualities should be right, that their patrons might be assured at all times of securing the best qualities for the least money at this store. It would be advantageous for the people of Tecumseh to call, look over the goods, make comparison in qualities and prices, not taking into consideration for an instant whether they desire to purchase or not, and it is the desire and intention as far as quality of goods and prices are concerned, to hold a little opening every trades day in the year.

Webb Anderson has been engaged in business in Tecumseh for over 40 years. Fred Rosacrans has worked 25 years as employee and partner of the Andersons. John Anderson commenced 20 years ago to clerk in the store and for a number of years past has been partner in the firm. Three better known, more trusted, more competent men could not be found in Lenawee county. They have made the dry goods business the study of their lives, and the two younger members of the firm will at all times be actively engaged attending to the wants of their increasing trade. It is indeed a pleasure for the HERALD to write concerning the business and business life of the members of such a firm. Tecumseh has always been fortunate in this branch of trade, and the citizens not only of our town but of the surrounding country are proud of so first-class an institution. It will really be a wonder if in every way the firm of Anderson & Rosacrans does not succeed.

Hoyt's Comedy Company.

This popular company composed of artists of ability in their special lines, are making a week's stand at Sutton's opera house. The repertoire is large, choice and varied, and the stage settings unusually fine. Their work has been far in advance of what is usual in towns of this size. The houses have increased nightly which is a high compliment to the company. Rose May Doty is a charming soubrette, Charles Rich an excellent commedian and baby Lottie a prodigy. Last night there was a big house to see "Texas Steer." Tonight, by special request, they repeat "Faust and Marguerite" wherein special scenery is used and electrical display gorgeous. At the matinee tomorrow afternoon for women and children, "Maloney's Wedding" will be presented and in the evening "Trilby." No doubt the opera house will be packed.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions adopted by the Tecumseh and Franklin Farmers' Club.

WHEREAS it has pleased our Heavenly Father to take from us Mr. George Poucher, one of our members of the Tecumseh and Franklin Farmers' Club, and while we know that "He doeth all things well", still we desire to express our sympathy, therefor be it

RESOLVED, that we extend to the bereaved family our consolation in this their hour of sorrow and affliction, and be it further

RESOLVED, that a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the books of our society and also published in the Tecumseh Herald.

WHEREAS, God in His providence has seen best to remove from our midst, our friend and neighbor, W. S. Osborn,

RESOLVED, that through the death of Mr. Osborn the club has lost a true and honored friend and member.

RESOLVED, that we tender our sympathy to the bereaved sons and daughter in this their great affliction.

RESOLVED, that a copy of the above be printed in the Tecumseh Herald and sent to the bereaved family and entered upon the minutes of the society's book.

MR. AND MRS. S. V. MUNGER.
MR. AND MRS. A. VANVALKENBURG.

Again standing by the open grave of a valiant defender of the old flag, we are forcibly reminded that each day's march brings us nearer the eternal camping ground.

Charles Meredyth Woodward passed over the river October 27th, 1896.

During the dark days of rebellion he was ever loyal to his country and exemplified his devotion amidst the clash of arms and smoke of battle, and when war's alarms became a memory he continued to be a genial, generous and lovable comrade. He was an esteemed member of Beers' Post 140, G. A. R., which organization, in respect for his memory, by a rising vote unanimously

RESOLVED, that to the family of our deceased comrade we extend our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of sorrow and bereavement.

RESOLVED, that our altar and charter shall be draped in mourning for a period of 30 days, and that a copy of these resolutions be published in our village papers.

The party given at the armory last Friday evening to the McKinley young men by the Bryan boys, as the result of a bet, was a delightful affair. The hall was decorated as dictated by the McKinleyites and was showy. About a couple participated. The guests were royally entertained.

It is understood that the ladies of Tecumseh are agitating another leap year party. 'Tis well, ladies, but if the HERALD remembers correctly the gentlemen have not returned the party of last year which was indeed a most delightful affair.

It has been reported around town that coal has gone up in price quite an amount during the last few weeks. This is a mistake. C. A. Slayton is selling the best grades hard coal, carefully screened, any size, for $7.00 per ton and your orders will be filled promptly. There is at present no prospect of a raise in the price of coal.

At the last meeting of the Monday club the topics Charles V, Martin Luther and the Reformation were discussed. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Wm. Smith presided. We hope to give further particulars next week as many people often attend entertainments given by this society.

Smith & Son, Adrian's popular florists, no matter where they show their chrysanthemums, bear off the plumes. At the great show in Chicago Wednesday, they had no plants, only blossoms, and yet they won four firsts and one second as follows:—2nd, $15.00 for forty blossoms one variety yellow; 1st, $15.00 for twenty varieties, one bloom of each; 1st, $15.00 for twelve varieties, one blossom of each; 1st, $25.00 for collection named varieties, one blossom of each less than forty varieties: 1st, $25.00 collection named varieties. They have a display at all the chrysanthemum shows now in progress in the different large cities. No doubt they lead others in chrysanthemums.

Mr. Whiting owns a dog commonly known about the village as "Ping." The dog's full name is Hazen S. Pingree Whiting. Although there is no more rabid democrat in Lenawee county than Will Whiting, this dog seems to have fallen onto the job and instead of following in the footsteps of his master insisted upon attending every republican meeting during the last campaign and at every mention of Pingree's name he would howl to "beat the band." But "Ping" had no collar, and as his master had bet so much on Bryan that he had no money with which to buy one, a mutual friend stated these facts in a letter to his honor, Mayor Pingree, and by early express came the handsome collar that Detroit could furnish, beautifully engraved and inscribed "Pingree Whiting."

A. M. Palmer's company, under the direction of Wm. A. Brady, which has just concluded a successful tour of Australia, presenting that delightful play, "Trilby," will appear at the new Croswell, Adrian, Tuesday evening, Nov. 17th. The popularity of this fresh and delightful romance of artistic life is certainly remarkable. "Trilby" is a play which has the unusual distinction of appealing more to the imagination than to one's experience in actual life. It makes no large demand on the intelligence or thinking faculties; it is a fantastic fairy tale happily blended. No one can deny that Svengali fascinates notwithstanding his knavish and hypnotic tricks and devilish cunning. Was there ever such a character of frank girlishness as Trilby? Miss Eleanor Barry, who was prominent in support of Wm. H. Crane last season, is appearing in the title role. Chas. Kent, who has done excellent work in the past, is handling the role of Svengali.

Ernest Ruwolnt about whom an article appeared in these columns last week feels that it was unjust and in a great measure uncalled for as he is not abusive to his family and labors hard for the comfort of his wife and little ones. On the evening referred to when he returned from his work and spoke to his wife as he repeatedly had about her taking the children and being away so much, thereby neglecting things at home when he was away at work, she became angry and some words followed. At bedtime he locked the doors and retired, leaving her down stairs, and knew nothing of her leaving the house until after eleven o'clock. When the officer came he explained matters whereupon he retired satisfied that Mr. Ruwoldt was not the only one at fault. Mr. W. simply desires his wife to husband his earnings and care for his household affairs that he may be able to pay his creditsrs. We understand explanations have been made and harmony restored.

THE NEXT ATTRACTION.

Our Own and Only Bob Burdette will be here Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Burdette, the laughing philosopher, the prince of pathos, the wizard, who jingles among the bells of his cap the key to every human heart.

"A lecture by Robert J. Burdette is certain to draw a crowd. It doesn't seem to make much difference what kind of a night it may be, nor what may be the subject of the discourse, people always go to hear Burdette talk. Last night Grace Methodist church was filled to hear him, in spite of the extremely disagreeable weather. People take him on the principle that you can't have too much of a good thing. It is impossible to disguise the genial soul of this man even under well known phrases. His lecture in its outward form may grow old, as he says it has, but the heart of the man never will. That appears to be as young ever. And it is the firm belief of many who know him that he couldn't get old if he tried. His lecture last night was new to those who have heard it before, as well as to those who have not. It was terse with wit and the same pathos which characterize all of Mr. Burdette's work, and a delighted crowd laughed and cried for two hours."—Chicago Inter Ocean, Feb. 4, 1890.

Season tickets for the remaining five entertainments are now offered at $1.25. Never before were five such entertainments offered to a Tecumseh audience at the small price of 25c each. Now that the campaign has closed, the committee of the Star Course trust that the citizens of Tecumseh will appreciate the effort made and the chances taken in securing such a high class of entertainments and that they will come to the rescue and patronize the course and by so doing relieve the committee of a large loss which is before them.

Mrs. Morris Hyde.

Harriet Lawrence was born at Pompey Hollow, near Syracuse, New York, Dec. 10, 1810. When she was a child of five her mother died two years later her father followed; leaving four daughters and one son, the subject of this sketch being the last surviving member of her family. After her father's death Harriet made her home with an aunt and uncle until 1831 when she became the wife of Phineas Whittier. In 1832 the husband died, leaving his widow with an infant son. On June 15, she was married to Morris Hyde, at Sodus, Wayne Co., New York. Two years later the young couple emigrated to the wilds of Michigan, coming as far as Toledo by water and from there to Franklin, Lenawee county, by wagon. For ten years they endured the hardships of pioneer life and in 1846 moved to Tecumseh, where they have since lived on the corner of Pottawatamie and Union streets.

Mrs. Hyde died on Nov. 6, 1896, after an illness of ten days. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, Nov. 8, 1896, at the family residence, the Rev. B. S. Hudson officiating.

Five children survive their mother: Stephen Whittier, Albert Hyde, Mrs. J. A. Munger, Mrs. J. M. Ingersoll and Mrs. Clarissa Kendrick; two sons having gone before. She also leaves nine grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

She was a faithful wife and loving mother and although we shall sadly miss her, yet we can say, through our tears, "She has finished her day's work and is laid to her well earned rest."

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

THEY NEVER HEARD OF HIM.

Two Chicago Business Men Who Wondered Who George R. Davis Is.

Three men were chatting together in a Madison street cigar store. It was raining outside and neither was in a hurry to leave. One of them was a well-known politician and the other two were apparently successful business men. A military-looking gentleman with snowwhite hair, mustache and chin whiskers entered, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"Good evening," said the politician.

"A nasty night," he added.

"Who is that?" queried one of the other two men of the politician after the man he had addressed as colonel had gone out.

"Why, don't you know him—Royal George Davis?"

"Well, who is Royal George Davis, anyway?"

"George R. Davis—don't know George R.?"

"What did he do?"

"Why, man, he was director general of the world's fair!"

"Never heard of him."

The politician looked at the man in undisguised amazement. "Come, buy the cigars," was all he said.

And such is fame.

How Manufacturers Test Bicycles.

Unless one has visited a great bicycle factory it is not easy to appreciate the many delicate operations that the parts of a bicycle are subjected to, the many tests that must be passed, and the hundreds of careful inspections that the many parts must pass before they are considered worthy or good enough to be assembled into a bicycle of standard worth. Visitors to a big manufactory are surprised at the extent of the plant, the perfect appointments, and air of discipline that prevails throughout. It does not take the most inexperienced long to see why it costs so much to build a good bicycle. The most exacting care is required; the very best materials are necessary in every part; skilled labor of the highest order is essential to obtain the desired results, and if any part gets through the inspection-room and is afterwards found imperfect, it is nothing short of marvelous.

A Remedy for Thinness.

A French paper tells the story of a dramatic instructor who had as a pupil a girl who was very pretty, but woefully thin. Thinness is so fatal on the stage—except where there is the highest genius, as in the case of that great actress of whose admirers it is said that they prefer grace before meat—that he consulted a physician about it. The physician recommended belladonna. "Why?" asked the dramatic instructor. "Because," was the reply, "belladonna has the property of dilating the pupil."

It is not long since the emperor of Austria definitely settled the succession to the throne on his nephew, Archduke Otto, passing over the latter's elder brother, Francis Ferdinand, because he was on the point of death from consumption. Francis is apparently recovering his health, however, and it is hinted that he was not suffering so much from consumption as from blighted affection. He has long wished to marry Archduchess Stephanie, the widow of Crown Prince Rudolph, whose tragic death at Meverling a few years ago will be recalled, and he was constitutionally debarred from doing so while he remained in the direct line of succession to the throne.

An iron rod is bent to the curve of the barrel and its lower end turned over a hook under the lower edge of the barrel. The lever at the top and a block of wood, to be used first flatwise and then edgewise, complete the outfit. The lever can be raised or lowered by the nut on the end of the iron rod.

VACCINATING LAND.

The Principle of Inoculation in the Domain of Agriculture.

Research has demonstrated that the soil of our fields is literally teeming with bacteria, which, according to some recent experiments, may be present to the extent of 45,000,000 per gramme (the one-twenty-sixth part of an ounce) of soil; and that these bacteria are largely instrumental in conducing to the successful growth of vegetation by preparing, in forms suitable for assimilation by the plant, the different food substances it derives from the soil, says the Quarterly Review. The latest application, in the domain of agriculture, of the great principle of inoculation, is in many respects of a more striking nature than anything yet accomplished by this line of research, and consists of the inoculation of the soil with pure cultures of bacteria for the purpose of promoting plant growth.

Inoculation of a soil with these cultures, on a practical scale, may be affected in either of two ways. First, the seed of the crop it is desired to inoculate may be inoculated before it is sown. This is effected by making a watery solution of the pure cultivation, immersing the seed in it, and subsequently drying it; or, secondly, it may be effected by inoculating a quantity of fine sand or earth in the same way, and then spreading it over the field and subsequently working it into the soil to a depth of about three inches. Naturally, a point of considerable interest is the economic question of the cost of such treatment. It is interesting to learn that this is extremely moderate, as the expense of inoculating a field in this way amounts to the very moderate sum of five shillings per acre. This cannot be regarded as expensive, and contrasts favorably with the expense of nitrogenous fertilizers.

ART IN AGRICULTURE.

It Is Coming to Be Quite an Important Elevating Factor.

Art in agriculture is coming to be more and more noticeable every day. With the advent of new methods, improved implements and a wider knowledge of the field, the agriculturist is rising higher in the field of useful or ornamental art as the years go by. We may say that sharp competition is no small factor in this progressive movement, says the agricultural student. Take, for example, the manner in which certain products are prepared for the open market. The improvement in the condition of certain dairy products and fruit on market in the last few years is truly wonderful. The reason, of course, is that people always buy that article which is put up in the most tasteful and attractive style, and are willing to pay a little more for it. With this change comes a more wholesome effect upon the article itself, and disease is much less disseminated through food at the present time than formerly. Greater precautions are taken now than ever before in preventing the spread of contagious diseases in this manner, and with the increase in the size of the cities and the greater liability to ill-health, these precautions cannot be observed too carefully. Thus the agriculturist, to be successful, must keep right up to date in his readings and methods.—Mirror and Farmer.

The Day of Small Things.

This is a day of small things, and the sooner we educate ourselves to see the necessity of economizing in the factors of success, the sooner we shall be able to extract ourselves from the slough of despond. The small butter dairy, under certain conditions, can compete with the largest creamery. But, as in the creamery, it is necessary to pay strict attention to details and the requirements of excellence, if we hope to please the taste of the consumer.—Farmers' Review.

It costs almost as much to keep an idle horse as one that works in winter

BUTCHERING TIME.

Timely Hints Concerning the Killing and Dressing of Hogs.

Butchering time is near at hand; have plenty of dry wood up; kettles and scalding tub ready, the old gun ready to shoot, and the knives sharpened. Meat killed in moderately cool weather will take salt better and keep sweeter than that killed in severely cold weather. Under latter conditions it is liable to freeze or chill before the animal heat and smell leaves the carcass.

Water heated with hot limestone rock will clean a hog better than water heated in kettles. If you heat in kettles, put a shovelful of ashes in the scalding tub; 160 degrees is scalding heat, but water at 175 to 180 degrees will do the work much quicker, but with more danger of setting the hair. The thermometer is the best test of the proper heat, but old butchers readily test it by the feel of the water on the hands.

Shoot your hogs down before sticking them, it is more humane and even if it was not, a shot hog will bleed more freely than one stuck alive. The proper place to shoot is where lines drawn from each eye to the opposite ear would cross. Use a small charge of powder, or if you use a breech-loading gun, use short cartridges. As soon as the hog drops stick him. Roll him on his back, put the point of your knife, which should not be more than six inches long, right in front of the breast bone, direct it toward the root of the tail, thrust it in and withdraw it quickly to prevent shoulder sticking from the struggles of the dying animal. Scald the front end first, and when the hog is clean hang it on the gallows pole and scrape down. Use hot water at first, and finish it up with a bucket or two of cold water.

Take the insides out of the hog just as soon as you can after it is hung up. Put your knife in at the hole made in sticking and rip up through the breast bone and ribs; this will allow any blood that has settled in the lungs to run out while you finish the job. Split down between the hams and cut around the vent; pull and cut until you have the bung gut loose for six inches. Tie a string around it and push it back into the carcass. Finish cutting down in front, and put your left hand under the intestines as they roll out; with the right hand tear everything loose from the back bone, using the knife with care, so as to avoid cutting the entrails. Cut the gullet in front of the stomach, and take the stomach out with the rest of the entrails. Remove the liver, lungs and heart after the rest is done. If the hog is not bloody inside, use no water to clean it, but wipe it dry with a cloth. Even if the inside of the hog is rather bloody, it may be wiped clean with little trouble; the meat will take salt better if kept dry.—C. D. Lyon, in Rural World.

SIMPLE HOUSE FRAME.

Mode of Construction Highly Useful for Small Buildings.

There has been a wonderful change in recent years in the manner of framing buildings, reducing the size of timbers used and doing much less cutting of mortices and tenons. But there are still other changes in the direction of simplicity that are not commonly known. One of these is shown in the accompanying sketch, which very nearly explains itself. Instead of a heavy sill, a two-inch plank is laid upon the stone foundation, bedded into the cement. Upon this are laid the planks that are to support the floor boards. These are spiked to the uprights, which are themselves spiked to the sill plank. The same plan of spiking the frame can be carried out in the upper portion of the building. In this way all the frame is made of plank, and no mortising or tenoning is required. This plan is highly useful for small buildings, while there are plans to use a somewhat similar construction in the framing of barns. —American Agriculturist.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Plan to make hog killing as easy as possible.

Don't waste time and effort trying to grow crops not adapted to your soil or climate.

When we reflect that a large proportion of milk is made up of water, we see the importance of furnishing the cows with pure water.

H. S. Matteson says: "I do not believe that a cow milks any easier for having her teats wet, any more than I believe a man can lift more when he spits on his hands."

What man has done man can do. Many dairies have succeeded in getting their herds up to an average of 300 pounds of butter per cow per year. All should strive for it.

A fair estimate of hay for a cow is from 15 to 20 pounds per day. A milch cow will eat four or five pounds more than a dry one, and a large cow will of course eat more than a small one, under similar conditions.

It is said that the color on the inside of the ear is an infallible guide in the selection of a good butter cow. If the skin on the inside of the ear is of a rich yellow color, the cow is sure to give a good quantity of milk that is rich in butter.

The soja bean has given great satisfaction in the Ohio station. It is a hardy, rapid grower, and gives a good yield of very rich forage. The black is the only variety that matures seed that far north, but the green makes better hay, as it holds its leaves better. For hay, plant them with the grain drill; for seed, plant as corn.

VESSEL GOES DOWN.

Loss of the Schooner Waukesha in a Storm Off Muskegon.

Six Members of Her Crew Are Drowned—One Rescued—The Survivor Lays the Blame on a Drunken Captain.

Muskegon, Mich., Nov. 9.—It was about 1:30 Sunday morning when the beach patrolman on the south shore of the harbor reported wreckage coming ashore. This report, to the mind of Capt. Wood, brought up the question of the safety of the big three-masted schooner which arrived off the point about four o'clock Saturday afternoon. She signaled for a tug as she came in sight, and the station sent word uptown for the Carrie Ryerson, which came down, but did not venture out in the face of the big sea which was running. The schooner was apparently all right during the evening, and at nine o'clock the lookout man saw her lights. After that they disappeared and nothing more was seen of them. It was thought she had slipped her cables and run out to get room.

Six Lives Lost

But the sequel shows she had not. In the storm, the awful cold and darkness, six human lives had been snuffed out and not a soul on shore had been a whit the wiser. In the wreckage was found the name plate of the schooner, which was the Waukesha, owned by Capt. Duncan Corbett. She was loaded with salt and was bound from Ludington to South Chicago, so it was learned, as the thread of the tragedy was slowly picked up afterwards.

The lookout man at the life saving station thought he saw something move on a dark object which bobbed with the swell of the sea, the object lying about half a mile off the harbor. This was at the break of day, and Capt. Wood was notified and speedily found out that the dark something was the wreck of a vessel.

One Survivor.

In the hope that something might be alive on the wreck he went out there with his crew and to his great surprise found a sailor clinging to an improvised raft. The man was able to wave to the life savers as they came up and was taken to the station, and when warmed up and pronounced out of danger was sent to bed. Sunday evening he was able to talk, and gave a graphic description of the tragedy

Says the Captain Was Drunk.

He said that his name was Frank Delach, that they left Ludington Friday, and almost immediately the captain began drinking, and had for his companions a sailor by the name of Fred and the mate. Soon the three were deeply intoxicated and they continued that way until the end. The boat leaked badly all the way and the hands, at the pumps all the time, soon became worn out.

The sea increased and the men begged the captain to beach the boat, but he refused. When they came in sight of Muskegon the master did not know where he was, and anchored 1½ miles out, against the protests of Delach, who wanted him to either enter the harbor or go ashore, saying they could not live where they were. The drunken captain, however, refused, and would not allow any signals to be given to bring help, locking the torches up.

Loss of the Crew.

Shortly after the boat began breaking up and the men sought safety in the rigging. One by one the masts fell, one killing the negro cook. The other six clung to the wreckage and were washed away one by one. Delach's mate being the last to go, just at daybreak Sunday morning. Two bodies, those of the cook and a Swedish sailor, have been recovered and have been taken charge of by Coroner Van der Linde, who will hold an inquest to-day.

The boat had on 600 tons of salt. The Waukesha was an old boat, having been built at Manitowoc, Wis., in 1862. She registered 310 tons, was 138 feet long and 26 feet beam, and her owner or manager was F. H. Head of Chicago.

Survivor of Thirteen Wrecks.

This was Delach's first trip on the boat, and he was unable to give the names of any of the crew. He says she was sailed by her owner. This is the thirteenth time Delach has been wrecked. Nothing was found on the bodies by which they could be identified.

Muskegon, Nov. 10.—Two of the bodies of the crew of the wrecked schooner Waukesha have been identified. One was named Johnson and lived in Chicago. He formerly lived in Muskegon. The name of the other was Martin, and his residence is unknown. The body of Thomas Gayton, the colored cook, has been taken to Benton Harbor by friends.

Expect Heavy Winter Traffic.

Benton Harbor, Nov. 7.—The Graham & Morton Transportation company has closed a contract with the Lake Michigan & Lake Superior Transportation company for the steamer Duluth to go on the Milwaukee freight route from this port after November 20 for six months. An immense freight business is in sight for the winter over this route.

School Money to Be Apportioned.

Lansing, Nov. 7.—State Superintendent of Public Instruction Pettengill will soon make the regular semi-annual apportionment of primary school money. The sum of $547,537.87 will be apportioned among the 608,231 children in the state at the rate of 77 cents per capita.

Kalamazoo Factories to Resume.

Kalamazoo, Nov. 7.—The Standard wheel works, the Long Coupler company and several large carriage and wagon factories and foundries in this city are preparing to resume at once, after a long shut-down.

Crazy on "16 to 1."

Mount Clemens, Nov. 11.—Walter Cord, of Macomb township, aged 26, went hopelessly crazy over politics and since election has done nothing but shriek "sixteen to one."

The two most critical times in a woman's life are the times which make the girl a woman, and the woman a mother. At these times Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is of incalculable value. It strengthens and invigorates the organs distinctly feminine, promotes regularity of the functions, allays irritation and inflammation, checks unnatural and exhausting drains, and puts the whole delicate organism into perfect condition. Almost all the ills of womankind are traceable to some form of what is known as "female complaint." There are not three cases in a hundred of woman's peculiar diseases that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will not cure.

severe fall, you strain yourself lifting perhaps you are compelled to maintain a sitting or stooping position for long intervals at a time, your back begins to ache, then your head, you become listless, tired and weary, but do you understand the real cause? We think not, else you would not use plasters and liniment on the back, which only relieve but do not reach the cause. If you would rid yourself of the pain and cure the root of the trouble, at the same time save many years of suffering and perhaps life itself, you will take a kidney remedy that has been tried and proven that it will cure.

Mr. John Robsoin of 661 Russell Street, Detroit, says: "As a result of exposure during the war I have suffered ever since with rheumatism and kidney trouble. Pains would start in my hip and go around to my back. Highly colored urine denoted kidney disorder. The pain in my back was often so bad I had to give up work until the severity of the attack passed away. I have used many liniments and other things, but received very little relief. Some time ago I started using Doan's Kidney Pills and they have worked a wonderful change in me. My back is all right now and I owe it all to the almost magical influence of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Mr. Robsoin was a member of the Fifty-first Illinois Regiment, which served through the war with honor and distinction. Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers—price, 50 cents. HORTICULTURE.

MAKING A HOTBED.

How to Have Fresh Vegetables Almost All the Year Around.

In many sections of the country fresh vegetables may be had the year round if a hotbed is constructed and properly cared for. Such a bed may not be an expensive one of brick or stone, covered with glass, unless the owner so desires. Oiled canvas stretched over a frame will answer the purpose nearly as well as glass and will be far cheaper. It should be made a few days before needed, so that the oil can penetrate through and through the cloth. Linseed oil is best, and may be applied by means of a common paint brush.

For the hotbed make a bed of common barnyard manure, being sure there is no cow dung in it. Turn this over and over two or three times at intervals of four or five days. Allow the manure to ferment until smoking hot. When the manure is thoroughly heated make an excavation two feet longer and two feet wider than the box, which may be made of inch boards. The back part should be about 20 inches high and the front 12 or 14 inches. This will give a sloping top, which will permit the rain to run off. The cover may be made so it can be pushed down or up at the owner's will; or a stick with notches in it at intervals will answer as well. In this way the cover can be lifted entirely off the bed or be raised just enough to admit necessary air and light. By having a notched stick the cover will take no extra room when not in use. The hotbed may be of any size desired.

In the excavation place six or seven inches of rich soil, and upon this the fermenting dung until the bed is about two feet high. On top of this place three or four inches of pulverized soil. Put on the frame and keep it covered until the temperature rises to 120 degrees, then sow the seed. Every night until danger of frost is passed cover with mats or similar protection. The bed should be opened every day from 9 until ten or eleven a. m. and from two to three or four p. m., unless freezing, to let in air. Never allow the temperature to exceed 90 degrees or fall below 70. To secure good, healthy plants plenty of air is necessary, and unless the air is admitted tall, sickly growths will be the result. Care must be taken to bank the outside of the bed all around with good stable manure.—Farm and Home.

INTERESTING TESTS.

A Fine, Firm Seed Bed Is Preferable to a Loose Soil.

In order to determine the effect of "compact" and "loose" soil upon seed, the horticultural students in the short course in agriculture, Madison, Wis., made the following experiments:

Each student used 100 white beans divided into two equal lots. Before planting, the volume of each lot was determined by pouring a given amount of water into graduated tubes, and noting the difference in height of the water when the beans are added. They were then drained and at once planted in tin boxes with tight covers. The boxes were filled one-third with moist garden soil, in which the beans were mixed and the surface covered with an inch of soil. The same operation was performed with the second lot, and in addition a small block of wood was used to compress the soil about the beans. As each student prepared two lots, this gave 100 cups, which were marked with labels giving student's name and volume of beans. The cups were then placed for 24 hours in a room in a temperature of 68 to 70 degrees. The volume of the beans of each lot was then determined with the following result: The average increase in volume of the beans in loose soil was 46 per cent., in compact soil 71 per cent. Peter Henderson relates in "Gardening for Profit" an experiment in which not one seed in 1,000 of celery, nor one in 100 of cabbage, started in strips of loose soil, while compacted strips gave an excellent stand. The use of the feet or roller is based on the same principle. In the loose soil there are less points of contact of moist earth with the seed, causing less water to be absorbed, a slower germination, and an unfavorable condition for its best development.

The concensus of opinion is that a fine, firm seed bed is preferable to a loose soil.

The Way to Sell Fruit.

In order to effect a ready sale for fruit of any kind in these times of great competition, it is necessary to grow large and highly-colored fruits, to strive after quality—as understood in the market—more than quantity, although the latter must not by any means be overlooked. Let it be noted, if fruit is to be sold privately, that good flavor and proper degree of ripeness, will recommend your fruit to your customers. If you intend selling through a market agent, flavor will count for nothing; but rich color and soundness of condition are everything towards securing the highest price. All fruit should be grown as large and highly colored as possible, gathered and packed before it becomes soft and overripe. When gathering fruit, never gather when there is a heavy dew or just after a rain. They should be gathered dry, and be kept dry.—Rural World.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

How It Affects the Growth of Various Kinds of Vegetables.

In consequence of the success which has attended the experimental culture of flowers and vegetables by electricity in America, some of the London horticulturists, who desire to be first at Covert garden with their early salads—a branch of industry which is exceedingly profitable—propose to install the electric light in their forcing houses. In the states the electric culture of plants for commercial purposes has now become a recognized industry. This fact is mainly owing to the careful compilation of data which has been made by Prof. L. H. Bailey, of Cornell university. Prof. Bailey shows that the effect of the light is marked even at a distance of 100 feet; that the electric light does not determine the periodicity of growth; that increase under the light occurs only during the first days; that growth takes place in daylight as well as in darkness. His experiments are thus summarized: The influence of the electric arc light upon greenhouse plants is greatly modified by the use of a clear glass globe, or the interposition of a glass roof. Plants which are much injured by a naked light may be benefited by a protected light. The light can be suspended even above the house with good effect. As a rule, plants are earlier under the electric light than when grown in ordinary conditions. Lettuce is greatly forced and improved by the electric light. An average of five hours of light per night hastened maturity from a week to ten days, at the distance of from ten to twelve feet. Even at 40 feet in only diffused light, the effect was striking. The light appeared to injure young, newly transplanted plants. Radishes were also benefited by the light, but not much. To do them any good the light had to be hung outside the house. If placed inside, whether naked or protected by a globe it injured the radishes. Beet and spinach were apparently somewhat benefited by the light. Cauliflowers grew taller and made fewer and smaller heads and violets and daisies bloomed earlier in the lighthouse. This corroborates results obtained with other flowers in earlier experiments. The electric light does not appear to determine or modify the hours of growth of lettuce and some other plants which have been studied in this particular. Plants which are benefited simply grow more rapidly during the customary periods. These experiments have been extended over six years and the conclusions reached are worthy of careful attention as based on independent scientific investigation.

TREES BLOWN OVER.

Description of a Method by Which They Can Be Saved.

Many orchard trees have been blown over recently by high winds. Where the roots on one side are still intact, such trees can be easily saved. L. B. Rice, of St. Clair county, Mich., describes his method as follows:

Dig a large hole on the side on which the roots are broken, and some three or four feet deep. Extend this excavation under the body of the tree, so that when it is raised up it will settle about four inches lower than what it stood before. (See cut.) Then trim the tree thoroughly, not by cutting off large limbs, but reduce the leaf surface by cutting away small limbs and twigs, and by taking off the ends of the longer limbs. Then raise it into its place and set a fence post in the ground at an angle so that the tree will rest against the top of it; then fill in under the roots with sods and rich earth mixed with manure, so as to encourage strong root growth. In a few years your trees will be as good as before. Of course, this only applies to trees that have roots enough left intact to keep the tree from withering.—Ohio Farmer.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

The land for the sugar beet should be plowed in the fall, and after plowing, unless the land is very rich, apply plenty of well-rotted manure.

The potato blight is on the increase. Bordeaux mixture for blight and paris green for bugs will have to be kept in stock by the potato grower.

It is not much trouble or expense to construct a hothouse for forcing early vegetables or growing vegetables in winter. The farmer can do this.

The apple grower who does not regard the apple as he would any other crop, and furnish the trees with food, as he does other crops, will not succeed.

If the farmer would go at the work of producing early vegetables, he could laugh at the low prices for grain, if they should continue. Early vegetables always pay.

If fruit trees grow too rapidly they will not bear well. The force goes into the wood. When young trees grow too rapidly, it is a good plan to put the orchard in grass. This will check the growth.

If house plants become frozen, darken the room and sprinkle with water from the well, with a few drops of spirits of camphor in it. Keep the temperature at 45 degrees for 24 hours. —Western Plowman.

The Ideal Panacea.

James L. Francis, Alderman, Chicago, says: I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as an ideal panacea for coughs, colds and lung complaints, having used it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physician's prescriptions or other preparations.

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: I have been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church for 50 years or more, and have never found anything so beneficial, or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discover Try this ideal cough remedy now. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's drug store. 6

A Valuable Prescription.

Editor Morrison, of Worthington, Ind., Sun, writes: You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bitters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for constipation and sick headache, and as a general system tonic it has no equal. Mrs. Annie Stehle, 2025 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, was all run down, could not eat nor digest food, had a backache which never left her and felt tired and weary, but six bottles of Electric Bitters restored her health and renewed her strength. Prices 50c and $1. Get a bottle at Baker & Hall's drug store. 6

Does economy bore you? It ought not to, always. Take the matter of washing with Pearline, for instance. That is a pleasant economy. There's your work made light and short for you; and while you're doing it, in this easy, pleasant way you can be thinking of the acutal money that you're saving by not rubbing things to ruin as in the old way. That ought to be pleasant to think of whether you're doing the work yourself, or having it done. Millions use Pearline.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 2nd day of November in the year one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-six.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate

In the matter of the estate of Addison Hardenburg deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Alice B. Hardenburg, Administratrix, upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of Administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and that she is now ready to close said estate and to render her final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to this statute in such case made and provided that she may be discharged and her bond cancelled, and for such other order and decree as this court shall deem proper.

It is ordered That Monday, the 30th day of November, 1896 at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

The trolly cars will be running now in a few days on the motor line between the Twin Cities, but the contractors couldn't make the $500 bonus by getting their work done November 1. Ann Arbor Courier.

Careless sportsmen sent a load of shot in the direction of Chas. W. Flowers, of Adrian township, while in the woods yesterday on the land of Anthony Poucher, one of which penetrated one finger, requiring the attention of Dr. A. M. Stevenson. Such carelessness should be punished.—Adrian Telegram.

One of the pleasurable results of the election is the defeat of Altgeld, for governor of Illinois. If ever there was a mistake in politics it was when this man was brought forward into public life, and there are no regrets now that he has been relegated to private life from which he should never be allowed to emerge.—Blissfield Advance. The editor of the Advance evidently knows Mr. Altgeld, leastwise his opinion is all right.

By a skillfully contrived apparatus, at the university, the professors are enabled to observe the pulsations of a man's heart and watch the play of the bones while the body is in motion, the spectacle of a live skeleton, executing a double shuffle, and keeping step to the brisk measure of "The Devil's Dream," is something never before witnessed on earth, though it is said to be the regular thing in another place.—Adrian Press.

Black diphtheria is raging in Wright township, Hillsdale county, about 10 miles southwest of Hudson. Homer Treat, the 16-year-old son of Horace Treat, died Sunday, and was buried quietly Monday. Lena Treat, age 20, a daughter of Horace, and brother of the deceased, is lying at the point of death. Two other persons, one a child, of Dr. Bates, have succumbed to the terrible disease.—Hudson Gazette.

News has been received here of the death of Frank Galloway, a former Adboy and printer. While serving as a government detective in New Mexico, he was accidentally shot by a brother officer, who was on guard duty. Mr. Galloway was one of the organizers of Adrian Typographical union, and was also prominent in the Knights of Labor. He left the Times office early in the eighties, to take a position in the K. of L executive offices, in Philadelphia, during the Powderly regime. He was married, a capable craftsman, and a man of considerable general information.—Adrian Times.

Within 15 minutes after the polls closed Tuesday afternoon, the verdict of Hudson's 700 voters was known in every city in the United States. Dispatch s were hurried to Detroit and there it was given to the Associated Press and sent broadcast over the land. Each dispatch the words contained "the election was held on the Abbott voting machine" and the effect that it had by way of advertisement can easily be imagined. Within forty minutes after the polls closed the Detroit Journal was out on the streets of Hudson, and within 30 minutes the result has thrown from the stereopticons before the awaiting and anxious multitudes in Chicago. The first dispatch received by McKinley at Canton was the one giving the result in Hudson. It was a magnificent advertisement for the machine.—Hudson Gazette.

The officers said that last night's crowd was one of the best natured and most peaceable of any they have ever seen. There seemed to be no drunks whatever and no inclination to resent injuries by pugilistic exhibitions. In fact the entire campaign has been free from such features considering the intense interest. Of course there were a few who found it necessary to exhibit foot ball tactics by flying wedges and dashes round the end, but no harm was done aside from ruffling the tempers of a few timid people.—Adrian Telegram. Getting tamed down. The above words about the republican ratification meeting in Adrian sounds peculiar. One week before election the TELEGRAM would have said, "The meeting of republicans last evening was a disgrace to any civilized community. Men, women and children, all drunk. Only sober ones were silver men coerced into joining the parade."

The first evidence of returning business confidence, the result of the election, was a deposit of $500 in gold, Wednesday morning, in the First National Bank of this city.—Ypsilantian.

Britton now feels as big as a boy with his first breeches. It has been incorporated with a population of 383. In order to be allowed the use of the village, after the choice of officers, a stranger or any outsider will be obliged to remove his hat, stand at a respectful distance from the president and humbly petition as follows: "Please, sir, do I have your permission to stay in the town all night?"—Adrian Press

A lad 12 years of age was killed at Ann Arbor, last week, while jumping upon a moving train. In his company was Jimmie Blytheman who of course escaped. Loaded down with crimes and escapades of all sorts, that boy Blytheman, bears a charmed life and slips safely through, while misfortune, the prison and death await others at the threshold. 'Tis a strange world!—Adrian Press.

The fact of the death of John Gahagan, in Missouri, son of James Gahagan, of Hudson township, are of a nature to excite deep sympathy and pity. Mr. Gahagan was on his way to work, when he was shot down by a party of men who were in pursuit of a murderer and mistook him for their man. The place of the tragedy was a lone, unfrequented one. Too late, the excited mob discovered on reaching the wounded man that he was not the object of their search. The burial had taken place before the arrival of the sorrowing father, who caused the disinterment of the body and its burial in another place.—Adrian Press.

J. H. Pomeroy has arrived at Hilo, Honolulu, and writes home very entertainingly of his voyage, which lasted twenty-two days, as he went in a sailing vessel and was becalmed. The passage sometimes takes only eleven days. The brig had a narrow escape from running into a water spout. The passengers had the novelty of a freshly caught dolphin for breakfast, and saw a number of whales, flying-fish and porpoises.—Ypsilantian.

McKINLEY'S CABINET,

The Selection Already Made.

Since the election of Major McKinley to the presidency, the all-absorbing question has been in regard to his Cabinet. The most important step in the official life of a new president is to make a wise choice for his Cabinet, and if he should make a mistake in this, his administration would be a failure from the beginning. Having the welfare of this great nation with its seventy millions of people to look after, his duties are many and his work is surely arduous enough, even with the most competent assistance he can get. In the campaign just ended, the opinions and views of these seventy millions of people have been sharply arrayed against each other on questions of national import, making it all the harder for Mr. McKinley to administer the affairs of the government for the next four years with satisfaction to the masses. Our president-elect, realizing the great importance of choosing his Cabinet, has ignored the politicians and national leaders and turned to his wife for advice. In this he showed his wisdom, for she at once settled the troublesome question by declaring that the proper Cabinet for them to have for the next four years was the STAND-ARD CABINET, which clearly shows that a woman's judgment on important subjects is often superior to a man's, although he be a president.

The two most critical times in a woman's life are the times which make she girl a woman, and the woman a mother. At these times Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is of incalculable value. It strengthens and invigorates the organs distinctly feminine, promotes regularity of the functions, allays irritation and inflammation, checks unnatural and exhausting drains, and puts the whole delicate organism into perfect condition. Almost all the ills of womankind are traceable to some form of what is known as "female complaint." There are not three cases in a hundred of woman's peculiar diseases that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will not cure.

Annual Meeting in St. Louis of the National W. C. T. U.

Miss Frances Willard Reelected President—All Other Officers Retained—Daily Proceedings of the Gathering.

St. Louis, Nov. 15.—The pulpits of 63 churches in this city were occupied yesterday by delegates to the W. C. T. U. convention. In the afternoon a mass meeting was held to consider the Armenian massacres, and a message was sent to President Cleveland, urging him to cooperate in ending the reign of bloodshed. Miss Willard in her address said:

"An ancient nation is being slowly slaughtered at the foot of Mount Ararat. Fifty thousand victims stretched out under God's sky in the slow circle of a year: women, pure, devout and comely, suffering two deaths—a living and a dying death; little children poised on the bayonets of Moslem soldiers; villages burned, and starvation the common lot. On the other hand, Christian Europe, with 7,000,000 soldiers, who take their rations and their sacrament regularly; statesmen who kneel on velvet cushions in beautiful cathedrals and pray, 'We beseech Thee to hear us, God our Lord;' diplomats who can shape the whisper of a throne and shade the learning of an ultimatum; but neither statesman, diplomat nor soldier has wit, wisdom nor will to save a single life, shelter a single tortured babe or supply a single loaf of bread to the starving Christians on the Armenian hillsides.

"'Vested interests' are against it, 'the balance of power' does not permit it. The will of the sultan is the only will in the empire of Turkey, and all the wills of all the Christian nations cannot move it one hair. The Turk is a savage, while the statesmen are over-civilized, he is a tyrant, while they are craven cowards. Meanwhile a star moves toward the east; it caught its light from the star of Bethlehem. One Clara Barton, a woman well-nigh 70 years of age, took her life in her hands and moved forward to the rescue. She went to bind up wounds, to give out bread, to light the fires on the blackened hearthstones, to put hope into broken hearts. She is a greater power to-day for God and brotherhood than all the statesmen, diplomatists and soldiers. The world's eyes followed her with love; they could not see her plainly for tears. Did our Heavenly Father wish to put before humanity an object lesson on the broadest scale of the futility of force and the omnipotence of love?"

Resolutions Adopted.

St. Louis, Nov. 17.—At the meeting yesterday of the W. C. T. U. the following resolutions were adopted:

Total abstinence for the individual; prohibition for the state and nation by law and by party; equal standard of purity for men and women; equal wages for equal work without regard to sex; ballot with educational test for both sexes; opposition to lynching; arbitration between nations, education along temperance lines, and cultivation of public sentiment; the Holy Bible as our standard of faith, and the recognition of the Sabbath as a day of rest; Christian citizenship and sympathy with the Armenians. It was recommended that each member of the Woman's Christian temperance union who appreciated the holy significance of God, home and native land, make an Armenian offer in some form on Christmas day.

Old Officers Reelected.

St. Louis, Nov. 18.—The National Woman's Christian Temperance union at Tuesday's session reelected the old board of officers without opposition, as follows:

President—Frances E. Willard, Illinois.
Vice President at Large—Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, Maine.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson, Massachusetts.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, Missouri.
Treasurer—Mrs. Helen M. Barker, Illinois.

Resolution on "Women's Bible."

The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that while we recognize the right of women to make commentaries on the Bible, as men have done from the beginning until now, we regret the name 'Women's Bible' to any volume and we further deplore the misapprehension of the press, secular and religious, in styling this commentary on those parts of the Bible only relating to woman as a 'new version of the Scriptures.'

"We further disclaim any connection whatever of our society or of our national president with this work."

A resolution from the Boston Temperance union was presented which stated that it had been learned that the house in Washington, D. C., in which President Lincoln died was about to be converted into a saloon, and therefore it was asked that congress be petitioned to prevent such occupation. The resolution was adopted.

It was resolved to send petitions to both houses of congress praying for a bill to forbid Sunday traffic in the District of Columbia and a bill to raise the age of protection for girls to 18 in the District of Columbia and the territories. The passage of a bill for the appointment of a non-partisan commission to investigate the problems of labor and capital and report some solution, the commission to consist of five farmers, five laborers, five manufacturers and five representatives of business and professions, will be asked for. Resolutions favoring the Keeley league and other similar cures were adopted.

The evening session was wholly given over to the presidents of the union in those states where the memberships had been increased 500 or more during the past year. Mrs. Clara Hoffman, state president of Missouri, presided.

Standard Silver Dollars.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The records of the treasury department show that from February 1, 1896, to November 1, there were coined at the mints of the United States 16,262,922 standard silver dollars. The seigniorage upon this amount was $3,051,430.

Forman Appointed.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The president Monday appointed W. S. Forman, of Illinois, commissioner of internal revenue, vice Joseph H. Miller, resigned.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

Synopsis of the Immigration Commissioner's Statement.

During the Last Fiscal Year 340,468 Foreigners Were Landed—Report of the Commission of Navigation for 1896.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The commissioner of immigration has made his annual report. A synopsis follows:

During the last fiscal year the arrivals of immigrants in this country aggregated 343,267, of whom 340,468 were landed and 2,799 were debarred and deported at the expense of the various steamship lines by which they came. Of those deported 776 were found to be under contract to perform labor in the United States made prior to their arrival, and 2,023 were returned as belonging to other prohibited classes. In addition to the number debarred there were 238 who became public charges within a year after their arrival, and hence were returned to the countries whence they came. The commissioner general states that he knows of no immigrant landed in this country during the last year who is now a burden upon any public or private institution.

With some exceptions, the report says, the physical characteristics of the year's immigration were those of a hardy, sound, laboring class, accustomed and apparently well able to earn a livelihood wherever capable and industrious labor can secure employment. As to occupations, it was composed largely of the classes designated as skilled and unskilled laborers, with some professionals. The amount of money brought into the country by immigrants was at least $4,917,318, and probably was largely in excess of these figures.

The report shows that the total number of immigrants over 14 years of age that arrived during the year 5,066 could not write, and 78,130 could neither read nor write, which is 25.63 per cent. of the whole number. Of those who could neither read nor write 31,374 came from Italy, 12,816 from Russia proper, 12,154 from Hungary, 6,197 from Bohemia and Moravia, 5,231 from other parts of Austria-Hungary, 2,474 from Ireland, 1,566 from Arabia and Syria and 1,589 from Portugal. The report shows that of the whole number of arrivals 212,466 were males and 130,801 females.

Commission of Navigation.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The report of the commission of navigation for 1896, after referring to the necessity for the passage of a free ship bill, states that our maritime rank of the Pacific is now threatened by a new rival. Japan, under liberal and progressive laws, has just established a trans-Pacific steamship line to the United States, and, with the cooperation of American capital, is preparing to extend rapidly this service.

In 1880 the tonnage of American vessels entering the United States from the ports of Asia and Oceanica was 283,395 tons, and of foreign vessels, 442,251 tons. In 1895 the American tonnage entering was 308,481, the foreign tonnage, 657,206. The large and profitable carrying trade, once conducted between Asiatic and European ports by American vessels, which seldom entered American ports, has almost entirely passed away.

Our total imports for 1895 were valued at $731,969,965, of which $590,539,362 were brought in foreign vessels.

Cost of the Army.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The cost of the army during the last year was $16,074,488, an increase of $755,527 over the previous year, according to the report of Paymaster General Stanton.

Coast Defenses.

Washington, Nov. 18. — The annual report of the board of ordnance fortifications, composed of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Col. Royal T. Frank, First artillery; Col. Peter C. Hains, corps of engineers; Maj. F. H. Phipps, ordnance department; Capt. J. C. Ayres, and ex-Representative H. H. Outhwaite, was made public Tuesday. It says:

"Under the increased appropriation of the present fiscal year the work of placing our harbors in a proper state of defense is making good progress, and if only the same sums are appropriated annually for a few years, our principal ports will present a formidable front to an attacking fleet. It is hoped, however, that even more liberal appropriations will be made in order that we may sooner be ready for an emergency that may arise at any time. In view of the present serious aspect of European politics, it is only common prudence for this nation to be on its guard, for should a conflict arise we are liable to be embroiled with some power whose navy, in the present defenseless condition of our coasts, might destroy or exact enormous ransoms from our chief cities.

"A war, if it come at all, will come with no warning and no time for preparation. China, with undefended ports and an inadequate navy, was defeated in a few months. In the last war between the great military powers of Germany and France, the surrender at Sedan occurred only 40 days after the declaration of war.

"The wars of nations occur in cycles of varying length, but seldom does a generation pass without a great conflict. Already more than 30 years have elapsed since our last great war and another may soon, if the past be a guide to the future, terminate one of the longest intervals of peace we have ever enjoyed.

"Our engineer department is ready with the most modern plans for fortifications and our ordnance department is prepared with designs for guns and carriages that are equal to any in the world. A congress will but increase the appropriations to the capacity of those departments for useful and economical work, it will not be long before our coasts are secure against the attack of foreign powers. An effective preparation for war is the best safeguard against war."

A Jealous Printer's Deed.

Glenwood Springs, Col., Nov. 16.—James B. Spurrier, a printer, on Sunday shot and probably fatally wounded Miss Nina Cornell and slightly wounded James E. Wilson, her escort, and then sent a bullet through his own heart. Jealousy was the cause.

Green Bay, Wis., Nov. 18.—A few days ago August Pohl, chief witness against Swanson, accused of the Leshake murder in the town of How, Oconto county, hanged himself. Tuesday three more men in the town whose names are not learned, are reported as having hanged themselves through fear of being drawn into the case.

WRITES A LETTER.

President Cleveland Says Constant Vigilance Is Necessary.

The Document Is Read at the One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth Annual Banquet of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

New York, Nov. 18.—The one hundred and twenty-eighth annual banquet of the New York chamber of commerce was held Tuesday afternoon at Delmonico's, and among the 376 guests were the most prominent professional and commercial men of the country as well as distinguished statesmen and politicians. The banquet-room was decorated with several hundred American flags and the tables were ornamented with flowers. Alexander E. Orr, president of the chamber of commerce, presided.

When coffee and cigars were served, President Orr arose and was heartily cheered and applauded. When the enthusiasm had subsided, Mr. Orr welcomed the guests.

At the conclusion of his address President Orr read the following:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, Nov. 16, 1896.—Alexander E. Orr, President, etc. My Dear Sir: The pleasure which a participation in the banquets of the chamber of commerce has afforded me in the past and the kindly feeling and broad spirit of enterprise which always pervaded those occasions, causes me to regret most sincerely that I cannot join the goodly company that will gather around the chamber's hospitable board.

"Recent events may well cause those who represent business interests to rejoice in their escape from threatened peril. But while they have abundant reason for rejoicing and can view with the greatest satisfaction the support they have given 'sound money' in the contest lately waged against it, I earnestly hope that in this time of congratulation it will be remembered that constant vigilance and continued effort are required to even maintain political condition, but that absolute safety will only be secured when our financial system is protected by affirmative and thorough reforms. When our business men are habitually alert and watchful, and when they are moreover fully aroused to the importance of such legislative action concerning our finances as business methods approve, and the welfare of the entire country requires, much good may be confidently anticipated, not only in the accomplishment of practical results, but in the removal of hurtful prejudices through an assurance to the people that business and patriotism are becoming more and more united.

Yours very truly,

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

Addresses were delivered by Postmaster-General Wilson, Gov. Griggs, of New Jersey; Bourke Cockran, Gen. Miles, Senator Hawley, Gen. Horace Porter, Mayor Strong and others. Each urged patriotic support of the president-elect.

WILL NOT BE DEPOSED.

Rumors of Punishment of Archbishop Ireland False.

Rome, Nov. 16.—It is semiofficially stated at the vatican that the reports circulated in the United States of the intention of the pope to remove Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, are "pure inventions." Archbishop Ireland has simply been advised from an authorized quarter to moderate his attitude, avoid irritating discussions and conform his conduct to the instructions of the holy see, especially as regards education, social questions and the favor to be accorded to religious bodies.

Denounces It as a Fabrication.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Senor Dupuy de Lome says the alleged interview published in the New York World Tuesday, in which he is made to say that a war between the United States and Spain is possible, and that it would be terrible in its effects, and no one could predict its end, is a fabrication. He has not spoken to a World correspondent for days, and has never made any such statement to any other person. On the contrary, he asserts that the relations of Spain with the United States and his own relations with his home government were never more amicable than now.

No Negroes Allowed There.

Paducah, Ky., Nov. 18.—When a few dozen men founded the town of Calvert City, about 16 miles below here, they swore that no negro should ever live in the town or vicinity. Several foolhardy blacks tried it, but they died before daylight. Monday night a mob of the lawless whites of the Calvert City neighborhood, in keeping with their policy, peppered nine negroes with buckshot because they dared to work in that section.

Knights of Labor.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 18.—The general assembly, K. of L., at its session on Tuesday reelected J. R. Sovereign general master workman. General Secretary-Treasurer Hayes was reelected without opposition. To the next highest office, that of general worthy foreman, Thomas Maguire, of Amsterdam, N. Y., was chosen. The next annual meeting will be in Louisville, Ky.

Long Strike Ended.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—The strike of the employes of the Tudor iron works, which has been in progress for two years, was declared off Saturday, the proprietors having acceded to the demand for increased wages. This will place 800 men at work. The increase of orders for structural iron and the general revival of business brought about the end of the strike.

Why Attempt to Cure

catarrh by the use of so-called blood remedies? That catarrh is not caused by blood troubles is self-evident when you reflect that attacks are always due to sudden climatic changes or exposure, and occur most frequently during the winter and spring, though the blood is as pure then as in summer or fall. A remedy which quickly relieves and cures the catarrhal attacks has been found in Ely's Cream Balm.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to know that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

ATTEMPT TO KILL A FAMILY.

Frank Konczal's House, Near Detroit Wrecked with Dynamite.

Detroit, Nov. 16.—The house of Frank Konczal, in the township of Springwells, four miles from Detroit, was wrecked late Saturday night by the explosion of a dynamite bomb, which is supposed to have been put there with an idea of killing the whole family. Konczal, aged 42 years, is in Emergency hospital, with more than a hundred wounds, and likely to die; Robert Ewers, aged 22 years, is almost sure to [illegible] with his eyes and be a cripple for life, if he recovers, which is doubtful; and Josie Konczal is painfully hurt. Several other members of the household were cut and bruised. Konczal and his family had retired but a short time before, leaving Josie and Ewers courting in the sitting-room. Just before the explosion Konczal heard the footfalls of a man, first in the front and then around the house. He thought he recognized the gait of his neighbor and enemy, Rogolski, who, it is alleged, because of an ancient feud and jealousy of Ewers, had threatened to kill the family. Sheriff Collins' officers began searching for Rogolski, and found him at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning in bed with his clothes on. He tells various stories of his whereabouts. His little daughter and son both contradict him. He is locked up in the county jail.

PANTLIND DEAD.

Well-Known Grand Rapids Hotel Man Passes Away.

Grand Rapids, Nov. 13.—A. V. Pantlind, one of the oldest and best-known citizens in the city, died Thursday morning. He was about 76 years old, and one of the best-known men in western Michigan. He kept hotels in Paw Paw, Jackson, Niles and Saginaw and ran the eating houses on the Michigan Central railroad in early days. He has kept the Morton house for many years. About three years ago he was stricken with paralysis and has been failing rapidly every since.

Grand Rapids Team Sold.

Grand Rapids, Nov. 18.—Manager George Ellis, of the Grand Rapids Baseball club, has sold his franchise in the Western league to Robert Leadley, of Detroit, and Robert J. Glenalvin, the well-known Western League player, once captain of the Grand Rapids team and formerly of the Chicago league nine. The price is not given out. The only condition is that the team shall be kept here. Glenalvin will be manager and captain and will immediately sign as good a team as procurable. Ellis will devote his attention to the Atlantic league team.

Will Rebuild at Holland.

Holland, Nov. 16.—The citizens have raised $6,000 to aid in rebuilding the factory of Hon. George P. Hummer, the silver candidate for congress, which was burned a few weeks ago, entailing a loss of $150,000. Mr. Hummer had offers from Kankakee, Ill., and from Grand Rapids, but the action of the citizens means that the factory will not remove to another city. He will employ 500 men.

Gold Deposits at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Nov. 16.—Since the presidential election money has been flowing into the local banks at the rate of $20,000 a day. The reports given out by four of them Saturday show the following increase in deposits since November 3: Old National, $140,000; Fourth National, $40,000; Kent County savings, $20,685; People's savings, $21,027.

Makes the Saloonmen Pay.

Detroit, Nov. 17.—Mrs. White is said to have collected over $300 from the saloonkeepers of this town within the last month. The state law makes saloonkeepers liable for selling liquor to a husband when forbidden to do so by his wife. One man gave her five dollars cash and ten cords of wood in liquidation of the claim for $50 made by Mrs. White.

Falls Heir to Land and Money.

Niles, Nov. 18.—R. C. Sweet, a sewing machine agent, left his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., several years ago and started out in the world. About three months ago his father died, and on Monday Mr. Sweet received a letter stating that $47,000 in money and a large amount of real estate in Brooklyn had been left to him and his three brothers.

Sawed Entirely in Two.

Nestoria, Nov. 17.—A Swede millwright named Nels Sundean from Utica, N. Y., employed by the Sturgeon River Lumber company at Chassel, while watching the sawyers skid a log upon a log-carriage, fell in a faint across the log. Before it could be stopped he was carried to the saw and his body was cut in two.

Big Output of Lumber.

Menominee, Nov. 13.—The total output of the Menominee river mills for the season is 389,600,000 feet of lumber. Of this amount the Menominee mills cut 218,000,000 and the Marinette mills 171,000,000. There is a noticeable improvement in both lake and rail shipments.

Given a Ten-Year Term.

Menominee, Nov. 14. — Frank Butnick, who pleaded guilty to the charge of setting fire to and destroying the barn and contents of Barney Brunsted, in Meyer township, was sentenced by Judge Stone in the circuit court to ten years in the Marquette prison.

Big Fire Under Control.

Houghton, Nov. 16.—The fire in the coal shed of the Calumet and Hecla smelting works at South Lake Linden, is under control, and nearly extinguished. A steam fire engine and several fire pumps have been kept running for four days.

To Be Married December 9.

Grand Rapids, Nov. 16.—A Berlin dispatch says: The marriage of Miss Lucy Uhl, daughter of Hon. Edward F. Uhl, United States ambassador to Germany, to Prof. Guy Thompson, of Yale university, has been fixed to take place in Berlin on December 9.

Woman's Home Missionary Society.

Ionia, Nov. 14.—The 12th annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary society of the Michigan conference of the M. E. church closed here Friday after a three days' session. Forty visiting delegates were present. Mrs. A. A. Knappen, of Albion, was elected president, and Mrs. J. W. Hollenbeck, of Charlevoix, corresponding secretary. The report of officers showed a membership of 1,338, with 50 auxiliary societies. Just $2,921.75 has been received from all sources. The society pledged itself to contribute [illegible] toward the support of the Aldrich Deaconess home at Grand Rapids.

Victim of Burglars.

Bay City, Nov. 16.—The small grocery store of Paul Kleemann on Fitzhugh street was entered by burglars Saturday night, who blew open the safe and stole $525 in cash and checks amounting to $165. The robbers tied the doors of Kleemann's residence, which is a part of the building, so that Kleemann and his wife, both of whom are past 70 years old, could not escape in case they were aroused by the explosion. Kleemann thought his safe more secure than local banks, but has changed his mind.

Federation of Labor.

Lansing, Nov. 14.—The Michigan Federation of Labor will hold its annual convention at Representative hall in this city on December 1. President L. E. Tossy states that it will be the largest and most important convention the federation has ever held. The chief work will be the mapping out of desirable measures to be urged upon the state legislature for adoption.

Found a Paying Vein of Coal.

Jackson, Nov. 15.—C. E. Bennett and Henry Hayden some time ago received word that there was a vein of coal under the lots of the defunct George T. Smith plant on West Ganson street. They prospected, found the coal and paid $6,000 for the lots. Now three shafts are down, and a three-foot vein of the finest coal ever mined about the city has been found.

Driven to the Wall.

Menominee, Nov. 13.—The extensive hardware establishment of Dunning Bros. & Co., probably the largest concern of the kind in northern Michigan, was closed Thursday on a writ of execution issued at the instance of local indorsers in the sum of $9,000. It is thought the assets will more than balance the amount of all liabilities.

The Canvass Goes On.

health. They usually go together.

An observing man learns that a woman who is physically weak and nervous is not capable, is likely to be ill-natured [illegible] unfitted to be a mother.

These troubles prevail almost universally among women largely because of overwork, carelessness and neglect. There is no need of suffering from them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for the weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism.

It cures them radically and permanently. It heals, strengthens and purifies. It is the only scientific remedy devised for the special purpose by an educated, skilled physician. It is the only medicine that makes motherhood easy and absolutely safe.

Miss Lauretta McNees, of Ramsdell, Washoe Co., Nev., writes: "I have not been taking the 'Prescription' and 'Pellets' any more (at present). Last summer I had pain at all and worked every day without inconvenience whatever. It was the first time I never had pain during that period. I cannot say too much for your medicines. I took the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets.' I know of a lady who was sick and took your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and was not sick like she was with her other children. This was her second baby. She says it is the grand medicine. So do I."

Dr. Pierce has had a lifetime experience in this particular field. He has written an illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," containing 1,008 pages and over 300 chapters devoted to woman's peculiarities and to her physiology. A paper-bound copy will be sent entirely free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. For a cloth-bound copy send 31 stamps.

Marvelous Results

From a letter written by Mrs. Sarah Alderman, of Diamondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as its results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Methodist Church at Rives Jubction, Mrs. Alderman was brought down with Pneumonia following La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last for hours with only a little interruption and it seemed as though she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery. It was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Ah! there! Lenardson Bros., Britton, have received those sample shoes you were enquiring for. Get there Eli!

The social Saturday evening for the benefit of the band boys, was not as well attended as it should have been. The boys have been ready and have responded cheerfully with their best efforts to aid any and all entertainments, and certainly deserved a handsome benefit. The receipts, $4.00, were beggarly.

James Haight & Co. have just received a fine line of Cook Stoves and Ranges. They are fine.

Saturday evening about 9 o'clock, a shanty two and a half miles east of here, at the coal kilns on Eb. Price's place, called McGinty, was burned to the ground and its occupant, Samuel Nixon, aged 81 years, burned to a crisp. Two box cars on the C. J. & M. track near by, were also burned. Henry Nixon, the old man's son who lived in another shanty near by, was away from home at the time, but his wife and her brother, Henry Prentiss, were at home, but claim they knew nothing of the fire or the old man until the return of Henry about eleven p. m. Sunday morning Justice George Oliver was notified, summoned a jury, and repaired to the ruins. After hearing the testimony, a verdict of accidental death by burning of the shanty from a defective stove, was rendered. The bones were finally gathered up, put in a box and burried at Azalia. Many think it very strange that persons could be so near and not waken.

Surprise Heaters are something new. No ashes scattering around—do not need taking up but once a month. Haight & Co., at Britton, have them.

At the band boys' box social Saturday evening, Will Britton demonstrated, to the satisfaction of all, his capacity for choice provision. He bought three boxes and, of corrse, as many ladies went through the form of eating, though several who were present declare that Will got the lion's share in each case. Will has a weakness for box socials.

Sunday evening Bert Hendershot, while out driving with Miss Eno, attempted to commit suicide by taking a poisonous drug. It seem by what can be learned that they had been keeping comany for some time and because the young lady didn't think she cared to accept his offer of marriage, he thought it best to end his disappointment by taking his life and thereby cause a sensation and arouse sympathy.

First to come have their pick from those sample shoes at Lenardson Bros., Britton.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our thanks to the neighbors and friends, who so kindly assisted us during the sickness and death of our husband and father.

MACON.

Richard Gillespie finds so many farms rather a heavy tax to look after, and now offers the Bert Morley farm, in South Macon, for sale. Buyers are scarce though.

Corn husking and drawing stalks was the chief occupation of several farmers in this vicinity last Sunday, and yet the churches keep right on taking up collections to teach the heathen in India to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

The ladies' aid society of the D. R. church will meet at the home of Mrs. Calvin Davenport on Wednesday, Nov. 25th. At 2 o'clock a ten cent dinner, consisting of chicken pie, etc. A cordial invitation is extended to both ladies and gentlemen.

Probably no man living knows his own business better than the foreman of the Herald. Nevertheless he is called down by the architect of this column for sandwiching penny-a-line Baitton "ads" with gilt edged security. Macon news. If the "stuff" had related to Macon merchants all very well, but no more Britton "ads" in our department, thank you. It is neither burliness nor pleasure—not even recreation.

Over 1,000 pair sample shoes at Lenardson Bros. Britton, at less than wholesale prices. Do you see?

If the big loads of goods which mail-carrier Sam Sarvey brings to our merchants almost daily, are any sign, business is reviving in our midst. Mr. Sarvey is a very faithful employee of the government, and if he could combine his business of mail carrying with a stage line, using a covered coach and charging five cents a ride either to or from Macon and Tecumseh, he would greatly increase his business. In order to do this the Macon mail would have to be made up earlier in the day to give people more time in the village to do their shopping, but it would seem that this part of the enterprise could be satisfactorily arranged. The convenience of such a means of daily travel between the two places, would be inestimable and our citizens could well afford to "chip in" and buy such a coach, reserving it, of course, in case the mail should change hands. There are scores of people here who have no way of going to Tecumseh unless they "catch a ride." They could afford to pay street car fare and that is all. It is moved that Joe Sage, Mart Sickley, Dr. Morden and Sam Hatch be appointed a committee to take up a collection and buy that coach. The "ayes" have it. If any of these gentlemen don't speak to the other since election, he is authorized by the chair to appoint a "sub."

A good many Macon people who hold season tickets to the Tecumseh lecture course would like more lectures and fewer musical entertainments. Classical music requires a cultivated ear to appreciate it, and of these but very few live in our midst. The management will do well to accept the friendly hint that George R. Wendling would fill the opera house for them from pit to dome, while the Boston Mandolin Club stands a chance of playing to empty seats. By all means let's have a change next year.

Lenardson Bros., Britton, received those samples shoes. Come and see them.

The fire that destroyed the home of old Mrs. Kehoe last Saturday evening, was seen almost to the "Corners" and several men hurried to the scene, supposing the building to be much nearer than it was. They got there in time to see the embers. Mrs. Kehoe is 86 years old and has clung to this old home with a tenacity that was truly pathetic, the associations of early years being dearer than anything her children, now in their prosperous years, could bestow. That the old house might have been spared to her what little time she yet had to live, is the wish of all her friends.

Probably the richest young lady in the town of Macon is Miss Fern DePuy, who will come into possession next year of the handsome property left her by her grandmother. Miss DePuy is a young lady of fine intellectual endowments and is especially desirous of taking a course in Law for her own personal knowledge and advancement. Having been under her father's constant training from childhood, she naturally would imbibe the subjects, either literary or political, with which he is so familiar, and it is but the inevitable consequence of inherited tendencies that the young heiress prefers Blackstone to Heine.

This man has taken three bottles of Lightning Worm Killer, and has passed, he says, over 2 1-2 gallons of worms, and that he will make oath to the same. A score of doctors told him that he could not be cured."

Mr. George Craft, of Annville, Ky., writes: "Lightning Vegetable Liver Pills have given me great benefit in kidney and liver disease of ten years' standing. They act as recommended."

Mr. J. K. Moore, of Weston, W. Va., writes: "Lightning Vegetable Liver Pills used for constipation and piles, have given me great benefit."

Mr. C. C. Garrett, postmaster, Calm, W. Va., writes: "We have been using Lightning Worm Killer for the past six years with perfect satisfaction. It is a sure eradicator of worms, and has greatly benefitted our children."

The Adrian Telegram is in a flurry for fear some of the hard money men will withdraw their patronage on account of the support of the silver forces during the late campaign. The Hudson Gazette seems to be in the same kind of a worry regarding silver men who are withdrawing their patronage on account of the support given by the Gazette to the gold standard forces. Would it not be a good plan for these two establishments to join issue and divide the profits? This would be about the only way in the world to accomplish the useless task of trying to please everybody.

With the exception of the electorial vote of Wyoming, which is still in doubt, the result of the presedential election of November 3rd is about settled. Of the very doubtful states, Kentucky gives her twelve votes to McKinley and one vote to Bryan. Wyoming's votes are given to Bryan as at present he seems to have the most right to them. The totals now are 272 electorial votes for McKinley and 175 for Bayan. Necessary for a choice, 224. The popular vote for McKinley largely exceeds that of any other presidential candidate. Grrnt, however, secured 292 electorial votes and in 92 Cleveland received 277.

There has been much talk about confidence being restored and business booming, but the cold facts are what we are all after. The New York Commercial Bulletin, which is a very conservative paper and has very little to do with parties, has taken the pains to discover from authentic sources the number of manufactories in the United States which were shut down previous to election and have opened up since. Up to Sunday it had information from 389 manufacturing establishments in different parts of the country which had opened, also from 254 which had increased their force of employees and output since election. Following is the summary as taken from that paper:—

Mills running after shut-down—iron and steel, 105; machinery, 7; woodenware and lumber, 28; glasware and pottery, 13; woolen goods, 25; cotton goods, 12; carpets, 13; clothing, 23; boots and shoes, 5; cordage, 2; miscellaneous, 108. Total, 389.

Increase in force or increased output—iron and steel, 79; machinery, 19; woodenware and lumber, 13; glassware and pottery, 13; woolen goods, 18; cotton goods, 9; clothing, 5; carpets, 2; boots and shoes, 3; miscellaneous, 98. Totals, 254.

This statement is not buncombe nor intended for political effect, but is actually true.

Resolutions of Respect.

Since it has pleased the Great Commander to remove from us to his reward John Nelson, formerly of Co. 17th. Mich. Vol. Infantry and a member in good standing of Beer's Post No. 140, who died at his home October 29 1896, services were held at his late home Sunday, November 1st, under the auspices of Beer's Post, G. POOR OLD GEORGETOWN.

A Century Ago It Was a Most Prosperous Little City.

Now It Is Merely an Insignificant Suburb of the National Capital and of No Commercial Importance Whatever.

[Special Washington Letter.]

The poet scarcely guessed all the wisdom he expressed when he wrote the "One-Hoss Shay" and penned the lines:

"Little of all we value here
Wakes on the morn of its hundredth year
Without both looking and feeling queer."

Old things pass away and all things become new, for the progress of the eternal plan of the universe involves in its maximum procedure the principle of decay. Individuals, clans, tribes and whole nations pass away in orderly procession in order that the new may have the room of the old. Every man is the intelligent artificer of a work that is not his own. We do our blasting, mortar-making, stone dressing or spire building, but none of us understands the fullness of the design of the architect who planned the whole.

Ninian Beall, the Scotchman who came across the trackless Atlantic wastes and settled upon the rock of Dumbarton in this new world, founded the city of Georgetown; and the new national capital has grown up and absorbed the old village and corporation of Georgetown, so that it is now called West Washington. But the landmarks of the ancient and honorable municipality have remained untouched, and will so continue as long as they may last. But the government is about to invade one of the most sacred precincts of ancient Georgetown.

The customs port of Georgetown is about to be abolished. There is no longer any necessity for the continuance of the office, but it is a relic of the days when Georgetown had a large place on the map, when her people were prosperous, and when the minds of her business men were filled with visions of the development of a new Liverpool, a city greater than any in the old world. Nobody in those days feared rivalry with New York, Philadelphia, Boston or any other city in the new republic. Cincinnati, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Paul, and the magnificence and wealth of and beyond the great American desert, were all unknown. Just as the Chicago man of to-day talks of nothing but his thriving city, so the ancient inhabitants of Georgetown talked of their growing trade center. But the glory of Georgetown has departed, and her venerable citizens sadly see the decadence.

The steamboats, railroads, telegraph and telephone lines have brought all sections nearer together and all nations closer in trade relations. The procession has passed by Georgetown, and she is no longer a requirement in the business world. It is easier to transact business with New York, Baltimore or Philadelphia than to sail or steam up the Potomac with traffic and passengers.

GEORGETOWN IN EARLY DAYS.

When the revolutionary war began the hills and dales now covered with the residences and public buildings in the national capital were as densely wooded as the hills of Arlington. Georgetown was then an established town and doing a thriving business. But all the land east of Rock creek was occupied by the children of the forest, the noble red men.

Georgetown grew and waxed strong long after the seat of government was located here, and many a statesman lived in the quaint and aristocratic old town, although their daily duties were in the new city. In 1790 the federal government established offices in Georgetown, and that was before the capital had been located. On February 16, 1790, William B. Magruder was appointed postmaster, and on October 1, 1790, James McCubbin Lingan was appointed collector of customs. The descendants of those worthies are as proud of their ancestry as ever Clara Vere de Vere dared to be of hers, and she was "the daughter of a hundred earls." They are good people until this day and there is no record of a black sheep in either family. One of the Magruders is a successful doctor, another a prosperous merchant, and all of the ladies are worthy and winsome. The Lingans are nearly all gone. One of them, McCubbin Lingan, is an excellent newspaper writer. He was here several years as the correspondent of some prominent papers, but went to Michigan to reside.

The office of collector of customs has never been discontinued since the date of its establishment. The office of postmaster has been abolished already, and is merged into the office of the postmaster of Washington. That is to say, it is merely a sub-station of the Washington post office. When this official action was taken there was weeping and wailing in Georgetown. The good people there were always jealous of the growth of Washington, and entertained no patriotic pride in the development of the national capital, because they realized that the growth of Washington would minimize their city. The oldest inhabitants actually shed tears when the post office was merged into the Washington office.

And now the office of collector of customs is to be abolished. The original commission given to Collector Lingan recites the fact that whereas, during the revolutionary war, he had served without salary, he should receive an annual salary of $2000 from the date of his commission. The Coleman museum of Georgetown college shows his gorgeous [illegible] suit and satin waistcoat with real gold buttons, and evidently he was a man of high rank in those days. He was flour inspector as well as collector of customs. In 1792 Collector Lingan and all of the office holders appointed by President Washington, were required to repeat and sign the following religious test oath:

"I, ——, do declare that I believe that there is no transubstantiation in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper or in the elements of bread and wine, at or after the consecration thereof by any person whatsoever."

So it appears that there were extremists on religion in those days as well as in our times, and religious declaration was necessary to the proper performance of public duty. Nobody to-day seems to know whether George Washington made this form of oath a pre-requisite to office holding, or whether it was required by congressional enactment. But the original oath is on file here in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia.

The W. H. M. S. of the M. E. church will hold its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. James McKinney on Wednesday November 25th. Meeting will begin promptly at 2:30.

Last Friday afternoon the C. E. society of the Presbyterian church gave a pleasant reception to the older members of the church. Nearly one hundred invitations were issued and a large number responded. Carriages were sent for those having no conveyance and unable to walk. The church parlors were made very attractive and cozy. Easy chairs and rockers were nicely grouped, sofas with fine cushions at different points. The floral decorations though not elaborate were very pretty and consisted largely of chrysanthemums. The afternoon was a delight to both entertainers and entertained. Miss Mary Mills favored them with a fine piano solo and Mesdames Kellogg and John Orr rendered some charming vocal solos and elegant refreshments were served at an early hour. It was very thoughtful on the part of the C. E. society and furnished an afternoon of social enjoyment to the fathers and mothers in Israel they will not forget.

Many capes and cloaks were sold last week at Harris & Hiteshu's at their one-half price sale. Still a large variety remains. Call and see if they cannot fit you.

George Mead's son Guy was quite seriously hurt Wednesday morning on his way to school. While passing through monumental square, some of the boys were playing ball. Clarence Witherell threw the ball, (which was like a stone), swiftly to Ned Cutting, who let it go by and it struck Guy squarely in the mouth, felling him to the ground as though shot. His lips were badly cut and some teeth loosened. Dr. Howell fixed him up, straightening the teeth back in place, and he was taken home where he will be for some time.

Polly wants a Sear's cracker.

The ladies of the Research circle are well pleased with the result of their flower show, which netted them over $40. An annual chrysanthemum display will hereafter be held. Contemplating these varied and beautiful flowers, the following lines are very expressive:

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

With summer and sun behind you,
With winter and shade before,
You crowd in your regal splendor
Through the autumn's closing door.
White as the snow that is coming,
Red as the rose that is gone,
Gold as the heart of the lilies,
Pink as the flush of the dawn.
Confident, winsome, stately,
You throne in the wane of the year.
Trooping an army with banners
When the leafless woods are sere.

Sweet is your breath as of spices
From a far sea island blown,
Chase your robes as of vestals
Trimming their lamps alone.
Strong are your hearts and sturdy
The life that in root and stem
Smoulders and glows till it sparkles
In each flowry diadem.
Nothing of bloom and odor
Have your peerless legions lost,
Marching in fervid beauty
To challenge the death-white frost.

So to the eye of sorrow
Ye bring a flicker of light,
The cheek that was wan with illness
Smiles at your faces bright.
The children laugh in greeting,
And the dear old people say,
"Here are the self-same darlings
We loved in our own young day."
As summer and sun behind you,
Winter and shade before,
You crowd in your regal splendor
Through the autumn's closing door.

The first of a series of dancing parties to be held at the armory, occurs Thanksgiving night, November 26th. Very neat invitations have been issued, fine music engaged and no pains will be spared to make these parties first-class.

Every man who owes the HERALD wood on subscription, is requested to bring it this next week. Also all who desire to pay for [illegible] in wood, come at once. Roads are good and we want the wood now or not at all.

Manning & Co. of Adrian, have rented the Heesen store and opened a candy kitchen. They manufacture their own goods from the choicest and purest of materials and will no doubt succeed in Tecumseh. On Saturday evening, there will be a public exhibition of candy [illegible]

Bob Burdette's lecture at the opera house Tuesday evening, which was the second of the Star course, pleased everybody who attended and the house was good. There is only one Bob Burdette, and everybody who likes good humor likes him. Type cannot picture his humor and the HERALD only desires that he will come again another winter.

Mrs. C. M. Woodward and daughters not only presented to Beer Post No. 140 G. A. R. a fine portrait of the late Doctor in military uniform but to Company C an easel holding an eleghant picture of him taken with the other brigade officers. In both cases the gift is highly prized and occupies a prominent position in their relative headquarters.

The young gentlemen who run the series of "hops last spring under the auspices of Co. "C" are much embarrassed to think that the rumor should have floated about the village that sufficient profit was made by the venture to secure them a nice little vacation at the lakes. As a matter of fact the series was successful financially, the entire profit $11.85 being turned over by the boys to the company.

"The South Before the War" which will appear at Sutton's opera house next Tuesday evening, November 24, is a good play, and they who like entertainment of this character will be pleased if they attend. It shall be the province of the Herald to as much as possible announce to the people of Tecumseh if the plays are good before they arrive. In some instances, of course, the Herald may be mistaken but "The South Before the War" will certainly be all right.

Mr. Chapin is calling on his Tecumseh directory patrons this week and assurance is given that the work will now be issued in a short time. As publication of the work was delayed after it was nearly ready for the press, on account of the illness of the publisher, a new canvass will be made here, when the system of numbering houses, which is approved by the village council, will be carried out and every name be given a location by street and number. This is the only directory which will give Tecumseh a separate representation and the prominence which it is entitled to in such a publication.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

For your Protection we positively state that this remedy does not contain mercury or any other injurious drug.

Old Shoes for Doormats.

A use has been found for old shoes, a derelict product that has heretofore defied the efforts of that class of claimants who view with despair the absolute loss of anything, says the New York Journal. The leather is cut into little disks of various shapes. These are set on edge and held together with long wire staples, and the result is an odd looking but flexible and serviceable door mat, which seems to do the work excellently of the wire and steel mats that are in such general use in outer halls. The leather scrap mat is very cheap, and will last a long time.

FIRE SWEEPS TRAVERSE CITY.

One Life Is Lost and Many Buildings Are Destroyed.

Traverse City, Nov. 12.—Traverse City met with a devastating fire loss just before two o'clock Wednesday morning. For a time it seemed as if the entire business portion of the city would be swept away, but the united and superhuman efforts of firemen and scores of citizens saved many valuable buildings and much personal property. As it was, the disaster was a blow to the city which is far worse than anything yet recorded. The loss is more than $55,000, and may reach $60,000, with only about $12,000 insurance. The fire is supposed to have originated by explosion of chemicals in the drug store of C. A. Bugbee, though that is not fully established. The greatest single loss was the Front Street house, owned by the Friedrich estate, valued at $8,000 and insured for $1,000. There were 13 other buildings totally destroyed and a dozen more badly damaged. What was a thriving part of a business street is now a heap of smoldering ruins. Edward Newberry, the porter of the hotel, a Swede, 34 years of age, succeeded in escaping, but ran back into the burning building for some of his valuables, when he was wrapped in flames and burned to a crisp. All the occupants had narrow escapes and lost everything, many escaping in their night clothes by the aid of the firemen, who bore many from the windows in the upper stories.

BIG CROP OF APPLES SOLD.

Michigan Grower Sells 50,000 Bushels to an Illinois Buyer.

Hart, Nov. 18.—The apple crop of Oceana county has been remarkable; it paid better than the peach crop, for which this county is noted. Many orchards have yielded more than $500 an acre. One buyer in Illinois purchased about 50,000 bushels and thousands of bushels have been shipped to various commission houses throughout the country. The best judges of fruit, however, declare that the apples this year will not "keep" long. Late winter apples are commencing to ripen and the earlier ones to decay.

Activity on the Bessemer Range.

Bessemer, Nov. 14.—All indications on the range point to an active winter's work at the Palmes. About 50 men are at work preparing room for stock piles. The old Colby mine will resume operations at once with about 200 men; the Tilden with about 350 men and 350 more December 1. The Sunday Lake, at Wakefield, has started with 100 men. Business men are placing their orders for stock. All indications are better than for the last four years.

A Mill Burned.

Benton Harbor, Nov. 17.—The Spinks planing mill, in the south part of the city, burned Monday night. The wind was blowing strongly from the southeast and for a time a disastrous conflagration was threatened. Clouds of burning embers flew over the city. The fire department, with the assistance of St. Joe firemen, kept the flames from spreading. The loss of the mill and contents is about $5,000.

Law Is Valid.

Lansing, Nov. 18.—The law of 1893, depriving convicts who are serving a second term in the prisons of this state from earning the same amount of good time as first-term convicts, was declared constitutional by the Michigan supreme court Tuesday. Convict Charles Miller, who caused the validity of the law to be tested, obtained his release Tuesday by the expiration of his sentence.

Many Workmen Laid Off.

Detroit, Nov. 18.—Many of the employes of the Michigan Car company state that all of the 1,500 men employed at the works six weeks ago have been laid off, the number of workmen having decreased beginning last week. The men had anticipated plenty of work in the near future. The officers of the company decline to talk about the matter.

Fire at West Bay City.

Bay City, Nov. 14. — Early Friday morning the entire department of West Bay City was called out to the Cincinnati sawmill, which was in flames. This concern and the Salzberg brewery, owned by Knoblauch & Son, were destroyed, causing a loss of $50,000; $30,000 on the mill and $20,000 on the brewery, both of which are insured.

Fate of an Aged Man.

Britton, Nov. 16.—Samuel Nixon, aged 87 years, was burned to death in his shanty Saturday night about two and one-half miles east of this village.

Owosso, Nov. 18.—Fred Switzer, aged 15 years, accidentally shot himself through the heart while examining a revolver. He lived 20 minutes.

PEOPLE MUST BE AMUSED

This Holds as Good of Washington as Any Other Place.

Gambling and Gaming No Longer Countenanced in the National Capital—Good Stories of Theaters and Actors.

(Special Washington Letter.)

The poet told the truth; although there will always be some doubt concerning the authorship of the lines. The words have a jingle of merriment, wine and wassail, and indicate that they were written by a man; and by just such a man as Col. John A. Joyce. But Ella Wheeler Wilcox claims their authorship:

"Laugh, and the world laughs with you,
Weep, and you weep alone.
This grand old earth must borrow its mirth.
It has troubles enough of its own."

Phillip Phillips, the celebrated singer of sacred music, used to sing a verse

"I HAVE NO CARD WITH ME, SIR."

containing the words: "Though you may forget the singer, you will not forget the song;" and so it makes no difference from whose pen the lines came, and it would make no difference if we never heard of the controversy concerning authorship—the words contain a truth which is universal.

The moralists and theorists of all ages have discussed the best modes of living. There are ascetics to-day who believe in the repression of mirth, even in children. There is a priestly class who live in seclusion, and, meeting each other, always make the cheerful allusion: "Brother, we must all die." There are others who look upon the world through glasses of a different color, and who believe in extracting all the pleasure possible out of this fleeting existence. Some of them are the careless extremists who clink their bumpers and sing: "Eat, drink and be merry." But there are still others who attain a happy medium between extreme recklessness and extreme asceticism, and they are in the majority.

People in the national capital who live in the ease and luxury of comfortable incomes, the families of statesmen and of the higher salaried government employes, the foreign ambassadors and ministers, and the wealthy visitors who make this a winter resort, are all in pursuit of pleasure. The majority of them are reasonable in their quest of enjoyment. In the hotels where families of congressmen spend the winter there are little card parties given by the ladies, whereby long evenings are pleasantly passed. The ladies on the first floor of the hotel go visiting the ladies on the fifth floor, and the ladies on the second floor visit the ladies on the ninth floor; and thus visits are exchanged in the hotels just as calls are made at home from house to house.

Then there are other card parties in which gentlemen alone participate, and sometimes large sums of money change hands. It is proper to say, however, that gambling for money is growing less and less among gentlemen every year. In my brief experience in the national capital it has been a pleasure to notice the fact that gentlemen are doing less gambling, and that the habit is becoming reprehensible. Forty or fifty years ago drinking was not regarded as a grave fault, but the temperance spirit has grown during that time so that drinking is now regarded as a vice. Healthy public sentiment is thus driving out the evil spirit of gambling.

The most popular pleasure here is the theater, and many box parties are given during the season. Washington is a small city compared with our commercial marts, and so we do not have the best plays long continued. The star performers and their companies seldom stay in Washington more than a week. This is really fortunate for the theater goers, because there is a constant variety of entertainment.

The ticket sellers at large theaters are peculiar people. They are not autocratic here as they become in the greater cities. Once upon a time there was a ticket seller at the old Ford's theater who forgot or did not realize that this is a singular city, and that a senator, representative, cabinet official, or some members of the family of a public functionary may appear at the window; and so he tried to start a flirtation with a pretty and piquant young miss by asking her for her card. Having obtained her tickets, she opened her big blue eyes in astonishment, and then said: "I have no card with me, sir, but you shall have one to-morrow morning, and I presume that you will call upon me without delay."

The ticket seller was a handsome fellow, and he smiled triumphantly and kissed his hand to her as she passed away. He waited on others all day long, but his brain was very busy with thoughts of his conquest, and he wondered who the beauty would turn out to be. That night he dreamed of pink cheeks, pretty pouting lips, pearly teeth and the wonderful figure of loveliness which had been so suddenly charmed by his masculine attractions. He expected to receive that card in his morning mail, and he was surprised when he was greeted by the manager, who handed him an envelope containing his pay up to date and said:

"Senator Blank wants to continue patronizing this theater, but he does not want his daughter insulted at the box office; and so I have engaged a gentleman to take your place."

The masher had received his card from the beauty with a vengeance, but he never called to pay his respects. He was a married man, the rascal, and he never recovered from the rebuke which he received on that occasion. No other theater wanted his services, and he has since earned his living as a clerk in a clothing store. His example has proved to be influential with others, if any hate been disposed to make the box office a place for flirtations.

At all of our theaters the ticket sellers are polite. They never forget that they are surrounded by greatness and power, and that the slightest deviation from probity is likely to prove costly. They are accommodating and gentlemanly, but they have a hard time of it, for they meet with human nature in every guise. The majority of the patrons of the theater, of course, is feminine, and almost every woman supposes that the ticket agent is a mind reader. They simply put their money before him and expect him to read their thoughts and give them such tickets as they want. The man behind the window may ask in his most bland and polite way where the lady desires to be seated, and he will frequently receive a sharp and petulant answer. The men, too, make many simi[illegible] in dealing with the ticket[illegible] man behind the window ke[illegible] per.

Actors and actresses of ability and standing have splendid audiences here. Mr. Joseph Jefferson gave a performance of "Rip Van Winkle" last year and the audience was one of the finest that could have been assembled in the world. You probably have heard that the great actor and President Cleveland are very warm personal friends, and of course President and Mrs. Cleveland attended that performance. Mr. Jefferson always has large audiences wherever he goes, but the fact that the president was to attend naturally induced many prominent people to witness the performance who might not otherwise have gone on that particular occasion. In a box adjoining the stage sat the president with his wife and several of her intimate lady friends. The other boxes were occupied by members of the cabinet and their families. The secretary of state, the secretary of the treasury and the secretary of the interior, with their families, occupied the lower tier of boxes. In the audience there were all of the diplomats from foreign countries, a majority of the senators and representatives, the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court, and others of national reputation and distinction. It is seldom that any actor has such an audience.

The veteran performer has played Rip Van Winkle for fully 30 years, but never did he appear to better advantage than upon the occasion described. The ease, grace, naturalness and climatic power of the celebrated delineator of the vagabond Rip brought forth round after round of applause. In that magnificent scene where the old man pleads for recognition and finally compels his daughter to remember her long-lost father, the actor brought tears to all eyes, and Grover Cleveland was obliged to rub his handkerchief over his eyes, just like the rest of us. With equal facility the actor caused the audience to be convulsed with laughter in the humorous parts of the play, particularly when he tells his wife Gretchen to turn away the villain of the play, "give him a cold potato and let him go." Mr. Jefferson will probably never again give a rendition of his celebrated play; certainly never again to such an audience.

Although this city is what the theatrical people call "a good theater town," that is, a city which liberally patronizes the plays, there has never been a first-class building in Washington until within the last year. Of course, the opera houses and theaters have not been common, but there has been none to compare with the places of amusement in the great cities.

We now have a very handsome theater and it is built upon the site of the late residence of James G. Blaine. It is a historic place. For many years the old Washington club was there, and in front of it occurred the celebrated tragedy of 1859, when Daniel E. Sickles killed Phil Barton Key. It was in the same building that William H. Seward resided as secretary of state when the assassin entered and almost killed him on the night when President Lincoln was killed. While Blaine was secretary of state he resided there, and in that house he died.

There was almost universal protest against the transfer of the property to new proprietors for the purpose of building a theater, but Mrs. Blaine pursued her own course, as she has done all her life, regardless of the will and wishes of others. Consequently our amusement-loving people find their handsomest and best theater on that site.

BEWARE OF SOFT-SHELL CRABS.

Peculiar Parts to Be Regarded by Those Who Eat Them.

"There is no danger in eating soft-shelled crabs," observed an epicure, "if they are fresh, but they are poison if they are not. They should be well seasoned, and an extra lot of pepper put on them as a precaution, especially if the weather is very hot when they are eaten, or if they are eaten shortly before one retires. It is the habit of many persons to eat soft-shelled crabs at night time. I do not know but that they taste better then. It is somewhat dangerous to many to drink milk after eating crabs. Milk seems to develop the colic that follows eating soft-shelled crabs with some persons.

"Another thing that should be remembered, and that is that a sharp thunderstorm will kill soft-shelled crabs, and even the hard-shelled crabs at times. Unless the soft-shelled crab had been cooked before the thunderstorm, I think the safer plan would be to decline to eat it. Under all other conditions there is no danger in partaking of them, for I do not think anyone would be criminal enough to cook a dead crab, hard or soft shell. The proper way to kill a crab is to throw him into a kettle of boiling water. I know that some people think this is cruel, but it is no more cruel than to stab them with a needle or kill them with chloroform, as I have known some extra sensitive persons to do."

Evading the Rule.

One of the regulations at the new Congressional library in Washington is that visitors must carry no parcels into the building. So says the Post, of that city, and then goes on to relate an amusing occurrence: A rather tall, broad-shouldered young woman arrived at the door of the library, having in her hand a neat brown paper package. "No bundles are alowed inside the building," said the attendant. "You must leave it here till you come out." The young woman objected. The man said it was the rule. The young woman said it was absurd. The man was firm. He must obey orders. The young woman hesitated; then she undid the parcel, hung several pairs of black hose over her arm, handed the man the paper, and said: "There, you may keep that until I come out."

(From the Kalamazoo Telegraph.)

The following statement is one of great interest to many a citizen of Kalamazoo, and a man as well known as Mr. Wallace should carry more than ordinary weight with our readers. Here it is as taken down by our representative:

"My name is John A. Wallace. I am a member of the firm of J. A. Wallace & Co., doing business as tinners, etc., at 106 Eleanor Street, Kalamazoo, in which city I also reside. For the past nine or ten months I have been having attacks of kidney complaint, the pain in my back over my hips was very severe at times; my urinary system was also in a bad state of derangement, sometimes the urine was scanty and then again the amount would be excessive, and a difficulty of passage always existed. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills at a time when I felt that I was going to be sick, but their use warded off an attack, and I am now feeling very much better; the urinary organism has regained a normal condition, and the terrific pain in my back is much reduced in severity, while it is now fast going away altogether. I am continuing the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, with positive feeling that they will effect on me a permanent and speedy cure. I have unbounded confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills as a remedy for all kidney ailments; have good reason to be, as they have done so much for me."

Can you ask any more than this? Doan's Kidney Pills are relieving more backs of the burdens they have been forced to bear through the kidneys than all other means devised, and, better still, they are doing this right here in Michigan. Ask any one who has ever taken them and see what they will say.

HORTICULTURE.

SIMPLE GREENHOUSE.

Plans and Specifications for a Three-Quarter Span Structure.

The plans as here given represent a ¾-span house, and will assist anyone to make a handsome greenhouse.

The size of the greenhouse is 12 feet wide by 20 feet long, and the boiler house six feet square. The glass used in the roof is 14 inches wide.

The greenhouse can be made with either wood or iron rafters and purlins. Iron is the better, as it makes a lighter house and lasts much longer than wood. The rafters are made fast to iron foot pieces that extend into the ground, and run up to the ridge, which is also of iron; these are capped with cypress, in which to bed the glass. The ridge also receives a cap of the same wood. The sash bars are made of cypress.

The inside of the house can be sealed with cypress, but a builder's paper should be put on and the outside covered with novelty siding.

The ventilation shown on the plan is continuous and 30 inches wide, and is placed next to the ridge. It should be operated by a ventilating apparatus, such as can be purchased from any maker of greenhouse material.

The house is arranged with three benches or beds—one extending from the door along the front and end being two feet six inches wide, one down the center of the same height and three feet wide, and one against the back wall two feet wide. The back bench should be elevated, which will require the walk to be elevated also, which should be about the height of the middle bench, the supports for which will answer for the walk, by extending them through to the back wall.

The sides should be made of cypress and the bottom either of cypress or hemlock. The supports can be made of iron or cypress. If made of iron they will last a long time, the only thing requiring to be renewed being the sides and bottoms from time to time.

A boiler six feet square is attached to the greenhouse at one end. The roof can be made to slope to the back. There should be provided also a pit of sufficient depth to allow the top of the boiler to be below the flow pipes in the greenhouse. If this is not convenient the heating can be done without it, but the circulation would not be as good as if the boiler be as suggested. The bottom of the pit should be cemented and be supplied with drainage.

The heating can be accomplished by hot water heating pipes 3½ inches in diameter, running three pipes under the back bench and two under each of the other benches. The pipes should be set on brick piers and have a rise to the farther end of the house and then drain all the way back to the boiler.

The expansion tank can be in one corner of the boiler house out of the way, and all the space in the greenhouse can be utilized.—F. T. Oakes, in American Gardening.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD.

Cutting out is the only remedy for peach borers.

Successful gardening depends upon a good manure pile.

No fruit pays for judicious pruning or thinning better than the pear.

In the fall, after the leaves drop, is a good time to prune the grape vines.

When the ground is frozen an inch or two deep is the best time to mulch strawberries.

One advantage in mulching is that it in a measure prevents a too early growth in the spring.

One reason why plants do better in the kitchen than any other room is because of humidity in the air.

After apples have been kept a few weeks they should be sorted over, as some good ones will show defects later on.

Wood ashes is one of the best remedies for pear trees that bear cracked fruit. Stir the soil well and then spread the ashes well over the surface.

When intending to plant an orchard one of the best plans of management is to get the trees this fall and heel them in ready for planting in the spring.

Pruning a tree when dormant tends to impart vigor, but if done when the tree is growing or in leaf it tends to check growth.—St. Louis Republic.

Hints for Lettuce Growers.

In order to maintain a regular supply, plantings should be made every ten days or so. A temperature of from 40 to 50 degrees at night suits lettuces, and so as to have good results the plants should be grown on without a check. Solid beds would no doubt produce the finest heads, but in private establishments the crop is generally grown on benches which answer the purpose sufficiently well. Green fly is sometimes troublesome and must be checked before it gets headway, otherwise the crop will be destroyed; either fumigate or lay tobacco stems between the plants.—American Gardening.

TIME TO MAKE CUTTINGS.

Good Way of Increasing Small Fruits of Every Description.

During the winter months is a good time to make cuttings of such trees and shrubs as it is desirable to increase. Quinces, currants, gooseberries and grapes are readily increased by cuttings. In the case of shade trees willows and poplars are easily grown from cuttings, but the great majority of trees need to be raised from seeds, layers, or by budding or grafting. But when it comes to the flowering shrubs which adorn our lawns, cuttings are the chief reliance of propagators. The time to make them is while vegetation is dormant, and it is better done at least a month or more before spring comes. The beautiful Golden Bell, Weigla, Mock Orange, Spirea, Duetzia and Athaea among many others are easily raised in this way.

The best shoots for the purpose are those of last year's growth. The exact length is not particular, so that two or three joints are included in each one. About nine inches is a good length for most sorts, though grapes having the joints far apart may be a foot in length. It is believed that when the lower part is cut just below an eye, that rooting is easily accomplished, so cuttings are usually made in that way. It is not so essential at the upper end where the cut is made, but as the buds push from the joints all wood above the highest one is useless. After the cuttings are made place them in a cellar, buried up in sand or earth, with but the tops projecting, these to remain until the time arrives for setting them out in the spring. When the work is done about February, it will be found that the cuttings are nicely healed over by the time spring comes, which is in favor of the success of the operation.

When the winter is over and the soil is in good condition for working the planting may be done, setting them so that two-thirds of their length are in the ground and one-third out. In ordinary season the most of them will be well rooted by fall. — Practical Farmer.

PROTECTION IN WINTER.

How to Care Effectively for Young Trees and Tender Shrubs.

The aim in giving any kind of winter protection is merely to preserve the gains made in root or top growth during the preceding season. At a in the illustration is shown a young tree well protected both by stake and mound. A few stones piled around the stem, as shown at b, will often do very well, at least are much better than no protection at all, but will not prevent injury from rabbits and mice, as the mound is quite liable to do. Young trees with little root, when left exposed to the sweeping winds without support, usually are swayed back and forth until a funnel-shaped cavity is formed around the base, as may be seen at c, endangering the life of the tree from the drying out of the already scant root supply, or perhaps by being entirely blown over, as seen at d. Young evergreens, with their comparatively heavy tops, are particularly subject to displacement or partial uprooting by the winter's winds, and may be held in position by stout strings fastened to the stem and to small stakes driven into the ground a few feet from the base of the tree, as shown at e. Small compact evergreens are liable to be broken down by a heavy snowfall, and the most natural protection perhaps is the one suggested at f, consisting of a sort of roof made of two pieces of board. Tender shrubs may be treated in a variety of ways. At g we have a shrub protected by an inverted barrel. To make a sure thing still surer, the other head might be taken out also, the barrel filled with dry leaves and again covered. At h we see the shrub wrapped in canvas or muslin; at i protected by straw or straw matting. A simple way of covering small, tender shrubbery is by means of sods, as illustrated at j; but ordinary soil, as at A, will do about as well.—Farm and Home.

THE FARM GARDEN.

How to Avoid Destruction and Loss from Straying Cattle.

Some kitchen gardens must be fenced, or destruction from straying cattle will follow. It is a misfortune, however, to have a garden so fenced that cultivation cannot take place. The accompanying sketch shows a way to fence a small garden, that admits of easy and thorough cultivation. The garden must be entirely in rows running lengthwise. The side fences are permanent. The ends are panels of fence that hook onto posts set permanently, each post being in line with a plant row in the garden, so that they will not be in the way of the horse and the cultivator. It is but a moment's work to take down or put up these end panels, as they can be made of light strips.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Stimulating Growth of Vines.

All growers of squashes or other vines of this character have noted the fact that the first blossoms are barren. In other words, they are all male blossoms. If this is examined a little further, it will be found that these male blossoms are on the main vine; which accounts for their being earlier than the female or bearing-blossoms, which appear on the side branches. To keep the main stem pinched back will force more growth into the side branches and consequently more fruit. There should be pinching back of new growth all around, as the squash vine will set more fruit than it can carry to profitable marketing size.—Rural World.

When they put a man in jail he cannot follow his natural inclinations. He cannot eat what he wants to—he is limited to a very frugal diet. Is it not equally true of the dyspeptic? For all of the real enjoyment he gets out of life he might as well be in jail. He cannot eat what he likes, nor enough. He suffers much, gets little sympathy. At first, perhaps a little heaviness in the stomach, a little sourness, windy belchings and heartburn; headaches and biliousness and a foul taste in the mouth in the morning. Electric Bitters is a medicine that is needed for any season, but perhaps more generally needed, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the system is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. The Washing of the Feet gets to be a weighty matter, in these days when colored stockings will shed their colors. Pearline does this work beautifully. It's not only thoroughly effective, but it's healthy.

Doctors recommend Pearline as a soak for rheumatism. Try it in the bath. It will give you a new idea of cleanliness. Bathing with Pearline is a perfect luxury.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 432 JAMES PYLE, New York.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default of payment having been made of a mortgage made by Franklin J. Wood and Maggie Wood to Abbie M. Fisher, dated May twenty-third, 1887, and recorded on the 24th day of May 1887, in the Registers office for Lenawee County, Michigan in Liber 89, of Mortgages on page 286, which mortgage was assigned by instrument in writing dated September 24th, 1894, by said Abbie M. Fisher to the undersigned Gertrude Fisher Loree (formerly Gertrude Fisher) and such assignement duly recorded on the 8th day of October 1894, in said Register's office in Liber 136, of mortgages on page 348,—upon which mortgage there remains unpaid of the principal and accrued interest at the date of this notice the sum of four hundred seventy and 65-100 dollars and no proceedings in law or in equity have been taken for the collection of the same or any part thereof.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and of the statutes of the State of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the moneys above mentioned and the interest thereon hereafter to accrue at 7 per cent per annum the cost of this foreclosure and sale including the attorney fee provided for in said mortgage, I shall on the 20th day of November 1896 at nine o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the front door of the court house in the city of Adrian Lenawee county Michigan (that being the building in which the circuit court for said county of Lenawee is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all that parcel of land situate in the Village of Tecumseh in the county of Lenawee state of Michigan and described as follows, to wit: Village lot number fourteen (14) of Eber Shearman's addition to said Village of Tecumseh according to the recorded plat of said addition.

Dated September 4th, 1896.

Gertrude Fisher Loree. Assignee of said [mortgage.

Charles Burridge Attorney for assignee.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 2nd day of November in the year one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-six.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Addison Hardenburg deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Alice B. Hardenburg, Administratrix, upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of Administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and that she is now ready to close said estate and to render her final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to this statute in such case made and provided that she may be discharged and her bond cancelled, and for such other order and decree as this court shall deem proper.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 30th day of November 1896 at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

Calumet Baking Powder

has turned the tables on high price baking powders. The directions on High Price cans are the same as on Calumet cans, viz.: 2 teaspoonfuls to a quart of flour, but they say that one can of High Price will go three times as far as any other. Can any claim be more ridiculous? The frantic cry of adulteration, danger and poison made by the high price baking powder people is a blind to intimidate the public and induce them to pay fancy prices for their goods—also to divert attention from this defect in their own goods.

Calumet Baking Powder is safe. Food baked with Calumet is absolutely free from Rochelle Salts, Alum, Lime, Ammonia or any injurious substance.

Monopoly must yield to moderation—
Impurity must improve or go under.

DOWN THE DANUBE

In an Open Boat- Fifteenth Letter of this Interesting Voyage.

Heidelberg. Sept. 30, '96.

EDITOR HERALD:

So we passed the Iron Gates, the last great defile of the Danube. Now Roumania was on our left and Servia, soon to give place to Bulgaria, was on our right. We began to experience what it means to be on the boundary line of two jealous powers. There is a guard house every two miles or less along the shore, and, if you land, you almost have to make out your naturalization papers. Our landing at Turn Severin is a fair sample of what we went through at every town where we stopped from the Iron Gates to the sea. I row up to land, a uniformed guard comes striding down to the water's edge. Armed with my passport I stand unflinchingly until I can see the whites of his eyes. Then I open fire with "Sprechen sie deutsch?" Guard shakes his head. Again I fire, "Parlez vous Francais?" Guard shakes his head once more. I have another shot, "Parlano Italiano?" Guard looks stupid, and in despair I fire my last shot "Well, blame it, perhaps you speak English?" The guard sees I am helpless and opens on me relentlessly with the three languages which he always has at command, Russian, Roumanian, and Servian. The three shots usually finish me and I feebly reach out my passport. But that won't do. The guard scowls and says, "Hite" and I "hite." That is I follow him up to his superior's office. The officer looks wisely at my pass, glances at me and tells the guard to allow me the freedom of the city that day. I return to the boat and we tie up and "do" the city. Now, at Turn Severin all went according to the above program except that we had gone past the steamboat landing, and the stupid guard insisted upon my rowing back up stream to the dock. His superior berated him for that.

These guards are usually dressed in a white linen suit, very dirty, and bound at the waist by a broad red belt. Their greatest peculiarity is, that they all look alike in features, and we feel like the hare in the fable, who raced with the hedgehog, and finding the wife of the hedgehog at the end of the furrow concluded that he was beaten. We apparently find the same hedgehog in each new city.

It was near Turn Severin that we saw a new scheme for fishing. Stakes are driven in the sand at the river's edge, and then the fisherman throws the leaded and hooked end of a 50 foot line far out in the Danube. Then he lays the other end over the stake, balances a stone thereon, and goes to sleep. When the fish bites, the stone falls, the fisherman awakes, and pulls in his game. That is by one degree the laziest scheme I ever saw. As we were passing a small Servian town at a distance of several hundred yards from the shore a guard hailed us. We paid no attention. He came excitedly down to the shore and made moves threatening to pursue us with a boat. We continued going down stream. He called a man to bail out his boat. Meanwhile the Danube and some lusty rowing carried us out of reach of pursuit. Of course he had no right to ask us to land. The Danube here is an international waterway.

One shore, the Roumanian, is low and marshy most of the way to the sea but the Servian and Bulgarian shore is very interesting. Now rugged scarred hills, and now steep rocky cliffs appear. The Bulgarian hills at times look much as one imagines the moon's surface would look. They are cracked and seamed, bare, pitted and seared with fantastic lines. Many hollows of the hills might be extinct volcanoes.

Shepards with their flocks are the life of these hills, while fishermen literally line the shores. Where the springs bubble out at the base of the hills, we always see a picturesque group of peasants, who come from the towns built in a forest of trees on the hillside. In these groups are men in white divided skirts and long tunic. A colored sash wound many times around the waist, thick wool hose purple embroidered with pink roses and green leaves done in cross stitch, a high astrachan hat, and shapeless sandals tied with thongs complete this costume. Yet more marvelous are the women with their white linen under-robes, over which are aprons front and back, which often look like a rug or piece of tapestry. The rear apron is often replaced by gay colored woolen streamers. As these gay birds flutter about huge sweeps or creaking pulleys they make splendid game for my kodak.

Well, the day before we reached Widen, we nearly famished, because we could get nothing in small towns which a human being would eat. But Widen was a surprise. If we had been dropped by the Arabian Sinbad's roc into some old oriental city we could not have marveled more at our surrounding. An old Turkish wall and fort encompass that district of the city set apart for the sons of the prophet. Above its walls rise towers and minarets. We landed just outside of Turkish town. Our passport was taken in charge by an officer. Then a German tavern keeper hailed me as a countryman and insisted that my wife and self come in, and have some wine at his expense. We accepted the invitation for the experience sake. Such a crowd. Half a dozen market women sat at tables and drank wine and smoked, as many men did likewise. We told the German what we wanted to buy and he sent a boy to do the marketing. Upon the boys return we excused ourselves and under the guidance of a kindly German entered the Turkish quarter. Going through a huge gate of the fortress—so damp and gloomy—we came to the streets gay with Turkish shops. Such fountains, such old, oid decaying walls and houses, and in the shops were little Turks, boys, making caps and shoes. This all, to say nothing of a real circus and menagerie in full blast. We saw Turks of all sizes, clad in all colors, and having every shade of devilry in their faces, but not a feminine Turk did we see, and my wife was stared and leered at as if she were an Houri. Our guide caught a lizard for our amusement.

We bought some real cookies, just like American cookies, and with the good bread, fruit, and vegetables, we were about to depart. By the aid of a German interpreter, a young Roumanian officer, who had come to Widen on business, asked me to take him as a passenger and land him on the Roumanian shore. I consented and we three embarked. We had not realized how small our boat was until we found that only careful balancing would prevent the boat dipping water, because of our extra load. When at last we got this dainty Hotspur, with his white duck suit, peaked blue hat with red piping, and high boots, safely ashore, he insisted upon our visiting his den, the guard house, and sent his subordinates after some green corn and pears, which he presented us.

Ever since election there has been a notable and unmistakable increase in the amount of gold in circulation. The banks of this city are receiving and paying out large amounts of the yellow metal every day.—Hudson Gazette.

No sooner had the election of McKinley been conceded by Chairman Jones than our townsman "Pardy" Deems appeared on the streets with his head covered with a brand new silk hat. "Going away, Jim?" enquired a citizen who noticed the change of headgear. "No," replied Jim, "confidence has been restored so I though I would resurrect my old tile and get ready for prosperity."—Hudson Gazette.

An operation was performed yesterday morning upon Wm. Campbell, the Lake Shore engineer, who fell from Chase's bridge Saturday afternoon, by Doctors C. Kirkpatrick, Daniel Todd, G B. M. Seager, F. E. Andrews, W. E Jewett and A. M. Allen. It was found necessary to amputate the left leg below the knee, and although the right leg is severely injured, it is hoped that it may be saved.—Adrian Telegram.

The farmers say that the thickets and fields are full of rabbits. They can be kicked up anywhere almost, so thick are they. The past summer has been a good one for Br'er Rabbit, and he is playing havoc with young fruit trees and every thing else he can get his teeth into. The law does not protect him and his family, and he can be killed at all seasons. They are fat this year, and now is the time to kill the young ones.—Addison Courier.

About a year ago W. W. Whiting, of Tecumseh, an ardent admirer of the governor-elect, named his pet dog "Pingree Whiting," or "Ping" for short. After the election it occurred to Mr. Whiting that the dog's namesake ought to do something handsome and he wrote and asked Mr. Pingree for a dog collar. The collar arrived a day or two later, with the following inscription: "Gov. Pingree Whiting." The dog struts around with unapproachable pride, and you can't get him to associate with a common corporation cur.—Adrian Times.

Surveyor Boss, P. Cooley and H. R. Cole went to Adrian Monday to assist on a preliminaary survey for an extension of the Lima Northern railroad from that city to some point on the Ohio division of the C., J. & M. Ry. It is hoped that such connections and train service may be secured as to afford the citizens of north-western Lenawee better facilities for getting to and from the county seat.—Addison Courier. If this happens Tecumseh people can go to Adrian via. Addison Junction. The walking will also be good.

Although the property holders did not take advantage of the offer recently made by the Clinton Woolen Mill Co. to furnish the principal business street of the village with water, providing the former raise sufficient money to put in the water main and hydrants, the company propose, at any rate, to provide themselves with suitable fire protection and have purchased a large and powerful pump. This pump, which weighs five and one-half tons, arrived Saturday and was taken down to the mill Tuesday.—Adrian Telegram.

The following from the Dundee Reporter is printed on account of the many friends of the deceased in Tecumseh: "Of all sad and melancholy deaths in my remembrance, none appear to me more heart-breaking than the death of Elmer E Mugg, at the H. Q. W. ranch in New Mexico. There he laid down his weary frame racked with the ravages of consumption; bereft of his friends with no one near to soothe his last moments save the big-hearted ranchero and his noble, motherly wife, with the few cow-boys and Mexicans all of whom had grown to love this gentle, patient sufferer. Among all men it has been my good and bad fortune to have met, Elmer Mugg few could compare with. He was as the diamond is to the pebble. In him vice was wanting; no dishonorable act ever sullied his spotless reputation; his mind was as unclouded by petty spite as the blue of an Italian sky; in his veins there coursed no venom; in his heart space for all God's creatures. Those who knew him remained his friends unto death. His life was of many trials and much bitterness, but through it all he maintained an air of cheerfulness and hope, though firmly realizing his sad condition of health. Of his boyhood days I know but little. Born in York township, Sandusky county, O., Oct. 16, 1861, he grew to manhood on the farm and learned his life's work well. A better farmer for his years never went afield; his to pattern after, and his stock the admiration of all eyes. For many a year this patient thoughtful boy worked and lived among us, ever cheerful, genial, frank and upright, yet battling like a strong swimmer in his agony against a sea of trouble; with no one to cheer him on save the gentle sisters whom he idolized. On the 18th of June his failing health urged him to seek the climate of New Mexico to which country I accompanied him. The end soon came for on the 20th day of October, 1896, at the ranch before mentioned, he gave up the struggle. On the wind swept plains of New Mexico, where the stillness is only broken by the mournful cry of the wolf and the lowing of the countless herds of cattle, there sleeps in the sun baked earth, a man, respected and loved by all who knew him."

H. W. CAMPBELL.

It is being quietly intimated that there are some other dark horse aspirants for the Adrian postoffice, and that when they come from cover, there will be a scatteration among a lot of the others. It is being whispered around among the knowing ones that as matters stand, Festus R. Metcalf stands very near to the throne as compared to all the other applicants. When General Humphrey received the appointment, Capt. Allen was pledged to him before the election. But this year Gen. Spaulding says he is free from pledge, so there is a fairly open field.—Adrian Telegram. Than Festus Metcalf there is no better qualified man in Adrian for the position.

The Hudson Republican will be discontinued if the last issue is not the last. Dr. Edwin Eaton has purchased all the stock of the company, the members being J. J. Wood, Grant Fellows and George W. Fenton. The doctor proposes to dispose of the material and presses and divide up the list between the Post and Gazette, according to the choice of the subscribers. The Republican has been a very lively paper, clean and ably edited, and had a large patronage at first, but evidently spread out too large for the field in the beginning of its existence.—Adrian Messenger. Good thing to stop it. Hudson has no more use for three newspapers than a cat has for three tails.

The order for the sale of the C., J. & M., an announcement of which was published in the Blade yesterday, started many rumors in railroad circles to-day. The story that an effort will be made by some outside people to get control of the property does not seem to have any foundation. The Brice-Thomas syndicate which has always controlled the road will meet no opposition in the reorganization. The plan is the usual scheme of wiping out a large floating debt, and to put the property on a paying basis. The Ohio division of the C., J. & M. has proved to be a profitable piece of property, and with the Jackson extension, it is thought that the Michigan division will do as well. The future of the road, with a return of prosperty, seems to be promising.—Hudson Gazette.

Jacob Totten.

Jacob Totten was born in New York, Sept. 14, 1815, and died in Tecumseh, Mich., Nov. 5, 1896. He was one of ten children, four of whom still live, namely: Henry Totten, of Dundee; Charles Totten, of Belding; Mrs. Eliza Marsh, of Columbia, and Mrs. Juliette Rowland, of Tecumseh.

In 1843 Mr. Totten came to Michigan and located in Tecumseh, where he resided until the time of his death. In 1847 he was married to Miss Mary M. Cuthbert. Two children were born to them; one son, Romain, who died in infancy, and Mrs. Ella Eldridge, of this place. Her father made his home with her since the death of her mother, who died Sept. 17, 1893.

Those who knew Mr. Totten for many years remember him as a strictly honest man, and who meant to be right on all moral questions. His habits of life were good, and as a result he passed his four score years with all his faculties well preserved. The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. P. Varner, and was attended by a large number of friends.

The Farm Home Reading Circle of the Michigan Agricultural College.

The Michigan Agricultural College has again proven itself alive to the needs and demands of the general farming population. The fundamental purpose of the Agricultural College is to educate farmers' sons and daughters toward the farm and not away from it. She is doing this and in addition is making it possible for those who cannot afford a college course to become posted on agricultural topics through the Farm Home Reading Circle. One of the objects of the Farm Home Reading Circle is to recommend the best books for the farmer, gardner and stock breeder to read and at the same time to furnish an opportunity for the farmer to buy those books at greatly reduced prices.

The Farm Home Reading Circle above all, claims to educate the present generation, those who are now farming rather than the future generation. Those farmers who think there is nothing for them to learn in books are yearly getting more scarce. On the other hand we are glad to note that a very large number of our farmers are almost constantly asking for guidance in the selection of books to read which will be of practical benefit to them in their work. Again we say that this is the object of the Farm Home Reading Circle. It can no longer be called an experiment, for it has been more successful than any other similar movement. It is stronger today than ever before. We have a large number of members, not only in Michigan but also in several other States including Canada. Several changes have been made since the Farm Home Reading Circle was first organized, and we are sure that no one interested in farming, gardening, fruit growing or stock breeding can find a more profitable employment for the long winter evenings than to take up the course of reading outlined. It is not necessary to organize a reading circle to get the benefit of this course. You can read alone.

Please remember that this is not a money-making scheme. We are trying to place within easy access of every farmer, information of value to him in his every day work. Address the Secretary for further information.

Annual Report of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Affairs Managed with Much Economy—Our Foreign Trade in Meat—America Destined to Monopolize the Markets of the Globe.

Washington, Nov. 23.—In his fourth annual report the secretary of agriculture shows that with the $180,000 that may be saved from the appropriations for the current fiscal year, there will have been covered back into the treasury since March 7, 1896, over $2,000,000. That this great economy was effected without any loss of efficiency he attributes in a large degree to the improvement in the personnel of the force under the civil service rules.

Our Foreign Trade in Meat.

The inspection of animals intended for food is treated at length. Mr. Morton urges that the government inspection should be extended to all animals intended for human food, whether for consumption in the United States or abroad, but he maintains that the cost of this inspection should be paid by the packers. The total consumption of meat in Great Britain for the year was 1,000,000 tons, 75 per cent. of which was produced at home, the remaining 25 per cent. being produced abroad. Of the live meat arriving in Great Britain during the first half of the year of 1896, the United States supplied 75 per cent. of the cattle and 45 per cent. of the sheep. The testimony of the department representatives abroad is that cattle from the United States arrive in English ports in excellent condition. The Glasgow market is especially commended to American shippers, as in that city cattle from the United States compete with the very highest qualities of British animals.

Shipment of Horses Abroad.

The shipment of American horses to England is steadily increasing. In 1893 Great Britain took 13,573 American horses, nearly 23,000 in 1894 and 24,000 in 1895, but during the first nine months of 1896 more American horses were shipped into England than in any previous 12 months.

Opposed to Free Seed Distribution.

The seed distributed gratuitously by the government during the present fiscal year weighed 220 tons and occupied 30 mail cars in transit. The cost of carrying them through the mails was over $70,000. Enough seed was sent out gratitously to plant 115 square miles of garden. Ex-congressmen received enough to plant 16314 acres. For the current year at present prices the amount required by congress to be expended in the purchase of seed will make each congressman's quota double what it was last year. The secreary regrets this unnecessary and wasteful expenditure of public money and hopes congress may in good time put a stop thereto.

Competition of Farmers.

Referring to the stress of competition which the American farmer is compelled to endure, Mr. Morton calls attention to nearly 2,000,000 farms of 80 acres each given away by the gogernment under the homestead act of 1866 during the past 30 years, and to the amount donated under the timber culture law equivalent to over 550,000 more farms of the same size. It was impossible he says, for farmers in the old states to profitably sell their products in competition with those of the newer states, grown upon lands which cost their owners nothing.

Farm Mortgages.

Secretary Morton refutes the idea prevailing that the farms of the west and south are more heavily burdened with mortgages than those of the east and northeast. States along the north Atlantic, he says, are quite heavily incumbered with farm mortgages, and New Jersey carries a debt of this kind greater in proportion to its farm valuations than any state in the union.

Referring to the impression that greater rates of interest are charged for money loaned upon farms than that loaned on other kinds of real estate, Secretary Morton states that the rate of interest charged upon mortgages on residential property other than farms averages eighty-four hundredths of one per cent. less than the rate of interest charged upon farm loans. In 17 states the average rate charged upon the latter is less than that demanded for loans upon other residential property. In two states the rates are the same upon urban and rural real estate. In Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Kansas, Iowa, Texas and Alabama the rates of interest are less for money secured by mortgages than for money secured by other realty. In five states, including Kansas, the difference in favor of the farmer is from one-fourth to one-half of one per cent., and in Texas it is over one per cent. If a western farmer pays a higher interest than the eastern, so does the western merchant, common carrier or manufacturer.

Exports of Farm Products.

During the fiscal year just ended, the exported products of American farms aggregated $570,000,000, an increase of $17,000,000 over the preceding year. In spite of this, there was a falling off in the percentage of agricultural products exported to the total exports, but this was due to the unprecedented sale abroad of American manufactured goods. The principal market for American products is found in the united kingdom of Great Britain and her colonies. These English-speaking people bought 58 per cent. of exports from the United States during the fiscal year 1896. Together with Germany, France, Holland, and Belgium, they purchased 81.9 per cent. of our entire output, leaving 18.1 per cent. for the rest of the world.

Can Monopolize the World's Markets.

Secretary Morton asks if a nation which, like the United States, possesses the greatest power and facilities for producing and manufacturing things which the world demands, is not destined to monopolize the markets of the globe. With the most favorable conditions for varied and successful agriculture and the lightest burden of national taxation, what country, he asks, can compete with this in developing the best resources of human toil with a minimum of human effort. With our wonderful labor-saving contrivances applied to nearly every avenue of production, the wages paid in the United States, in the production of wheat and cotton, for instance, are 50 to 100 per cent. higher than in countries with which we compete, so the wages paid in manufactures from metal are from 25 to 100 per cent. higher than the wages paid workers in the same industries by other nations. And in this contest for feeding and furnishing mankind—notwithstanding the fierce competition which it meets all over the globe—American agriculture, manufacture and commerce are steadily gaining more trade, and thus furnishing an enlarged wage fund on a gold basis out of which some millions of American laborers and skilled artisans draw their yearly remuneration, and upon which they and their families largely depend for employment and comfort.

Work of the Weather Bureau.

Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau, has submitted to the secretary of agriculture his report of the operations of the bureau during the fiscal year of his administration. Among other things he refers to the kite experiments. On one occasion, he says, an altitude of 7,000 feet was obtained. The use of kites is always limited by the condition of the winds. There appears to remain but one other means of exposing meteorological instruments at approximately fixed points in free air—namely, by the use of devices sustained by the action of propellers which either lift the apparatus directly or give it a specially ascending or descending motion.

Sentenced to Death.

Columbus, Ga., Nov. 24.—The jury in the case of Henry White brought in a verdict of murder. He was sentenced to be hanged on January 15. White was charged with the murder of Policeman Jackson here on October 14, at which time his father killed two other officers and was in turn shot to death by a posse.

WEYLER IS BACK.

He Leaves His Command and Returns to the City of Havana.

Havana, Nov. 24.—Capt. Gen. Weyler is defeated. He arrived here Monday night from Mariel on board the cruiser La Gazpi, which had been placed at his disposal. Only a few weeks ago the Spanish commander took personal charge of the forces and marched to the Pinar del Rio country with the avowed purpose of suppressing the rebellion in quick time. Now he is back in Havana, having conducted a masterly retreat. His operations in Pinar del Rio have proved a failure. He has demonstrated his inability to whip the insurgents, and his recall by the government at Madrid is considered a certainty. Maceo is practically master of the situation.

The news of Weyler's arrival created widespread excitement. It is looked upon as a death blow to the hopes of Spain. The high feeling prevailing was augmented by the information that Gomez is on his way to Havana province at the head of 35,000 well-armed and amply-provisioned men. The insurgents are in possession of plenty of ammunition, having several field pieces and dynamite guns. The artillery is manned by Americans and every engagement in which they have participated the Spanish have suffered heavy loss.

MRS. SCOTT SIDDONS DEAD.

Distinguished Woman's Demise Is Tardily Reported from France.

London, Nov. 20.—French newspapers at hand state that Mrs. Scott-Siddons, famous a number of years ago as a dramatic reader, died there last week and that her body was shipped to New York on Tuesday. She had lived abroad in the latter years of her life in broken health.

[Mrs. Scott-Siddons was a great-granddaughter of the great Sarah Siddons. She began her career on the stage in London in 1867, giving readings from Shakespeare's plays in the Hanover Square rooms, and later on made her first appearance upon the regular stage at the Haymarket theater in the character of Rosalind in "As You Like It." She first came to the United States in 1868, when she read in Steinway hall, after which she acted in the Fifth Avenue theater. She then returned to London and acted in "The Lady of Lyons" and several Shakespearean characters, as well as in a number of romantic plays and melodramas. In later life Mrs. Siddons traveled extensively in the British colonies, and achieved considerable popularity in Australia. She paid a final visit to the United States a year or two ago, but her appearance on the stage then ended in a disastrous failure.]

SLAIN FOR MONEY.

The Terrible Fate of a Man and His Wife in Pennsylvania.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 24.—The mining town of Nesquehoning, in Carbon county, was the scene of the wildest excitement Sunday when it became known that a terrible murder had been committed, the victims being Mrs. Casper Laboye and her husband. The former was instantly killed and the latter fatally injured. The perpetrators of the crime are three unknown Hungarians, who were arrested by a number of citizens while in the attempt to make their escape, and had it not been for the interference of the coal and iron police, all three would have been lynched. The prisoners were taken to Mauch Chunk and are now in jail awaiting a hearing. Robbery was the motive for the crime.

CHILDREN BURNED.

Five Little Ones Perish in Flames in Their Homes in Missouri.

Hamilton, Mo., Nov. 23.—Five children of Mr. and Mrs. Snyder Neal, living five miles north of the city, were burned to death Saturday night. The Neal dwelling was burned while the parents were attending a dance. The children who lost their lives are: Cullie, 13; Hattie, 11; Willie, 7; Clarence, 5; Julian 3. It is thought the fire was caused by an incendiary.

Strange Death of an Engineer.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 24.—W. A. Fox, Santa Fe railway engineer, on Monday died from a malady that baffled the skill of physicians. On November 4 Fox's foot "went to sleep," and from this strange disease his leg gradually wasted away. Physicians say the trouble was not rheumatism, and a consultation of medical men was held, but they cannot explain the strange fatality.

Bank Wrecker Sentenced.

Hebron, Neb., Nov. 23.—Capt. J. H. Stickle, for years a leader in politics in central Nebraska and president of the defunct Blue Valley bank of this place, was on Saturday night convicted of wrecking that institution and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary by Judge Hastings. The specific charge on which he was convicted was the embezzlement of $800 of the bank's funds.

Nature abhors an uncovered patch of ground. Therefore she has the weeds to carpet it if the farmer does not care.

THE POPULAR VOTE.

How the States Cast Their Ballots in the Last Election.

The Figures Show the Total Vote for the Three Leading Candidates for President — The Statistics Are Nearly Complete.

Totals	7,057,450	6,283,379	133,900

"The total vote cast 1896 (approximate), 13,579,638, including about 100,000 prohibition votes and 50,000 Bryan and Watson votes.

"This table shows the complete vote of all the states except three—Missouri, West Virginia and Texas—where the count has been delayed by contests. From most of the states the figures are official, the results being reported by the secretaries of states. New York's vote will not be canvassed officially by the state officers until December 15. The total prohibition vote cast will not exceed 100,000. It was highest in Pennsylvania—19,274. In the 77 counties of Texas thus far counted, Bryan and Watson received 66,732. The total middle-of-the-road populist vote will be about 100,000. The socialist vote was smaller than in 1892. In many states none were cast. In 1892 Cleveland received 5,556,918 votes, and Harrison 5,176,108, a total of 10,733,026; Cleveland over Harrison, 350,810."

BANKS ROBBED.

Burglars Raid Nebraska Institutions—Have Secured $30,000.

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 24.—Twenty-six banks in eastern and southeastern Nebraska have been burglarized with losses amounting to over $30,000, within the past two months. Officers representing different detective agencies, secret service men of the United States and railroad detectives have all been trying to locate the band of safe breakers, and now it is reasonably certain that at least four out of 20 men in the gang are in jail at Hebron, Neb.

CROSSED THE DARK RIVER.

Death of Milo B. Stevens, a Well-Known Pension Attorney.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 24.—Milo B. Stevens died at his residence, 578 Cedar avenue, Monday morning. The funeral will take place at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday from his late residence to Woodland cemetery. Mr. Stevens was one of the most prominent pension attorneys in the United States and did business under the firm name of Milo B. Stevens & Co., with offices in Cleveland, Washington, Detroit and Chicago.

MANY DROWNED.

Loss of Life Through Floods on the Island of Martinique.

Kingston, Nov. 24.—Advices received here from Fort Defrance, capital of the island of Martinque, say that heavy rains throughout the island have caused all the streams to overflow, and immense damage has been done. A number of persons in the interior, all of whom are believed to have been negroes, have been drowned.

Princeton Defeats Yale.

New York, Nov. 23.—On Manhattan field, Saturday, the contest for the American championship at football was won by the Princeton college team, the Yale forces being defeated by a score of 24 to 6. Fully 45,000 persons witnessed the game.

Philadelphia, Nov. 23.—For the third successive year, Pennsylvania this year, on Franklin field, Saturday, defeated Harvard at football. Pennsylvania won by a score of 8 to 6.

Shut Out.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 24.—Official returns show that 446,037 votes were cast in Wisconsin for president in the recent election, a gain of 64,456 in four years. McKinley's plurality is 104,570. Palmer's total vote was 4,455 and Levering's 7,466, both falling below the two per cent. requirement, thus preventing those parties from going on the ballot again except by petition. Matchett secured 1,270 votes and Bentley 336.

Mother and Son Asphyxiated.

Elgin, Ill., Nov. 24.—Patrick Meagher, a justice of the peace at Gilbers, a suburb of this city, and his mother were found dead in bed at their home Monday morning. Their deaths were caused by asphyxiation from coal gas. Meagher was last seen alive Saturday evening, and it is thought he and his mother were suffocated Saturday night.

Medicine Company—Dancing Party—Sacred Concert.

John Tuttle ate turkey at home yesterday.

Miss Minnie McAdam was home from Manchester Saturday.

Miss Grace Davis is home from Detroit for a few days' visit.

Mrs. David E Haggart visited Manchester friends last Friday.

Elmer Halladay came up from Tecumseh to see his brothers, Monday.

Wm. Thieme, of Adrian, was in town tuning pianos the first of the week.

L. K. Davis was a Britton visitor last Friday. He made the trip on his wheel.

Mrs H. R Hause visited her parents in Britton a greater part of last week.

The Misses Laura Clark and Nellie Kishpaugh visited Britton friends Friday.

Miss Alice McAdam entertained the Misses Keusch, of Brooklyn, over Sunday.

Miss Jessie Case, of Tecumseh, attended service at St. John's church last Sunday.

Miss Lettie Ward, of Chelsea, has been visiting her b other Burr and wife this week.

Sacred concert at town hall tomorrow night. It will be fine. See that you are there.

Alonzo Clark returned to Chicago Saturday to look after his business interests there.

A. B. Van De Mark has been having a serious time with a carbuncle on the back of his neck.

John Middlebrook ran over from Tecumseh and spent Sunday with his Clinton friends.

Arthur, the young son of Dr. and Mrs. Reeves, is having quite a serious time with tonsilitis.

James Jackson, of Tecumseh, visited his daughters, Mesdames Sutfin and Harlan, over Sunday.

Clarence Brown, of Grass Lake, was the guest of Miss Cora Witherell from Friday until Monday.

There will be a special meeting of the O. E. S. Wednesday evening December 2nd, for work.

Mrs. L. A. McConnel returned last Thursday from quite an extended visit with friends in Ohio.

Miss Lena Arnold, of Tecumseh, spent Saturday and Sunday with the Kirchgessner sisters.

H. D. Niblack and wife ate Thanksriving turkey with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fitzgerald, at Brooklin.

Dr. J. E. White has just completed his semi-annual office cleaning and his rooms look as slick as grease.

Winnie and Mae Waterhouse came over from Ypsilanti to spend Thanksgiving under the parental roof.

J. E. Woodward's condition continues much the same. Medical skill and good nursing seem to fail as restoratives.

S. W. Demuth is greatly improving the interior of his store, papering and painting. Mel Sutfin is the artist.

Mrs. Jennie Brown returned home Monday from a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kishpaugh, at Britton.

Leman Bailey's sister, who came from Caro several weeks ago for a visit with her relatives, has been quite seriously ill but is now improving.

Robert McClure and wife came up from Tecumseh the last of the week for a week's sojourn with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Middlebrook.

Mrs. Will H. Niblack, who for several weeks has been with her mother who has been very ill at Macon, but is now recovering, returned home Friday last.

Robert Crosby has disposed of nearly all of the tickets for his bicycle and it will not be long ere it changes owners and we will know who the fortunate individual is.

A medicine company arrived in Clinton Monday for a two weeks' stay. It comprises six persons. They will give entertainments at town hall nightly and of a varied character.

Gerald Brown, the boy soprano of Ann Arbor, who will assist the Episcopal ladies in their concert tomorrow evening, has a wonderful voice of great range, power, and exquisite tone. At the great June carnival of music at Ann Arbor, with a chorus of nearly 300 voices and an immense orchestra, with University hall packed to the doors, his voice soared above all like that of a bird. This musical prodigy will render several solos at the sacred concert tomorrow evening. This alone should fill the house.

Henry Lancaster had a very sick horse the first of the week. Dr. Waldron, the eminent vetenarian, was given the case, but his skill could not save him. It died Monday night.

Will Katner had quite a family gathering at his home Thanksgiving day. Among those from away were his mother and sister, of Bridgewater, Charles Bradley, Mrs. Tinker and two children, of Jackson.

Miss Lucy Kirk is at her father's, far from well we regret to say. Her nervous system is prostrated, caused no doubt by overwork. It is hoped that a change of scene, rest and quiet will restore her to her former self.

It was a very pleasant dancing party given by Winters & Gray at Bainbridge & VanTuyle's hall Wednesday evening. The attendance was large, company select, music fine—in fact nothing was wanting that goes to make up an elegant party.

Now the credit and honor of the country has been saved by the election of McKinley, confidence restored and prosperity assured, the Woolen Mill company paid the hands off in gold their last pay day and are now reducing their help. More were laid off this week. Prosperity seems to work peculiarly just now.

G. R. Gillespie is working quite a transformation in his office which, when completed, will give him as cozy and aed convenient quarters as can be found. His private, or rather consultation, room is carpeted and very neat. The dark room—for what purpose we cannot divine but presume it is essential in the legal profession—is a success, dark as midnight and his plain, every day office is o. k. Garland will be strictly in it.

TO BUY THE POPE A CITY.

Constantinople More Than Rome, Is Likely to Be Purchased.

It is suggested that the Roman Catholics of Christendom shall subscribe $1,000,000,000 to buy Rome and a near-by seaport for the pope, says Harper's Weekly. The belief is expressed that the Italian government might sell the property without serious detriment to its political integrity and that the money could be used to great advantage in relieving Italy of part of the burden of her public debt. It is not proposed to turn over the principal to the venders, but to place it in trust and to pay its annual proceeds into the Italian treasury as long as the pope remains undisturbed in the papal territory.

The plan is a very pretty one and there are those who think the money might be raised and that King Humbert's government would appreciate the advantages of such a bargain. But would Rome be the best purchase the pope could make with the money? Chicago would take him vastly cheaper and give him port privileges on Lake Michigan, but she could not engage to make him monarch of an American township at any price. But there is Constantinople, an excellent city, where popes have lived before, full of ready-made churches built by Christians and nearly ripe now for reconsecration. Constantinople seems liable to come into the market any day. If the pope could buy it of the sultan that would be a deal worth subscribing to and worth turning a page of history to record.

SCIENTIFIC REASON GIVEN.

Why the Eyes of a Painted Portrait Follow the Observer.

Wollaston's curious discovery was that by adding to each pair of eyes a nose directed to the right or the left, the eyes lose their front direction, and look to the right or left, according to the direction of the nose. By means of a flap representing the lower features in a different position, as Dr. Wollaston remarks, "a lost look of devout abstraction in an uplifted countenance of inquisitive archness in the leer of a younger face turned downward and obliquely toward the opposite side."

As by changing the direction of the lower features we change the direction of the eyes, says Notes and Queries, so by changing our position, the eye of the portrait apparently follows us. If a vertical line be drawn through the tip of the nose and half way between the eyes, there will be the same breadth of head, of cheek, of chin and of neck on each side of this middle line, and each iris will be in the middle of the whole eye. If we now move to one side, the apparent horizontal breadth of every part of the head and face will be diminished, but the parts on each side of the middle line will be diminished equally, and at any position, however oblique, there will be the same breadth of face on each side of the middle line, and the iris will be in the center of the whole of the eyeball, so that, being on a flat surface, the iris will be seen in front of the picture or obliquely.

CHICAGO HORSES AT LUNCHEON

Man's Faithful Servants Emulate Him in Taking a Hurried Meal Downtown.

Even the horses of this city take luncheon downtown. Every business man knows what this means, the hurried bite taken in the short hour about noon every day, when business is abandoned long enough to permit the destruction of a piece of pie or a sandwich. Everybody does it, so it is as fair for one as the other, says the Chicago Chronicle.

This same haste applies to the nag which pulls the cab or the heavy draft horses used as freighters. At the noon hour on any of the downtown streets the observant person can see these faithful beasts with nosebags depending from their heads quietly munching their oats or corn with every evidence of satisfaction.

It makes no difference to the horses that the passing throng sees them in the act of taking food. They are as callous on this subject as their masters, many of whom can be seen sitting on the wagon or adjacent sidewalk with tinpail open, eagerly destroying the luncheon which the wife packed in the morning. It is all in a lifetime, and the Chicago horse has learned that he must eat when he can, and not be too particular about it. Hence he lays his ears back and munches away with placid joy.

Queen's Domestic Correspondence.

One pleasing feature of the queen's busy life is the keeping up with her own hand of a correspondence with all her children and grandchildren, besides many other relatives and dear friends, such as, in the latter case, ex-Empress Eugenie. This correspondence is particularly large when she is, as at present, in retirement in her Highland home. Perhaps the most interesting letter her majesty ever penned was that written to the prince of Wales many years ago announcing his emancipation from parental authority and control, when, after warning him against flatterers, she stated that she would never intrude any advice upon him, although she would ever be ready to give it whenever he should think fit to seek it.

The international geographical congress in London a year ago declared that the greatest piece of geographical exploration remaining to be undertaken is that of the antarctic regions. Since then a number of small expeditions toward the south pole have been planned, but little has yet been accomplished, and Dr. Mill reminds English readers in Nature that, although 55 years have elapsed since Capt. Ross discovered the two giant volcanoes which he named Mounts Erebus and Terror, they have never again been seen, and no important additional facts have been learned about that mysterious part of the globe.

COUNTING OF THE VOTES.

In Recent Elections There Has Been Little Fraud in New York.

The counting of votes has been in the past more fruitful of trickery and falsification than any other part of the election process. In 1893 the canvassers in certain districts reduced the matter to its lowest terms by simply reporting a unanimous vote on their side, and then going out to fling up their hats for the rest of the night. In the subsequent election competent and irreproachable men supervised the canvass so strictly that the percentage of fraud was so small, if any existed, as never to be heard of. This watching, says a writer in Century, at the count not only prevented intentional lying, but saved accidental mistakes. In one case the board of inspectors confessed they did not know how to count the votes, and submitted entirely to the guidance of a well-informed watcher.

The counting is done in public, and is often an interesting sight. Every organization and each candidate may send a representative to observe it, though nobody but the inspectors is permitted to touch the ballots. The straight tickets are first counted in tens by four men in succession, and a tally is kept by at least two assistants. Each name is credited with as many votes as there are tickets for his side. Then one inspector reads off of those tickets which are "split," or have pasters attached, or upon which names have been erased or new names written, and each candidate is credited with a vote every time his name appears. When this is finished the most prominent office is taken up, and the sum of the votes for each candidate is ascertained.

HE VOWED VENGEANCE.

And Got It with a Will—Lord Reginald's Path.

"He struc-c-c-k me!"

The villain strode up and down the stage cycle path and ground his teeth with rage, says the New York World.

"He struc-c-c-c-k Cecil Legree!"

In a very ecstasy of fury the villain stamped his feet and tore his hair.

"He struck Cecil Legree! No man ever did that and lived to tell the tale. And as for the girl—ah, me proud beauty, you shall yet feel the vengeance of a Legree!"

What venom, what hatred there was in the bitter words.

Even the pale moon wobbled in the canvas heavens.

"I have the papers; ha, ha, ha! I'll bide me time, and then, then I'll cross his path again!"

Raising his clenched hand the villain served notice upon high heaven and the property moon that some day he would puncture proud Lord Reginald's tire.

"I'll cross his path again! I'll cross his path again!" he repeated.

A whirr on the air of the stilly night, an ominous grinding upon the theatrical macadam, a pneumatic "biff" like the "biff" of a pile-driver, a bent, battered shape crashing into a pale-green tree trunk with a dull, sickening thud and then silence—silence!

It was even so.

He had crossed Lord Reginald's cycle path again!

Outlook

Published Every Saturday.

13 ASTOR PLACE NEW YORK

The Outlook will be in 1897, as it has been during each of its twenty-seven years, a history of our own times. In its various editorial departments The Outlook gives a compact review of the world's progress; it follows with care all the important philanthropic and industrial movements of the day, has a complete department of religious news; devotes much space to the interests of the home, reviews current literature; furnishes cheerful table talk about men and things; and, in short, aims to give fresh information, original observation and reasonable entertainment.

Beginning with the fifty-fifth volume, the paper will assume the regular magazine size which will add greatly to its convenience and attractiveness. The Outlook is published every Saturday—fifty-two issues a year. The first issue in each month is an illustrated Magazine Number, containing about twice as many pages as the ordinary issues, together with a large number of pictures.

The price of The Outlook is three dollars a year in advance, or less than a cent a day.

THE INDEPENDENT.

NEW YORK.

THE INDEPENDENT for 49 years has been the leading religious-literary newspaper of the world.

It has new, distinctive and attractive features, making it a worthy the patronage of all thinking, intelligent people.

FAMILY NEWSPAPER

Its name indicates its character. It is INDEPENDENT. Religiously it is undenominational. Politically, it maintains the honor of the country, the integrity of our currency, the supremacy of law, and the rights of rich and poor alike.

For Intelligent People Everywhere

It provides instruction, entertainment and amusement for all the members of intelligent households.

Important Features

It has aside from its literary features special departments edited by the best writers, thinkers and specialists, some of them of surpassing interest to a comparative few, others important and valuable intellectually and financially to nearly everybody. These departments are Science, Music, Fine Arts, Sanitary, Missions, Religious Intelligence, Biblical Research, Sunday School, Financial, Insurance, Work Indoors and Out, Puzzles, Book Reviews and Literary Notes.

Survey of the World

Every week the notable events occurring the world over are placed clearly before the reader. No one person has time to read all of the current publications, foreign and domestic; but every one wants to know the events happening in the whole world, which people think about and talk about. The Survey of the World gives each week the gist of important events for the current week. It is really one of the most valuable and important features of any periodical.
